BIOGRAPHIES OF GENERAL OFFICERS.

NEWELL BERTRAM WOODWORTH,

PRESIDENT GENERAL.

NEWELL B. WOODWORTH, of Syracuse, N. Y., elected President General at the Congress held in Portland, Ore., July 20, 1915, was born at Rome, N. Y., April 12, 1860, son of Andrews Joslyn and Mary Bertram Woodworth, his mother being one of the charter members of the Daughters of the American Revolution. His paternal and maternal ancestry runs without break directly back to the Puritan immigration of 1630 to Massachusetts.

Mr. Woodworth's eligibility to the Society is derived from the following ancestors: As fifth in descent from Capt. Ephraim and Anna Moore Woodworth, of Stillwater, N. Y., who removed there in 1760 from Salisbury, Conn. Captain Woodworth commanded a company in the Thirteenth Regiment Albany County Militia and was engaged at the battle of Saratoga. During the battle his house was the headquarters of General Gates. He was fourth in descent from Walter Woodworth, of Scituate, Mass., 1635.

As fourth in descent from Ephraim and Delight Rowley Woodworth, who was enrolled in his father's company. As fifth in descent from Capt. Abijah and Kezia Farrar Joslyn, of Ashburnham, Mass. He was fourth in descent from Thomas Joslyn, of Sudbury, Mass., 1635, who was a direct descendant of Gilbertus Jocelinus, whose name as one of the soldiers of William the Conqueror is inscribed on the Roll of Battle Abbey. Captain Joslyn was a member of the Committee of Correspondence in 1774, as well as the head of the local military company.

As sixth in descent from Capt. John and Lucy Wilder Joslyn, of Leominster, Mass. He commanded a company in Col. John Whitcomb's regiment and was out at the "Lexington Alarm," and also, in 1777, in the Burgoyne campaign, when the Leominster soldiers joined Col. Seth Warner at Manchester, Vt.

As fifth in descent from Ensign Hezekiah and Sarah Garfield Corey, of New Ipswich, N. H. At the "Lexington Alarm" he was ensign in the company of Capt. Thomas Heard, that marched from New Ipswich before daylight.

As fourth in descent from Abel and Mary Thompson Richardson, of Woburn, Mass., who was fifth in descent from Samuel Richardson, one of the seven founders of Woburn in 1640. He responded to the call at Lexington and Concord and later to Bunker Hill, where he was wounded. During the succeeding years of the Revolution he was active as a town officer in forwarding supplies to the armies.

As sixth in descent from Samuel and Rebecca Hayward Brackett, of Braintree, Mass., who was third in descent from Capt. Richard Brackett, one of the founders of Braintree and an original member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston.

As third in descent from Asa and Lydia Richardson Wilkins, of Jaffrey, N. H., who was a member of Capt. Daniel Rand's Company, in the regiment of Col. Daniel Moore, that marched from New Hampshire, on September 27, 1777, to reinforce General Gates at Stillwater, N. Y. These troops were at the battle of Saratoga and the subsequent surrender of Burgoyne.

Soon after the birth of Mr. Woodworth his parents removed to Syracuse, which city has since been his home. He prepared for college at the Columbia Grammar School of New York and entered Columbia University in 1878. He graduated, in 1882, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Entering the law school and the postgraduate course in political science, he graduated, in 1885, with the degree of Master of Arts and was admitted to the New York bar the same year. From 1885 to 1890 he was an assistant in the office of the corporation counsel of New York. During this time he was admitted as a member of the New Jersey bar and appointed a master in chancery. Since 1891 he has been a practitioner in Syracuse.

He became a member of the Sons of the American Revolution July 14, 1896, as a charter member of the Syracuse Chapter of the Empire State Society. For the past eleven years he has been its President. He has also served as Vice-President of the State Society and for some years as a member of the Board of Managers. At the Congress in Faneuil Hall, Boston, May 21, 1912, he was elected Vice-President General. The following year he served upon the National Committee, having in charge the arrangements for the Syracuse Congress. During the last Society year he was a member of the National Executive Committee, taking particular interest in the work pertaining to the education and naturalization of aliens. Upon his initiation the civic bodies of Syracuse have successfully pushed this work under the slogan of "Make Syracuse an English-speaking city."

Mr. Woodworth is a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, the St. Nicholas Society of New York, and the Psi Upsilon and University clubs of New York. He is an officer in various public and charitable institutions of his home city, as well as a member of its various civic and social clubs. He has for some years been actively interested in patriotic, philanthropic, and historical matters.

HENRY F. PUNDERSON,

VICE-PRESIDENT GENERAL.

HENRY FULLER PUNDERSON, of Springfield, Mass., elected Vice-President General at the Portland Congress, was born at New Haven, Conn., November 7, 1871. John Punderson, one of the "Seven Pillars" of the New Haven Colony at the settlement in 1638, was the first immigrant on his father's side, while on his mother's the descent is traced to Edward Fuller and five other passengers on the Mayflower, at Plymouth, 1620.

Brev. Brig. Gen. Heman Swift, of Connecticut, is the ancestor from whom he gains eligibility to membership in the Society.

Mr. Punderson is a retired officer of the National Guard and served in the war with Spain. He joined the Massachusetts Society in 1908 and is a member of the Board of Managers. He has held various offices in the George Washington Chapter in Springfield and was the originator and Chief Marshal of the Pilgrimage in 1914 of the National Society over the route taken by Washington in 1775 in going from Philadelphia to Cambridge to take command of the Continental forces.

LIEUT. COL. MARSHALL WILLIAM WOOD, U. S. ARMY (RETIRED),

VICE-PRESIDENT GENERAL.

MARSHALL WILLIAM WOOD, Lieutenant Colonel, U. S. Army (retired), of Boise, Idaho, elected Vice-President General at the Syracuse Congress and re-elected at Portland, was born in Watertown, N. Y., June 3, 1846, son of Benjamin and Eunice Augusta (Greenleaf) Wood. He was educated in village schools and high schools, at Belleville Union Academy, New York, and at Rush Medical College, Chicago, class of 1873. Received the degree of A. M., Hon., at Bowdoin College, 1894. Was an enlisted man in the Civil War, where he was twice wounded. First Lieutenant, U. S. A., 1875; Captain, June, 1880; Major, June, 1894; Lieutenant Colonel, April, 1904. He was three times officially commended for distinguished services.

His Revolutionary ancestors were: Joseph Marshall (mother's mother's father), an enlisted man, and Noah Hopkins (father's paternal grandmother's father), who was first Lieutenant Sixth Dutchess County New York Militia.

He was President of the Idaho State Medical Society, 1896-1897; Post Commander, G. A. R., 1867; Department Commander, G. A. R., 1911-1912; Military Order of the Loyal Legion, 1894; Society of the War of 1812, 1892; Sons of the American Revolution, 1893 (No. 6405). Has been President of the Idaho Society, S. A. R., since its organization, February, 1909; Society of Colonial Wars, 1893 (No. 120), Governor in 1915.

In Masonry was Worshipful Master in 1891, 1892, and 1893. Is Knight Templar. In Scottish Rite was elected to 33d degree October, 1882; received the degree January, 1883. Is a Shriner and Past Potentate of El Korah Temple. Has been a member of several clubs and scientific and learned societies.

Colonel Wood is much interested in genealogy, and has traced his ancestry to many of the early settlers of New England.

SAMUEL JUDD HOLMES, M. D.,

VICE-PRESIDENT GENERAL.

SAMUEL JUDD HOLMES, elected Vice-President General at the Portland Congress, July 19-20, 1915, was born in Palmyra, Wisconsin, October 12, 1854, son of Miles Holmes, and his wife, Nancy Sophia (Cowles) Holmes, both of Connecticut. He is a charter member of the Washington State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution as a lineal descendant of Samuel Judd, Captain of the Fifth Company, or "Train Band," Twenty-seventh Connecticut State Regiment, and Josiah Cowles, a member of the "Committee for the Relief of the Boston Sufferers," from the Port Bill, etc. He was prepared for the University of Wisconsin at a public school and at Lake Forest Academy, Illinois; graduated from Rush Medical College, Chicago, class of 1876, and the New York Medical University, class of 1877; served as medical intern in the Charity Hospital, New York, for a year and a half, going then to Berlin and Heidelberg, Germany, and Vienna, Austria, for post-graduate work for a year and a half. Upon his return he located for medical practice in Chicago. He was elected adjunct professor of pathological anatomy and histology at Rush Medical College in 1883 and at the Woman's Medical College of Chicago (same branch) in 1880. He continued practice and medical teaching in Chicago until 1888, when he sought a milder climate at Seattle, Washington, where he has practiced his profession continuously since.

He was a member of the Seattle Board of Health for six years (twice its president); city bacteriologist (Seattle) for three years, establishing the first laboratory in that city; president of the King County Medical Society (1890); president of the Washington Medical Library Association for seven years (still holding that office); has been a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons of the U. S. Bureau of Pensions for sixteen years; member of city hospital medical staff (five years).

He has been a member of the Board of Managers of Washington State Society, S. A. R., for fourteen years; Vice-President in 1907 and again in 1908, and President in 1914; President of Seattle Chapter, 1897 and 1907. He was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the National Society in 1914 and re-elected in 1915. He was elected Vice-President General in 1915.

Besides being greatly interested in patriotic work, Dr. Holmes is a member of the King County Medical Society, Washington State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, Washington Medical Library Association, "Physicians' Study Club," and the University Club. He has two sons, one a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and the second studying architecture in that institution.

WILLIAM KELLOGG BOARDMAN,

VICE-PRESIDENT GENERAL.

WILLIAM KELLOGG BOARDMAN, of Nashville, Tenn., elected Vice-President General at the Syracuse Congress May 19, 1914, and re-elected at the Portland Congress, was born in Shelton, Fairfield County, Conn., on November 5, 1870, the son of Capt. Daniel W. and Mary (Young) Boardman.

He became a member of the Kentucky Society in 1909, and a few months later was elected its Secretary.

After moving to Tennessee he was elected Secretary of the Tennessee Society, and holds that office at the present time.

Mr. Boardman entered the service of the Bell Telephone interests in 1888, and has filled various positions in that organization, now being Commercial Superintendent for the State of Tennessee.

Mr. Boardman is a member of commercial organizations in several cities in Tennessee—a member of the Cumberland and Country Clubs at Knoxville, of the Commercial Club, the Hermitage Club, and Nashville Golf and Country Club at Nashville, and of the Filson Club at Louisville, Ky.

SAMUEL CULVER PARK,

VICE-PRESIDENT GENERAL.

SAMUEL CULVER PARK, of Salt Lake City, elected Vice-President General at the Portland Congress, was born at Cheyenne, Wyoming, November 16, 1869, son of Boyd and Jane (Culver) Park. He became a member of the Utah Society March 19, 1909, as great-great-grandson of Samuel Culver, who served as Sergeant, and great-great-grandson of Daniel Culver, a Captain in Col. James Mead's Vermont Regiment; also great-great-grandson of Andrew Clark, private in Massachusetts Militia, and of William Potter, private in the Connecticut Militia. Mr. Park entered the employ of the Bank of Commerce, Salt Lake City, in 1894, and became cashier; vice-president and manager of Boyd Park (Inc.), manufacturing wholesale jewelers; served in Utah National Guard as private to Brigadier General, retiring December 31, 1908; member Utah State Senate, 1903-1907; member of Board of Education of Salt Lake City, 1909-1912 (resigned); Mayor of Salt Lake City January 1, 1912. He is a life member of Alumni Association of University of Michigan, Bachelor of Arts of that university, 1911, as of 1891; a thirty-second degree Mason, and member of the University Club of Salt Lake City.

A. HOWARD CLARK,

SECRETARY GENERAL AND REGISTRAR GENERAL.

A. HOWARD CLARK became a member of the District of Columbia Society at its organization, was elected Assistant Registrar May 5, 1890, and was one of its Secretaries from 1891 to 1893. He was Secretary General of the National Society in 1892, and has been Registrar General since 1893. Since 1904 he has also served as Secretary General.

He was born in Boston April 13, 1850. His ancestors in the Revolution were Enoch Clark, Enoch Hall, Capt. Thomas Jenner Carnes, and Maj. Edward Carnes, of the Massachusetts Militia and Continental Army.

Mr. Clark was in the class of 1881 at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., and that university gave him the honorary degree of Master of Arts in 1906.

He engaged in commercial business in New York city from 1867 to 1875; in 1879 was assistant on the United States Fish Commission and later expert on the Tenth Census. Since 1881 he has been connected with the Smithsonian Institution as Curator of the Division of History in the National Museum and as editor of the publications of the Institution. In 1883 he served on the Executive Staff of the United States Commission at the International Fisheries Exposition in London, and was United States Expert Commissioner to the Paris Exposition of 1889, by appointment of President Cleveland, when he was honored by order of President Carnot with the decoration of Officier du Mérite Agricole. He was a member of the International Geographical Congress at Paris in 1889.

He is Herald of the Baronial Order of Runnymede (descendants of sureties of the Magna Charta), Archivist General of the National Society of Americans of Royal Descent, member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants, the Society of Colonial Wars, corresponding member of the California Genealogical Society; from 1889 to 1908 was Secretary, and is now Curator, of the American Historical Association.

JOHN HARRIS BURROUGHS,

TREASURER GENERAL.

JOHN HARRIS BURROUGHS was born at Trenton, N. J., April 17, 1849, son of Charles Burroughs, who served as mayor of Trenton for fifteen consecutive years—from 1832 until 1847—who was also judge of the Court of Common Pleas for Mercer County, N. J., for sixteen years. John Burroughs, the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was active in the Revolutionary War from the latter part of 1776 until the surrender of Cornwallis at the battle of Yorktown, in 1781. Mr. Burroughs is descended from John Burroughs, who settled in Newtown, Long Island, in 1653, with other English colonists. In the capacity of Treasurer, Vice-President, and President, he has served the Union League Club, Brooklyn, N. Y., in which city he has resided since 1865. He was President of the Empire State Society in 1911. He has associated with him his son, Harris S. Burroughs, dealing in commercial paper and bank stocks in New York city, in which business Mr. Burroughs has been engaged since 1874.

He was elected Treasurer General at the Baltimore Congress, in 1909, and re-elected at the Toledo, Louisville, Boston, Chicago, Syracuse, and Portland Congresses.

DAVID L. PIERSON,

HISTORIAN GENERAL.

DAVID LAWRENCE PIERSON, elected Historian General at the Toledo Congress and re-elected at each subsequent Congress, was born at Orange, N. J., February 3, 1865, son of Samuel Dodd Pierson and Louisa Mann. He is a direct descendant of Thomas Pierson, brother of the Rév. Abraham Pierson, who came to the banks of the Passaic River and settled the town of Newark, in 1666, with a company of Connecticut people, who made the last stand for Church and State one and inseparable in the Colonies.

His ancestor from whom he claims membership in the Sons of the American Revolution is Caleb Pierson, a private in the Second New Jersey Rifle Corps.

Mr. Pierson is chairman of the local History Committee of the New England Society, Orange; ex-President of the Orange Chapter, S. A. R.; Historian of Battery A (N. G. N. J.) Veteran Association; honorary member of Uzal Dodd Post, G. A. R., and other veteran associations; member of Hope Lodge, F. A. A. M. He is also President of the Old Burying Ground Association of Orange, and was instrumental in having the cemetery reclaimed and beautified after sixty years of neglect. He also formed the Revolutionary Monument Association, which resulted in the placing of the Dispatch Rider statue in the cemetery to the memory of the men and women who assisted in establishing American independence.

He is also interested in many patriotic enterprises in his community, and it was through his efforts that Flag Day was publicly observed in the community; and has also started a movement for the placing of flag-poles in the public parks in Essex County, N. J.

REV. RICHARD LIGHTBURNE McCREADY,

CHAPLAIN GENERAL.

REV. RICHARD LIGHTBURNE McCREADY, who was unanimously elected Chaplain General at the Portland, Oregon, Congress, was born (November 22, 1862) and educated in Louisville, Ky., the home of George Rogers Clark, who with his little force of men from the Falls of the Ohio added such vast and rich domains to the territory of the United States. Mr. McCreedy's first ministerial charge was the old Church of the Ascension at Frankfort, Ky., the capital of the State, where he was ordained to the priesthood of the Episcopal Church. From Frankfort he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, as rector of Grace Church, of that city, and thence removed ten years ago to Louisville, the city of his birth, and became rector of St. Mark's Church, which charge he now holds. He has filled various offices, both within the church and without. He has been at times secretary and also archdeacon of the Diocese of Lexington (Ky.), deputy to the General Convention of the Episcopal Church (in the United States), several times chaplain of the Kentucky Legislature, and is at present Chaplain of the Kentucky Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. He was chosen to deliver the annual sermon at the Congress held in Louisville in April, 1911, and also as one of the local speakers at the Perry Centennial Celebration in Louisville, 1913, at which the orator-in-chief was the Hon. Champ Clark, Speaker of the National House of Representatives.

Through his mother's line Mr. McCready has a double Revolutionary ancestry. One great-great-grandfather was Richard Lightburne, a Lieutenant in the Virginia State Navy, being of the second generation of the family in America, his father, Stafford Lightburne, having come from England to Virginia and made his home in Caroline County. Another great-great-grandparent was William Buckner, a Captain in the Continental Army, who married Sarah Thomas, whose grandparents, Philip Pendleton and his wife, Isabella Hart, had come to Virginia from England in 1674.

Joslin, of Rhode Island; John Paul Earnest, of Washington, District of Columbia; A. S. Hubbard, of California, and all such other persons as may from time to time be associated with them, and their successors, are hereby constituted a body corporate and politic, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, by the name of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

SEC. 2. That the purposes and objects of said corporation are declared to be patriotic, historical, and educational, and shall include those intended or designed to perpetuate the memory of the men who, by their services or sacrifices during the war of the American Revolution, achieved the independence of the American people; to unite and promote fellowship among their descendants; to inspire them and the community at large with a more profound reverence for the principles of the government founded by our forefathers; to encourage historical research in relation to the American Revolution; to acquire and preserve the records of the individual services of the patriots of the war, as well as documents, relics, and landmarks; to mark the scenes of the Revolution by appropriate memorials; to celebrate the anniversaries of the prominent events of the war and of the Revolutionary period; to foster true patriotism; to maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom, and to carry out the purposes expressed in the preamble to the Constitution of our country and the injunctions of Washington in his farewell address to the American people.

SEC. 3. That said corporation shall have power to receive, purchase, hold, sell, and convey real and personal estate, so far only as may be necessary or convenient for its lawful purposes, to an amount not exceeding at any one time in the aggregate five hundred thousand dollars; to sue and be sued, complain and defend in any court; to adopt a common seal, and to alter the same at pleasure; to make and adopt a constitution, by-laws, rules, and regulations for admission, government, suspension, and expulsion of its members, and from time to time to alter and repeal such constitution, by-laws, rules, and regulations, and to adopt others in their places; to provide for the election of its officers and to define their duties; to provide for State Societies or Chapters with rules for their conduct, and to regulate and provide for the management, safe-keeping, and protection of its property and funds: Provided always, That such constitution, by-laws, rules, and regulations be not inconsistent with the laws of the United States or any of the States thereof.

SEC. 4. That the property and affairs of said corporation shall be managed by not more than sixty nor less than forty trustees, who shall be elected annually at such time as shall be fixed in the by-laws, and at least one trustee shall be elected annually from a list of nominees to be made by each of the State Societies and submitted to this Society at least thirty days before the annual meeting, in accordance with general provisions regulating such nominations as may be adopted by this Society.

SEC. 5. That the first meeting of this corporation shall be held on a call issued by any fifteen of the above-named corporators by a written notice signed by them, stating the time and place of meeting, addressed to each of the corporators personally named herein and deposited in the post-office at least five days before the day of meeting.

SEC. 6. That this charter shall take effect upon its being accepted by a majority vote of the corporators named herein who shall be present at said meeting, or at any other meetings specially called for that purpose; and notice of such acceptance shall be given by said corporation by causing a certificate to that effect signed by its President and Secretary to be filed in the office of the Secretary of State.

SEC. 7. That Congress reserves the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act.

J. G. CANNON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
CHAS. W. FAIRBANKS,
Vice-President of the United States and President of the Senate.

Revolution

(Adopted at the Denver Congress, June 3, 1907; amended at Toledo Congress, May 2, 1910, and at Louisville Congress, May 2, 1911.)

ARTICLE I.—NAME.

The name of this organization shall be "The National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution."

ARTICLE II.—PURPOSES AND OBJECTS.

The purposes and objects of this Society are declared to be patriotic, historical, and educational, and shall include those intended or designed to perpetuate the memory of the men who, by their services or sacrifices during the war of the American Revolution, achieved the independence of the American people; to unite and promote fellowship among their descendants; to inspire them and the community at large with a more profound reverence for the principles of the government founded by our forefathers; to encourage historical research in relation to the American Revolution; to acquire and preserve the records of the individual services of the patriots of the war, as well as documents, relics, and landmarks; to mark the scenes of the Revolution by appropriate memorials; to celebrate the anniversaries of the prominent events of the war and of the Revolutionary period; to foster true patriotism; to maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom, and to carry out the purposes expressed in the preamble of the Constitution of our country and the injunctions of Washington in his farewell address to the American people.

ARTICLE III.—MEMBERSHIP.

SECTION I. Any man shall be eligible to membership in the Society who, being of the age of twenty-one years or over, and a citizen of good repute in the community, is the lineal descendant of an ancestor who was at all times unflinching in his loyalty to, and rendered active service in, the cause of American Independence, either as an officer, soldier, seaman, marine, militiaman, or minute man, in the armed forces of the Continental Congress, or of any one of the several Colonies or States, or as a signer of the Declaration of Independence; or as a member of a Committee of Safety or Correspondence; or as a member of any Continental, Provincial, or Colonial Congress or Legislature; or as a recognized patriot who performed actual service by overt acts of resistance to the authority of Great Britain.

SECTION 2. No one shall be entitled to membership in any State Society who has previously been a member of any other State Society and dropped for the non-payment of dues, until the indebtedness of such individual to the first Society shall have been adjusted.

SECTION 3. Applications for membership shall be made to any State Society, in duplicate, upon blank forms prescribed by the Board of Trustees, and shall in each case set forth the name, occupation, and residence of the applicant, line of descent, and the name, residence, and services of his ancestor or ancestors in the Revolution, from whom he derives eligibility.

The applicant shall make oath that the statements of his application are true, to the best of his knowledge and belief.

Upon the approval of an application by the State Society to which it is made, one copy shall be transmitted to the Registrar General of the National Society, who shall examine further the eligibility of the applicant. If satisfied that the member is not eligible, he shall return the application for correction.

Until the State Society shall satisfy the Registrar General of the eligibility of such applicant, his name shall not be placed on the roll of membership.

SECTION 4. The official designation of the members of The National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution shall be "Compatriots."

ARTICLE IV.—NATIONAL AND STATE SOCIETIES.

SECTION 1. The National Society shall embrace all the members of the State Societies of the Sons of the American Revolution now existing or which may hereafter be established under this Constitution.

SECTION 2. Whenever in any State or Territory in which a State Society does not exist, or in which a State Society has become inactive, or failed for two years to pay its annual dues to the National Society, fifteen or more persons duly qualified for membership in this Society may associate themselves as a State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and organize in accordance with this Constitution, they may be admitted by the Board of Trustees to the National Society as "The — Society of the Sons of the American Revolution," and shall thereafter have exclusive local jurisdiction in the State or Territory or in the District in which they are organized, subject to the provisions of this Constitution, but this provision shall not be construed so as to exclude the admission of candidates residing in other States.

SECTION 3. Each State Society shall judge of the qualifications of its members and of those proposed for membership, subject to the provisions of this Constitution, and shall regulate all matters pertaining to its own affairs. It shall have authority to establish local Chapters within its own jurisdiction, and to endow the Chapters with such power as it may deem proper, not inconsistent with the charter of the National Society or with this Constitution. It shall have authority, after due notice and impartial trial, to expel any member who, by conduct unbecoming a gentleman, shall render himself unworthy to remain a member of the Society.

SECTION 4. Each State Society shall submit to the Annual Congress of the National Society a report, setting forth by name the additions, transfers and deaths, and any other changes in the membership, and the progress of the State Society during the preceding year, and making such suggestions as it shall deem proper for the promotion of the objects of the National Society.

SECTION 5. Whenever a member in good standing in his Society shall change his residence from the jurisdiction of the State Society of which he is a member to that of another, he shall be entitled, if he so elects, to a certificate of honorable demission from his own State Society, in order that he may be transferred to the State Society to whose jurisdiction he shall have changed his residence: Provided, That his membership shall continue in the former until he shall have been elected a member of the latter.

Each State Society shall, however, retain full control of the admission of members by transfer.

SECTION 6. Whenever the word "State" occurs in this Constitution, it shall be held to include within its meaning the District of Columbia and the Territories of the United States.

SECTION 7. A Society may be formed in any foreign country by fifteen or more persons who are eligible to membership under this Constitution, which shall bear the same relation to the national organization as the State Society, subject to the provisions of this Constitution.

ARTICLE V.—OFFICERS AND TRUSTEES.

SECTION 1. The General Officers of the National Society shall be a President General, five Vice-Presidents General, the order of seniority among whom shall be determined by lot at the time of their election, a Secretary General, Treasurer General, Registrar General, Historian General, and Chaplain General, who shall be elected by ballot by a vote of a majority of the members present and entitled to vote at the annual meeting of the Congress of the National Society, and shall hold office for one year and until their successors shall be elected.

SECTION 2. The General Officers provided for in section 1, together with one member from each State Society, shall constitute the Board of Trustees of the National Society. Such Trustees from each of the several State Societies shall be elected annually at the Congress of the National Society, upon the nomination, or from a list of nominees, to be made by each of the State Societies and submitted to the National Society by the filing thereof with the Secretary of the National Society at least thirty days before the meeting of the Annual Congress of the National Society. And in the event that any one or more of the State Societies shall omit or neglect to make such nominations or submit said list of nominees, by the time herein required, then the President of the State Society so in default shall, virtute officii, be chosen as and become the representative of his State Society upon said Board.

SECTION 3. The Board of Trustees shall have charge of, and be charged with the care and custody of, all property belonging to the National Society, and to that end shall be vested with the powers conferred by section 3 of the Act of Incorporation of the National Society: Provided, however, That it shall not have the power to sell, convey, or in anywise encumber any real estate belonging to the Society without the assent of three-fourths of the members of said Board. The Board of Trustees shall also have authority to adopt and promulgate the By-Laws of the National Society, to prescribe the duties of the General Officers, to provide the seal, to designate and make regulations for the issue of the insignia, and to transact the general business of the National Society during the intervals between the sessions of the Congress.

Meetings of the Board of Trustees may be held at the call of the President General, or in case of his absence or inability, at the call of the Senior Vice-President General, certified by the Secretary General. Meetings shall be called at the request of seven members. At such meetings seven shall constitute a quorum.

SECTION 4. An executive committee of seven, consisting of the President General as chairman, and six members to be nominated by him and approved by the Board of Trustees, shall, in the interim between the meetings of the Board, transact such business as may be delegated to it by a Congress of the Society or the Board of Trustees.

ARTICLE VI.—DUES.

Each State Society shall pay annually to the Treasurer General, to defray the expenses of the National Society, fifty cents for each active member thereof, unless intermitted by the National Congress.

All such dues shall be paid on or before the first day of April in each year for the ensuing year, in order to secure representation in the Congress of the National Society.

ARTICLE VII.—MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

SECTION 1. The Annual Congress of the National Society for the election of the General Officers and for the transaction of business shall be held on the third Monday of May in each year. The place of such meeting shall be designated by the Board of Trustees.

SECTION 2. Special meetings of the Congress may be called by the President General, and shall be called by him when directed so to do by the Board of Trustees, or whenever requested in writing so to do by at least five State Societies, on giving thirty days' notice, specifying the time and place of such meeting and the business to be transacted.

SECTION 3. The following shall be members of all such annual or special meetings of the Congress, and shall be entitled to vote therein:

(1) All the General Officers and the ex-Presidents General of the National Society.

(2) The members of the Board of Trustees and the President or Senior Vice-President of each State Society.

(3) One delegate at large from each State Society.

(4) One delegate from every fifty members of the Society within a State and for a fraction of twenty-five or over.

SECTION 4. After the adjournment of the Eighteenth Annual Congress of this Society, State Societies shall be represented at meetings of the National Society only by members of their own State Society, either duly elected, or who in the absence of regularly elected delegates, may be chosen by the regularly elected attending delegates of such State Society from the members of such State Society who may be present at any meeting of the National Society.

ARTICLE VIII.—PERMANENT FUND.

SECTION 1. There shall be created and maintained a Permanent Fund of the Society, the income or interest from which shall be covered into the general treasury of the Society and available for the general purposes of the Society, but the principal of which shall be maintained intact, and shall only be used or diminished upon the unanimous recommendation of the Executive Committee, approved by the Board of Trustees, and ratified by a four-fifths vote of the delegates present at the annual or special Congress to which such recommendation of the Executive Committee shall be reported.

SECTION 2. The Permanent Fund shall be composed of all legacies or donations to the Society, where no other application of the funds is designated by the testator or donor, all commissions received from the sales of badges, rosettes and ribbon, and such sum or sums as may from time to time by the Executive Committee be transferred to such fund from the general funds of the Society.

SECTION 3. The permanent fund shall be invested in securities authorized to be held by Savings Banks in Massachusetts, Connecticut, or New York, and any premium paid in purchasing such securities shall be repaid from the first income received.

ARTICLE IX.—AMENDMENTS.

This Constitution may be altered or amended at any meeting of the Congress of the National Society: Provided, That sixty days' notice of the proposed alterations or amendments, which shall first have been recommended by a State Society, or by a prior Congress, or by the Board of Trustees, or by the Executive Committee of the National Society, shall be sent by the Secretary General to the President of each State Society.

A vote of two-thirds of those present shall be necessary to their adoption.

ARTICLE X.

This Constitution shall take effect upon its adoption.

BY-LAWS
OF
The National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution

*(Adopted at Denver Congress, June 3, 1907; amended at Boston Congress, May 20-22, 1912, and at Portland Congress,
July 20, 1915.)*

ARTICLE I.—ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

All nominations of General Officers shall be made from the floor, and the election shall be by ballot. A majority shall elect. The nominations may be acted upon directly or may be referred to a committee to examine and report.

ARTICLE II.—OFFICERS.

The duties of the General Officers shall be such as usually appertain to their offices, and they shall have such other duties as are hereinafter imposed or shall be delegated to them by an annual Congress or by the Board of Trustees.

They shall report at the annual meeting, and at such other times as they may be required to do so by the Board of Trustees.

ARTICLE III.—PRESIDENT GENERAL.

SECTION 1. The President General, in addition to his general duties, shall be ex officio chairman of the Board of Trustees, and of the Executive Committee, and a member of every other committee.

SECTION 2. He shall appoint the following committees:

- Committee on Auditing and Finance.
- Committee on Credentials.
- Committee on Resolutions.
- Memorial Committee.
- Committee on Organization.
- Committee on Education.

The duties of the above committees shall be such as usually pertain to committees of like character. He may also appoint such other committees as in his judgment may be deemed necessary or advisable.

ARTICLE IV.—VICE-PRESIDENTS GENERAL.

SECTION 1. In the absence of the President General, the Senior Vice-President General present shall preside at the Annual Meeting.

SECTION 2. In the prolonged absence or inability to act of the President General, the executive authority shall be vested in the Vice-Presidents General in order of precedence.

ARTICLE V.—SECRETARY GENERAL.

The Secretary General, in addition to his general duties, shall have charge of the seal, and give due notice of all meetings of the National Society or Board of Trustees. He shall give due notice to all General Officers and State Societies of all votes, orders, and proceedings affecting or appertaining to their duties. He shall distribute all pamphlets, circulars, rosettes, and supplies, as directed by the Board of Trustees.

ARTICLE VI.—TREASURER GENERAL.

SECTION 1. The Treasurer General shall collect and receive the funds and securities of the National Society. He shall deposit the same to the credit of the "Society of the Sons of the American Revolution," and shall draw them thence for the use of the National Society, as directed by it or by the Board of Trustees, upon the order of the President General, countersigned by the Secretary General. His accounts shall be audited by a committee to be appointed at the Annual Meeting.

SECTION 2. He shall give bond for the safe custody and application of the funds, the cost of such bond to be borne by the National Society.

ARTICLE VII.—REGISTRAR GENERAL.

The Registrar General shall keep a register of the names and dates of the election, resignation, or death of all members of the several State Societies, and shall have the care and custody of all duplicate applications for membership. He shall issue upon the requisition of the Secretary or Registrar of the several State Societies certificates of membership and insignia to every member entitled thereto, through such Secretary or Registrar.

ARTICLE VIII.—HISTORIAN GENERAL.

The Historian General shall have the custody of all the historical and biographical collections of which the National Society may become possessed and shall catalogue and arrange the same, and shall place the same in a fireproof repository for preservation.

ARTICLE IX.—CHAPLAIN GENERAL.

The Chaplain General shall be a regularly ordained minister, and shall open and close all general meetings of the National Society with the services usual and proper on such occasions.

ARTICLE X.—STATE SOCIETIES.

Each State Society shall—

(1) Notify the Secretary General of the election and appointment of all officers, nominees for Board of Trustees, and delegates.

(2) Transmit to the Registrar General duplicate applications of all accepted members, and promptly notify him of the resignation or death of all members thereof, and the names of those dropped from the roll for non-payment of dues.

(3) Transmit to the Registrar General, on April 1 of each year, the report required by section 4, Article IV, of the Constitution, such reports to cover the changes in membership occurring between April 1 of the previous year and March 31 of the current year, and to be made on the blank forms furnished for the purpose by the Registrar General.

(4) Pay to the Treasurer General on April 1 of each year the annual dues of such Society, computed at the rate of fifty cents for every member carried on the rolls of such Society on that date.

(5) Cause the Treasurer of such Society, when remitting funds for any purpose to the Treasurer General, to use the blank form of letter of transmittal prescribed by the Board of Trustees or Executive Committee, and furnished by the Treasurer General for the purpose.

ARTICLE XI.—BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

SECTION 1. The Board of Trustees shall prepare and carry out plans for promoting the objects and growth of the Society; shall generally superintend its interests, and shall execute such other duties as shall be committed to it at any meeting of the National Society. It shall have charge of the printing of the Diploma and the manufacturing of the Insignia, and shall determine the price at which the same shall be issued.

SECTION 2. It shall have the authority to admit or reorganize as a State Society any association of fifteen or more persons duly qualified for membership in the Society.

SECTION 3. It shall have power to fill any vacancy occurring among the General Officers, and an officer so elected shall act until the following annual election and until his successor shall be elected.

SECTION 4. It shall have authority to make, alter, and amend the By-Laws as hereinafter provided.

SECTION 5. The President General may call meetings of the Board of Trustees at any time he may deem necessary, and shall call such meetings upon the written request of any five members thereof, provided that of any meeting, other than such as may be called during the session or immediately upon the adjournment of an annual or special Congress of the National Society, not less than five days' notice of the time and place of such meeting shall be given.

ARTICLE XII.—EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

A meeting of the Executive Committee may be called at any time by the President General, and such meeting shall be called upon the written request of three members thereof. It shall be the duty of the Executive Committee to exercise the powers and perform the duties committed to it by any annual or special Congress or by the Board of Trustees; to control and supervise all arrangements for the holding of the annual or any special Congress, and the social and other functions connected therewith; it shall, upon the request of the proper committee of the National Society or of the Board of Trustees, assist in the organization of new State Societies, and increasing the membership of weak State Societies, and for these purposes may incur its necessary expenses, limited to such amounts as may be in the Treasury unappropriated, and not required for the current expenses of the National Society during the year.

ARTICLE XIII.—SEAL.

The seal of the Society shall be two and three-eighths of an inch in diameter, charged with the figure of a minute man grasping a musket in his right hand, and surrounded by a constellation of thirteen stars, who shall be depicted in the habit of a husbandman of the period of the American Revolution, and as in the act of deserting the plough for the service of his country; the whole encircled by a band three-eighths of an inch wide, within which shall appear the legend, "National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, organized April 30, 1889."

ARTICLE XIV.—CERTIFICATES.

All members of this Society, wherever admitted, shall be entitled to a certificate of membership duly attested by the President General, Secretary General, and Registrar General, countersigned by the President, Secretary, and Registrar of the State Society to which such member shall have been admitted.

ARTICLE XV.—INSIGNIA.

The insignia of the Society shall comprise (1) a cross surmounted by an eagle in gold, (2) a rosette.

SECTION I. The cross shall be of silver, with four arms, covered with white enamel and eight gold points, same size as a Chevalier's Cross of the Legion of Honor of France, with a gold medallion in the center bearing on the obverse a bust of Washington in profile, and on the reverse the figure of a minute man, surrounded by a ribbon enameled blue, with the motto "Libertas et Patria" on the obverse, and the legend "Sons of the American Revolution" on the reverse, both in letters of gold. The cross shall be surmounted by an eagle in gold and the whole decoration suspended from a ring of gold by a ribbon of deep blue, with white and buff edges, and may be worn by any member of the Society on ceremonial occasions only, and shall be carried on the left breast, or at the collar if an officer or Past President General of the National Society, or the President, active or past, of a State Society.

The President General, during his term of office and while acting in that capacity on official and ceremonial occasions, shall wear the distinctive badge of his office. It may be carried at the left breast or suspended from the neck ribbon. In full dress he shall wear a sash of the Society colors, three and one-half inches in width, extending from the right shoulder to the left hip, with the badge pendant at the crossing of the sash over the hip.

SECTION 2. The rosette shall be seven-sixteenths of an inch in diameter, of usual pattern, displaying the colors of the Society—blue, white, and buff—and may be worn by all members at discretion in the upper left-hand buttonhole of the coat.

SECTION 3. The badge of the Society may be purchased by members in accordance with the following agreement, to be signed by the purchasing member before delivery of same:

In purchasing the badge of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, I hereby agree that it will be worn or used in accordance with the regulations of the Society; that I will not pledge, part with, or transfer the same except with the written authority of the Society. It is further agreed for myself, heirs, executors, administrators, and any and all persons asserting any claim through me that upon demand of the Society and tender of the purchase price of said badge, or other regalia, the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution shall be entitled to immediate possession thereof.

ARTICLE XVI.—INDEBTEDNESS.

No debts shall be contracted on behalf of the National Society. Every obligation for the payment of money, except checks drawn against deposits, executed in the name or on behalf of the National Society shall be null and void.

ARTICLE XVII.—ORDER OF BUSINESS OF THE ANNUAL CONGRESS.

1. Calling the Congress to order by the President General.
2. Opening prayer by the Chaplain General.
3. Appointment of a Committee on Credentials.
4. Remarks by the President General on condition and needs of the Society.
5. Report of Committee on Credentials.
6. Reading of minutes of the last Congress.
7. Report of Board of Trustees.
8. Reports of General Officers.
9. Reports of standing committees.
10. Reports of special committees.
11. Reports of State Societies.
12. Old and unfinished business.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL CONGRESS
OF
AMERICAN REVOLUTION,

HELD AT PORTLAND, OREGON, JULY 19 AND 20, 1915.

The Congress was called to order by the President General, Rogers Clark Ballard Thruston, at 10 o'clock a. m. Monday, July 19, 1915.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The adjourned session of the Twenty-sixth Congress of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution is now in session. Will you please stand at attention while we listen to the invocation by the Rev. Richard Lightburne McCready, D. D., Chaplain of the Kentucky Society.

Rev. RICHARD LIGHTBURNE MCCREADY: Direct us, O Lord, in all of our doings, and especially at this time and in the deliberations of this Congress with Thy most gracious favor, and further us with Thy continual help, that in all our works begun, continued, and ended in Thee we may glorify Thy holy name; and finally by Thy mercy go further and prosper the work and spirit of our land, that it may be and continue a beacon of light to all peoples of the world, we ask through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen!

Col. GEO. V. LAUMAN: Mr. President General, the colors are present. Shall they be advanced?

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Advance the colors. (At the same time the President General commanded attention to the colors by three raps of the gavel.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Salute the colors.

(The colors were saluted by the Congress standing.)

Col. GEO. V. LAUMAN: Shall they be placed, sir?

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Place the colors.

(The Congress here sang the Star Spangled Banner, led by Chancellor L. Jenks.)

Mr. WALLACE MCCAMANT: Mr. President General, the Daughters of the American Revolution are represented by Mrs. A. Howard Clark, of Washington city, who is here by special appointment of the President General of that Society, and in a few moments I will present her as representing the sister Society. Mrs. Clark has been sent for.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Without objection, you will be granted that opportunity to come in. Mr. McCamant, we are ready to receive the Governor.

Mr. WALLACE McCAMANT: Mr. President General and gentlemen of the Congress, I take very great pleasure in introducing to you the Governor of Oregon, the Hon. James Withycombe. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Governor Withycombe will now give you the address of welcome from the State of Oregon.

ADDRESS BY GOVERNOR WITHYCOMBE.

Governor WITHYCOMBE: Mr. President General, Ladies and Gentlemen, I bring to you this morning a greeting from the people of Oregon, and in their behalf I extend to you a most hearty welcome to our State.

Oregon is distinctly honored by your presence. We are very proud of the fact that you saw fit to hold this great convention within our borders. We are proud of the fact of the principles you represent; not only that you are descendants of our Revolutionary fathers, but the very fact that those Revolutionary fathers gave us that priceless heritage—liberty. We are also proud of the fact, and we honor the great name of Lincoln with Washington, and we honor his compatriots who with him preserved the integrity of this great country; and, my friends, to my mind, while I am not an alarmist, I fear there is a serious condition confronting us at this time that we must not overlook. We have been a wonderfully prosperous nation. Our people are peace-loving people; and, indeed, I think we should be proud of the fact that our chief executive today is a man of peace. However, we must not forget the fact that, to my mind, there is a dangerous sentiment developing over this country. In fact, in this city just the other day a Federal officer of high position made an invidious comparison between our navy and our schools. We believe in education and we want to develop our schools, but we must not neglect a proper defense to our great country. (Applause.) We do not want to deteriorate or degenerate into intellectual mollicoddles, but we want to build up here a great race of a high type of citizenship and truly patriotic American citizens. (Applause.)

I was delighted beyond expression the other day when that splendid old precious relic, the Liberty Bell, came to our State, and to see the spontaneous outpouring of our people to do honor to that old bell; not for the bell itself, but for the principle it represented; and I believe that it did us good here to reinspire, as it were, the higher ideals and nobler thoughts of citizenship. And on you, my friends, depends a good deal the development of this sentiment. We must stand as a unit to protect our great country. We believe in the principle that there should be peace on earth and good-will among men, but we must be prepared to meet any emergency to defend our great country. (Applause.)

I trust, and I know, that you will have a good convention here. I hope it will be one of the most prosperous in all of your history, and that your coming here will be a delight and a pleasure to you, and I hope you will return to your homes imbued with a longing to come back ultimately to our splendid Commonwealth, for which nature has done so much.

I thank you most heartily. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Mr. Governor, the purest blood and the purest water would become stagnant if not properly cared for; and one of the unwritten principles of our organization is to prove that that blood which flowed in the veins of our forefathers has not become stagnant, but when it is necessary the Sons of the American Revolution will go to the defense of their colors.

Governor WITHYCOMBE: I thank you. (Applause.)

PRESENTATION OF GAVEL BY GENERAL ANDERSON.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is my pleasure to introduce to you Gen. Thomas M. Anderson, of the Oregon Society. He is the one who organized both our Washington and Oregon State Societies. (Applause.)

Gen. THOMAS M. ANDERSON: Mr. President General, I am authorized by the Oregon Society of the Sons of the American Revolution to give you a token of their patriotism and of your authority. Oregon has the distinct peculiarity of having begun its political career as a provisional government. Seventy-two years ago one hundred white people, constituting then the entire population west of the Rocky Mountains, gathered together at Champoeg, a forest near here, to organize a provisional government. At that time, Mr. President General, Great Britain claimed the sovereignty of this coast from latitude fifty-four forty to the Mexican border. The pioneers from the United States antagonized this claim, so that the provisional government was, after all, a compromise; but it is a proof that James was right in stating that any hundred Americans coming together could formulate a workable system of government.

Secretary Lane, in opening the San Francisco Exposition, said that the western immigration started at Plymouth Rock. We claim, Mr. President General, that the Oregon trail began from Jamestown, on the James; that it followed up the James River to its source, across the divide, down through the gullies of the Gauley, on through Kentucky to the falls on the Ohio; there George Rogers Clark took up the trail and carried it to Kaskaskia, in Vincennes. His younger brother, William, with Meriwether Lewis, took up the trail and carried it up the Missouri to its source, across the continental divide, over the divide to the headwaters of the Columbia; and the first white man, Mr. President General, that followed those waters to the sea was, sir, William Clark, a relative of yours.

I must now give to New England, however, the credit of sending us the first missionaries; and Mr. Spaulding, who came on, said that his entire equipment was a Bible and a small sack of wheat. How the seeds of Christianity have been planted and gone from Plymouth Rock to the Golden Gate you will see, Mr. President. As to wheat as a production, what say you to fifty or sixty bushels to the acre and the millions of bushels that have been exported from Oregon every year? And here I wish to say that, owing to the initiative of one of our compatriots, a ship was loaded with provisions and other comforts for the Belgian people, and as I understand, Mr. President, it was the first to pass through the Panama Canal to the eastward on its mission of mercy.

Now, Mr. President, I give you this gavel, made from the cedars of Champoeg, as a proof, Mr. President, of our loyalty and your authority. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: General Anderson, it is a great pleasure to receive this gavel from the hands of one who is a blood relative both of mine and of the man to whose exploits the United States owes not only its extension, but even its very existence, west of the Alleghany Mountains. It was to George Rogers Clark that we owe the credit of having saved the few settlements in Kentucky and Tennessee; it was to him that we owe the acquisition of the Northwest Territory, reaching to the Mississippi River, and it was largely due to his influence that the purchase of the Louisiana Territory was brought about. He and the pioneers with him insisted upon the free navigation of that river—a right which they had by international law. It was George Rogers Clark that planned the Lewis and Clark Expedition to the Northwest country, a fact not yet in written history, but the letters are extant, and not only their existence but their location are known to me. It is therefore a great pleasure to receive this gavel from the hands of a relative of George Rogers Clark, a man than whom we had no greater in the Revolution excepting Washington himself, especially since it came from the first settlements on the Pacific coast; and I feel sure that the mere facts here presented would of themselves be sufficient for this gavel always to inspire justice and right to rule in our meetings. If it, however, happens that that is not sufficient inspiration, then we have here, right in this town, the inspiration of two lofty peaks, always looking down upon us from above, as though they were the bright eyes of our Revolutionary ancestors, to see that we walk in the paths that we should and in the defense of those principles for which our forefathers fought and bled.

I thank you most heartily for your kindness in presenting this gavel. (Applause.)

The Committee on Credentials instead of being appointed at the opening of each session of the Congress has become one of our regular standing committees, and those of the committee who are present are Mr. William J. Clarke, chairman; Mr. Thomas A. Perkins, and Mr. William P. Winans. They are preparing their lists of the officers and delegates present and at a later hour this morning will make their report.

Our By-Laws require that our President General should each year make to our Annual Congress a report on the operations of the Society during the past year and to offer recommendations for the coming year, and I am now prepared to make to you this report. It is rather more lengthy than I had hoped to make it, but I do not very well see how I can make it any shorter.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT GENERAL.

COMPATRIOTS: I have now served you as your President General for two terms. I want to express to you my sincere appreciation of the honor which you conferred upon me and my recognition of the responsibilities of the office.

While I was one of our early members, having been admitted to membership in January, 1890, before we were a year old, I took but little active part in the work of our organization, either State or National, for over twenty years. It was really at the Toledo Congress that I was awakened and my sense of duty quickened, and from that day to this my interest has rapidly grown. The work has been arduous and great in volume, and though I have enjoyed it, it could not have been accomplished without the ready and able assistance of our officers, the Executive and other committees, our Past Presidents General, and the co-operation of our State Societies and many of the individual members. My many requests for assistance have almost invariably been answered cheerfully. The few regrets were due to causes beyond the control of those asked.

We are here now to make to you our report as to what we have done during the past year and our suggestions as to future activities. You, as the representatives of your various State organizations, are the jurors to whom we make our report, and when you return home it is your duty to tell your several organizations what we have done and your views as to how well we have done it.

During these two years it has been my pleasure to meet with some eighteen of our State Societies, some of them more than once, either in their regular business sessions and banquets or in some special celebrations. In these journeyings I have traversed from Florida and Louisiana to Maine and Vermont, and, prior to this trip, westward as far as Nebraska and Wisconsin. I would like to have covered far more territory, but I had my limitations. Everywhere that I have gone I have found the Sons of the American Revolution most cordial, and I could not help noting the great number of our members who are men of affairs and leaders in their communities. This is not mere chance, for we seem to develop in our members those qualities which go to make up good citizenship. We have at heart the permanent success of the American Republic and are willing to work together for that end.

INCREASE IN MEMBERSHIP.

It is very gratifying to note that the number of new members enrolled during the past year has again been, as in the year preceding, about 25 per cent above the annual average for a decade past, and more than the usual number have recently become life members, indicating a permanent interest in our work.

NECROLOGY.

Each successive year adds to the long list of compatriots taken from our midst by death, those with whom we have been most pleasantly associated in advancing our work. Among those gone from us during the past year were George Clinton Batcheller, chairman of the Auditing and Finance Committee; Charles T. Thompson, President of the Minnesota Society; Dr. Robert Alonzo Brock, for sixteen years Secretary of the Virginia Society; Amasa Mason Eaton, ex-President of the Rhode Island Society; Rt. Rev. Franklin Spencer Spalding, Chaplain of the Utah Society; William Wallace Stephenson, Vice-President of the Kentucky Society; Brig. Gen. Edgar Romeyn Kellogg, of Ohio; Hon. Eugene F. Endicott and Hon. Curtis Guild, Jr., of Massachusetts; former President Thomas W. Prosch, of the Washington State Society, and Willard Secor, former Treasurer and Vice-President General.

LOCAL CHAPTERS.

In some of our States the interest in local work has been materially enhanced by the formation of Chapters, especially where there are enough congenial spirits in any locality who will meet together frequently for social pleasures, historical research, or patriotic purposes. It is at such meetings that our best work is outlined and the purposes for which we were organized are fostered and advanced. The formation of Chapters has not always proven a success, but in the large majority of cases it has.

THE WASHINGTON GUARD.

Probably the most delightful and successful method of interesting our sons was through the Washington Guard, an organization inaugurated by our New Jersey Society; but of this you will hear more later from Compatriot John Lenord Merrill, one of its founders and former President of our New Jersey Society.

MILITARY AND NAVAL RECORDS.

One of the earliest activities of the National Society was an effort to secure the publication by the government of a roster of the soldiers and sailors of the Revolution. To secure this result it was first necessary to obtain legislation whereby the muster-rolls and pay-rolls, then widely scattered, might be brought together in the War and Navy Departments and the means provided for the indexing of the material and its preparation for printing. The work is still progressing, but the time for publication appears not yet ripe.

During the past year some advance has been made toward publishing the names and records of service of the 78,000 pensioners of the Revolution—an important work which was initiated by the Massachusetts Society at our St. Louis Congress.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES BUILDING.

I told you at the Syracuse Congress of the efforts the National Society is making to bring about the erection of an archives building in Washington, a place that shall be adequate in size and in equipment to house and properly handle and preserve the enormous masses of official manuscript accumulated during the past century and a half—manuscripts whose value is enormous if we are ever to have the history of our nation written in an authoritative way.

While making certain researches during the last four years I have been amazed to find what a mass of material our government has; but, unfortunately, it is largely inaccessible, not only to the historian, but often to the departments themselves, because of the lack of facilities for properly storing and caring for them. At present they are piled up in boxes and on shelves in attics and garrets, basements, vacant houses, and outbuildings, generally illy lighted and ventilated, practically all of them rat and fire traps, and occasionally, especially in basements, overflowed with water every time there is a hard rain. I was and am still searching for information regarding our flag and the national colors carried by our army, and the accomplishment of my task seems hopeless in so far as obtaining the information from their archives is concerned. But, then, I don't seem to be much worse off than the departments themselves are; for last year, when General Funston took command at Vera Cruz, he was telegraphed to put into force and effect the same orders that were issued by our army at Manila, and if he could not recall them to confer with his brother officers and get them to refresh his memory. A fine state of affairs when our War Department cannot locate orders issued by it only sixteen years before. I see by recent papers that they are now searching for information as to the effect of certain legislation in the past. The chances are ten to one that they will not find it in the department archives. There are times when the failure to promptly locate important information may cost our government many times the cost of such a building.

I am glad to report to you that, after hard work by one of our committees, a small Congressional appropriation has been made for a study of plans for a national archives building, though its actual construction seems far distant. If we keep at work, the end we aim at will eventually be accomplished.

WORK OF COMMITTEES.

The chairmen of the several standing and special committees will report the details of their work to this Congress. I must not anticipate what they may say, and yet I cannot refrain from telling you some of the accomplishments of the year. I want, first of all, to speak of the grand success of the Washington Journey Pilgrimage from Philadelphia to Cambridge last June. It was splendidly managed by the committees of the five States through which it passed.

Your Memorial Committee will tell you what it is doing toward the preparation of a memorial volume on the Signers of the Declaration of Independence. It was last fall, in co-operation with our brother organization, the Descendants of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, that we arranged for a joint committee of three from each Society to take up this work, so as to avoid duplication and hasten its completion. Quite a little was published about it in one or more of our recent bulletins, but this committee is doing such good work that I know you will enjoy hearing their report when we come to its reading.

EDUCATION OF ALIENS.

What is probably the most important patriotic activity ever undertaken by the Sons of the American Revolution, especially in the light of our present international relations and national concerns, was initiated by an honored member of this Oregon Society, and, I am proud to say, my blood kinsman, Gen. Thomas McArthur Anderson, who at the Washington Congress in 1902 introduced a resolution providing for a committee "to consider some practical means by which the foreign element in our country * * * may be informed concerning distinctively American principles, in order that they may become patriotic citizens of the land of their adoption." The committee was appointed and the work was begun, a leaflet being issued entitled "A welcome to immigrants and some good advice," but funds were not then available for extensive work. It became possible, however, a few years later, through co-operation with one of the executive departments in Washington, to begin this good work anew, and the past year the Committee on Information for Aliens has accomplished more than in any previous one.

It may not be known to all of you that the settlers of the thirteen colonies were made up of many nationalities, and that at the period of the American Revolution one-fifth of the inhabitants could not speak English, while one-half was of other than Anglo-Saxon descent. During succeeding decades immigration brought to our shores many million foreigners, resulting in a present proportion of as high as 30 per cent of foreign-born inhabitants in some of the States. "To bring about the early and intelligent assimilation of this immense host and imbue them with high ideals and a full sense of the personal responsibility of each individual in a government like ours is a most patriotic endeavor. The entry of these masses into the full privilege of citizenship should be made an impressive event in their lives."

It may be of interest to you to recall that an analysis of the 1910 census shows that the white population of the United States amounted to 81,731,957, of which the so-called native stock constituted 60.5 per cent, and the three great linguistic families of foreign stock from northwestern Europe 27.1 per cent, making a total of 87.6 per cent. The elements from southern and eastern Europe constitute less than 13 per cent of the population. It is in the better education of these latter peoples that the most energetic work is needed. Census statistics also show that of the 26,999,151 men of twenty-one years of age and over in continental United States, 9,188,454 are foreign-born white, negroes, Chinamen, Japanese, and other races; 3,043,117 foreign-born white men, about 45 per cent of the total of that class, are naturalized citizens. Germans of foreign birth are in the majority, and 69 per cent of them are naturalized. Of 2,631,158 natives of southern and eastern Europe, only 22 per cent are naturalized. Of the natives of Ireland in this country, 67 per cent are naturalized, 62 per cent of the Swedes, while of the 255,847 Hungarians only 14 per cent have become naturalized.

At the Syracuse Congress Commander Moore, chairman of the Committee on Aliens, called attention to the great good that would result by making the ceremony of naturalization more formal and impressive than has been customary. He advised with the Chief of the Federal Bureau of Naturalization in the matter and corresponded with organizations engaged in the education of aliens.

Upon the recommendation of the Syracuse Congress and of the National Executive Committee, your President General called upon each State Society and Local Chapter of Sons of the American Revolution to take such measures as might be feasible through conference with bar associations and judges of United States courts, and of other courts having jurisdiction thereof, to establish simple but dignified and impressive ceremonies when oaths of allegiance are administered to groups of new citizens, in order that these may most fully comprehend the solemnity and importance of the obligations assumed by them as they become members of the body politic.

It was further recommended and urged by your President General that local committees be appointed to initiate methods to benefit the foreigners in our midst, or to co-operate with agencies already in existence, equipped for effective work in this direction, in their most commendable systematic plan of maintaining classes and lecture courses for teaching new-comers the English language; for instructing them in the rights, duties, and obligations of citizenship; for improving their living conditions, and for promoting their general uplift in every direction.

At about the same time that the foregoing appeal was issued your President General wrote to about fifteen hundred judges having jurisdiction over naturalization, urging them to make every effort to have the ceremony of naturalization a dignified and a solemn function. One of the results of this action by our own and other societies working along similar lines was a great meeting in Philadelphia, on May 10, under the auspices of the municipal government. At this meeting an audience of 16,000 persons was assembled, including 4,000 recently naturalized citizens, who were addressed by the President of the United States, the Secretary of Labor, Judge Joseph Buffington, Mayor Blakenburg, and others on the importance of the duties assumed through naturalization. In the course of his address the President said:

I certainly would not be one even to suggest that a man cease to love the home of his birth and the nation of his origin. These things are very sacred and ought not to be put out of our hearts; but it is one thing to love the place where you were born and it is another thing to dedicate yourself to the place to which you go.

You cannot dedicate yourself to America unless you become in every respect and with every purpose of your will thorough Americans.

You cannot become thorough Americans if you think of yourselves in groups. America does not consist of groups. A man who thinks of himself as belonging to a particular national group in America has not yet become an American; and the man who goes among you to trade upon your nationality is no worthy son to live under the Stars and Stripes.

It was some years ago that this committee prepared three leaflets, as follows:

No. 1, "Information for Immigrants Concerning the United States: Its Opportunities, Government, and Institutions," is printed in English, Italian, Yiddish, Polish, Magyar, Slovinian, Slovak, Croatian, Swedish, Greek, Bohemian, German, Norwegian, Danish, and Lithuanian—15 languages in all.

No. 2, on "Naturalization of Aliens in the United States: How to become citizens; what is required; rights and duties."

No. 3, "The Constitution of the United States of America," printed only in English.

All three of these are used as text-books in our schools from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf, and about 50,000 are annually distributed for that purpose; and this year the demand has been so much greater than usual that an additional appropriation for that purpose was made by the Executive Committee. We are the only organization in the land that furnishes a copy of the Constitution of the United States free of charge, and in connection with the Philadelphia naturalization meeting, on May 10, a thousand copies of our leaflet No. 3, the Constitution of the United States, were asked for.

THE AMERICAN SCHOOL PEACE LEAGUE.

While we are doing this work for the aliens, what are we doing for our own citizens and our youths? Are we teaching them the duties that should devolve upon them when they arrive at manhood? For we must not forget that before long we must pass the reins of government on to the next generation. It strikes me that we are neglecting them and are not giving to them that care and attention that we, as sons of Revolutionary sires, should. Have we not delegated that right to others and rested content with the feeling of security that the teachers of our youths are fulfilling their full duty in making true, loyal, brave, and patriotic citizens of our sons? I think it might be well for us to hesitate occasionally and look into the methods of educating these youths, because most of the teachers are young, enthusiastic, and are occasionally led into traps by faddists of whose principles we cannot always approve.

I have in view especially a certain organization known as the American School Peace League, which was created about 1908 and held its second annual meeting in Boston in 1910. Its principal object seems to be to get control of the teachers in the public schools all over the United States and, through them, to instil into our youths the principle that, no matter what comes, they must not go to the defense of their nation and its flag. One of their shining lights at their Boston meeting in 1910 is quoted as having said:

After all, the people of the world care very little what flag they live under. A flag means nothing. It is not a reality. They can live under one bundle of colors as well as another.

This may all be very true; but if they are not taught to love and respect that "bundle of colors" under whose protection they live, they are not taught patriotism. The above statement was as irritating to the editor of the Army and Navy Journal as a red flag to a mad bull. The reported author of the statement, now a high government official, was given an opportunity to repudiate what he had said, but so far the only statement that he has made was that he had been misquoted. The league continues its work. Its influence is now practically all over the United States, and the Army and Navy Journal has been especially virulent in its attacks upon the organization, and from its columns much of my information has been obtained. Much of their active work is carried on as a result of their Committee "on Lectures and Readings to make war ridiculous to the children in the schools." "Their aim is to have from 500 to 1,000 young women teachers in schools giving readings."

Last April Maj. Sidney Grant, of the New York National Guard, had his attention attracted to School No. 165, in Brooklyn, where he found them singing the anti-military song, "I did not raise my boy to be a soldier." Upon further question, the principal said that the sentiments embodied in that song had been discussed by him and the children of the school for several years past, and on the bulletin-board in the main hall there was then a pictorial reflection upon soldiers, and elsewhere in the school building there were posted other pictures holding the military branch of our government up to ridicule.

On May 18 of this year Peace Day was celebrated in the public schools with elaborate programs, the chief design of which was to hold up the awfulness of war and to make the most of the opportunity to instil into the minds of the young a variety of silly ideas about the dangers of military training and the worthlessness of military service. All of this at the most impressionable age of the child!

I took the trouble to get the year book of the organization to see what their constitution and by-laws were. I did not find anything in them especially objectionable, but it is what they are doing that is objectionable. In that pamphlet are printed two essays that won their first and second prizes, the first one of which is about as wild-eyed a bit of idiocy as I have ever read, and I cannot conceive of any one awarding any prize to such an effusion.

My understanding is that the Carnegie Peace Foundation Fund is behind this organization and others of a similar character, apparently organized for the same purpose.

On the 19th of last month there was quite a large meeting held at the Carnegie Hall, New York, and as the meeting broke up there was some one standing at the exit to distribute to the young men as they passed out an anti-enlistment pledge, reading as follows:

I, being over eighteen years of age, hereby pledge myself against enlistment as a volunteer for any military or naval service in international war and against giving my approval to such enlistment on the part of others.

Then follows place for the name and address of the pledger.

Until my attention was called to articles in the Army and Navy Journal on this subject, it never had occurred to me that any human being would attempt to teach our school children principles which, to my mind, are treasonable, and which, if lived up to by them, would make arrant cowards of our youths, would make our government a foot-ball for other nations, and result in practically enslaving us and our descendants. I think I can safely say that all of our members want peace maintained, but that practically none of them would ever advocate such a policy, and it strikes me that the greatest duty now before us, individually and collectively, is to thoroughly investigate this question, find out how far it has gone, and checkmate its further progress.

I have here a number of newspaper clippings, the reports in the Evening Transcript of Boston of a meeting of the School Peace League in 1910, which I had to have photographed—photographs taken from early articles in the Army and Navy Journal and others. You can see where quite a number of them are marked, to call attention to the various points. One of the very best articles that I have ever seen is entitled "The dangers of pessimism," by Philip Marshall Brown, published in the current number of the North American Review. It is strong and to the point.

Some years ago a lady in my native city of Louisville, Ky., was telling me about her father in the War of 1812. I remember the old man when I was a child. I had fished out of the same boat with him, so I had a personal feeling for him. The Battle of the River Raisin so aroused the ire of all Kentuckians that they rushed to the standard to fight and to avenge themselves for that treachery. She told me that her father, at the age of fifteen, ran off and joined Captain Dudley's company. His mother didn't want that young boy of fifteen to go to war; he was too young to endure those hardships; so she went after Dudley to have her little boy return to his home. Dudley argued and plead with her, begging that the boy might be allowed to go with him to the war, but his mother was obdurate. No, she could not let that young boy go. As a last stroke on Dudley's part, he said: "But, Mrs. Love, what would you think of your boy if he did not want to fight for his country's flag?" She said: "I would hate him." And thus it is with all of us. (Applause.) I thank you.

GREETINGS FROM THE DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Mr. McCAMANT: Mr. President General, on behalf of the Oregon Society, I have the honor to present at this time Mrs. A. Howard Clark, the representative of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: If there is no objection, we will permit this modification in our order of business, and I will nominate Judge Beardsley, our ex-President General, and Mr. McCamant to escort in the representative of the President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

(Mrs. A. Howard Clark was escorted to the platform by ex-President General Beardsley and Mr. Wallace McCamant and was greeted with applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriots, it is my pleasure to introduce to you Mrs. A. Howard Clark, the personal representative of Mrs. William Cumming Story, the President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who has come to bring to us the greetings of our sister Society. (Applause.)

Mrs. A. HOWARD CLARK: Mr. President General, our President General having asked me, an Honorary Vice-President General, to represent her on this occasion, as she could not be present, has sent you the following greeting:

Next to the pleasure of meeting and greeting personally our greatly valued friends and coworkers, the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and particularly their gifted President General, R. C. Ballard Thruston, it gives me pleasure to send, in the name of our eighty-eight thousand members, most cordial greeting on this important occasion, through one of our most valued members. Our Society has reason to thank the Sons of the American Revolution for many acts of courtesy and consideration, not the least among these the presence of their President General on many occasions, when he has by his eloquent words and intense patriotism inspired our members to renewed efforts for the cause that is so dear to us.

With congratulations upon the fine achievements of the past and good wishes for continued success, I am,

Faithfully yours,
 DAISY ALLEN STORY,
President General, National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

(Applause.)

Gentlemen, I am sure if our President General were here today that she would be in hearty accord with the patriotic sentiments of your President General. (Applause.)

I have often wondered if the members of our two great organizations realized how much the people of this country should look to us, the direct descendants of those who fought and gave up their lives to make this nation, to guard and protect it, and it is only natural that outsiders who have come here to make it their homes should do so.

In looking over applications for membership, I noticed how many of the soldiers of the War of the Revolution were mere boys, between the ages of twelve and seventeen years—boys eager to help with their elders to fight for the right. The main object of both of our Societies is to "foster true patriotism and love of country." (Applause.) Our mottoes are, "Home and country," "Libertas et patria," and it seems to me that it is our duty by those mottoes which we have accepted to train our children in the home and elsewhere to be ready to protect it and their country if need be. "I shall raise my boy to be a soldier" would be another fitting motto for us. (Applause.)

Let us teach the youth of today a love for their country that shall even accord with the patriotism expressed in that famous toast: "Our country! May she always be in the right, but right or wrong, our country!" (Applause.)

That is patriotism; that is love of country! (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: I want to thank you sincerely, in behalf of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, for this delightful greeting. The two organizations have always worked in accord, and I hope that they may always be such warm friends in the future. We are both working for the same purposes, for the same objects, for the same people, and the same country. I thank you sincerely for your greetings. (Applause.)

COMMISSIONER CLAXTON AND SCHOOL PEACE LEAGUE.

Mr. ELMER M. WENTWORTH, of Iowa: Mr. President General, it seems to me there is no more fitting time to impress upon the minds of the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution the importance of the address to which we have just listened than to call attention to the fact that in this morning's Oregonian, on the last page and near the bottom, is an article denoting the presence in this city of the gentleman, Mr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, who referred to the American flag as "a bundle of colors." Compatriots, it seems to me at the present time that it is very fitting we devote our thoughts to that splendid address of our President General and rededi-cate ourselves to patriotism. The particular incident to which our President General referred occurred at Boston, in June, 1910, where Mr. Claxton, addressing the American School Peace League, made the statement in connection with the flag as quoted by our President General. Public School 165, Brooklyn, N. Y., was one school where they sang, "I did not raise my boy to be a soldier," and the principal of that school not only defended his action, but bragged he had discussed with his pupils those pacifist principles commonly called "peace at any price." That's the plain English of it.

Unfortunately, I am growing old and cannot see as readily as of yore or I would read further in connection with that Boston meeting which Claxton addressed. There were competitive debates and essays, if my memory serves, and among the contestants there was but one whose name indicated possible Revolutionary ancestry. Within the shadow of Faneuil Hall, the homes of the Adams's, Otis, Hancock, and Warren, the American School Peace League acclaimed a young lady of South Boston and the Hon. P. P. Claxton, of Tennessee, for sentiments that those worthies would have held seditious and "Old Hickory" high treason.

The principal of Public School 165, it would seem, is also an alien—of foreign birth or immediate ancestry—inheriting none of those principles upon which this nation was founded and for which this Society stands. I think it is well for you to know more about this work of the American School Peace League, and I thought it proper to emphasize that part of the President General's address while it was fresh in your minds. The articles and pamphlets are here and subject to your examination. (Applause.)

Mr. CHRISTOPHER W. HERR, of Washington State: Mr. President General, if it is possible in these United States that there is any man that would denominate that flag as "a bundle of colors," he is unworthy of being an American citizen and he should be removed from his office. (Applause.) And we should pass a resolution to be sent to the President of the United States asking him to remove this fellow from the office which he holds. It is an insult to this convention that he knows is being held here; it is an insult to this flag; it is an insult to the nation, and he should be removed from the office which he is dishonoring. (Applause.)

Mr. ARTHUR E. JOHNSON, of Minnesota: I would like to second that motion here and say that we should go a little further and remove all the rest that have those sentiments. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard that motion and it is seconded. I don't like to declare it quite out of order yet, but we have not had the report from the Committee on Credentials. With your permission, we will hear the report of the Committee on Credentials first and then consider this motion. The report of the Committee on Credentials is next.

REPORT OF CREDENTIAL COMMITTEE.

Mr. WILLIAM J. CLARKE: Mr. President General, we have registered up to this time seventy-nine accredited delegates; we have also recorded the names of forty-nine visiting ladies. I would ask that all delegates who have not presented their credentials do so at once, as we wish to print the list by evening if possible. In presenting this partial report on behalf of the Committee on Credentials, I will state that we will make a complete detailed report tomorrow morning.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Without objection, we will grant to the Committee on Credentials further time in which to complete their report, a quorum of delegates being present.

COMMISSIONER CLAXTON AND SCHOOL PEACE LEAGUE.

Col. M. W. WOOD, of Idaho: Mr. President General, I am heartily in favor of the motion by Mr. Horr which we were to consider, but to save the time of the Congress and to have the matter take the proper course, I move you that it be referred to the Committee on Resolutions, who most assuredly will not kill it.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: That committee will be appointed the next thing. Now it is moved that this motion be referred to the Committee on Resolutions, which will be appointed in a few minutes. Is that seconded?

(Said motion was duly seconded and was put to a vote and was carried. See page 190 for resolution adopted by the Congress.)

COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, the Board of Trustees held a meeting this morning and, among other motions, recommended to the Congress the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the President General be instructed to appoint, at the opening of the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress, a Committee on Resolutions, to which all resolutions shall be referred for consideration.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The Board of Trustees makes that recommendation?

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Yes. I move you, sir, that the recommendation of the Board of Trustees be adopted.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is moved and seconded that the recommendation of the Board of Trustees be adopted. Is there any objection? All those in favor please signify it by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it. I will appoint on that committee Judge Morris B. Beardsley, Past President General; Col. M. W. Wood, Vice-President General, and Mr. Elmer M. Wentworth, of the National Executive Committee. They will take up the resolution which has just been referred to them. And (turning to Mr. Horr) I will thank you very much indeed if you will confer with that committee, handing to them your written resolution.

INVITATION FROM CALIFORNIA SOCIETY.

Now, Secretary Perkins, of the California Society, desires to make an announcement.

Mr. THOMAS A. PERKINS, of San Francisco: Mr. President General, Officers of the Society, Delegates, and Visitors, on behalf of the California Society I have been instructed to present the following invitation:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 15, 1915.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Twenty-sixth Congress of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution:

The California Society of the Sons of the American Revolution extends a cordial invitation to you to attend a banquet at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, on the evening of July 23, 1915, and it also invites you to hold an adjourned patriotic session on the Exposition grounds in San Francisco "Sons of American Revolution Day," July 24, 1915, at half past one.

Your families are also invited. T. A. PERKINS, Secretary.

The California Society extends to you all a hearty welcome to visit San Francisco after this Congress is adjourned. A program has been arranged for you as follows: The train which leaves here Wednesday evening will arrive in San Francisco Friday morning, July 23. You will be met at the ferry depot by autos, taking you to the Palace Hotel for headquarters. At 10 o'clock you will be given an auto ride about the city, and at noon you will be entertained at lunch at the California Building in the Exposition grounds. The balance of the afternoon will be taken up in viewing the Exposition. At 7 o'clock in the evening a banquet will be given at the Palace Hotel. Saturday, July 24, the Exposition officials have set apart for your entertainment; it is called "Sons of the American Revolution Day." At 1.30 o'clock of that day the Congress, adjourned from here, will meet there for a patriotic service. In the afternoon of that day, from 3.30 to 5 o'clock, the Daughters of the American Revolution of California will receive all delegates at their headquarters, in the Grand Canyon Building, on the Exposition grounds. At 3 o'clock the Illinois Building will be dedicated, and Governor Dunne, of Illinois, will be present. His escort will be the First Infantry of Illinois, and all Illinois delegates are expected to be there, and all of us are to participate. On Monday following you are all invited to go to Oakland, and there be taken about the city and to Berkeley on an auto drive. This invitation includes not only delegates, but their wives and families and friends. The California Society extends a most hearty welcome to all Sons of the American Revolution here and elsewhere to visit them. We want you to come to the land of sunshine and flowers and fruits. We expect every one here to be there. (Applause.) I will ask you all—that is, all the delegates—to please leave their names and of their families with the Secretary General, so that I may have them by this evening, in order to notify the Society at San Francisco how many will be present for the evening of Friday. Remember, the California Society is the original Society of Sons of Revolutionary Sires in the United States, having been first instituted on October 22, 1875. The man who called the first meeting is still living, at Los Gatos, Cal., having come to California in 1849. He is now eighty-five years of age—eighty-five years young. We expect to have him there if his health permits. He wants you all to meet him. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I want to impress on you, gentlemen, the importance of letting the California committee know how many to provide for, and urge you, therefore, as soon as you reasonably can, to leave your cards and names with the Secretary General or Mr. Perkins.

Judge MORRIS B. BEARDSLEY: Mr. President General, I would like to offer a resolution that the thanks of this Congress be tendered to the California Society for their magnificent invitation and for the program which they have in store for us.

(Numerous voices seconded the motion.)

Mr. BEARDSLEY: And that we accept the invitation with our hearty thanks.

(There were numerous seconds of the motion and a call for a rising vote.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Well, gentlemen, all those in favor please rise. It seems to be unanimously carried by the ladies as well as the men.

The next business is the reading of the minutes of the last Congress.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, an abstract of the minutes was published in the Official Bulletin for June, 1914, and mailed to every compatriot, and the full proceedings were printed in the National Year Book for 1914. I move that the reading be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: That is not out of order at all. Is there any second to it?

(Said motion was duly seconded, put to a vote, and carried, and it was ordered accordingly.)

MINUTES OF SESSION OF CONGRESS, MAY 17, 1915.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The next is the reading of the minutes of the first session of the present Congress.

PORTLAND, OREGON, May 17, 1915.

On this day, and at the hour of 10 a. m., the National Congress, Sons of the American Revolution, convened at 926 Northwestern Bank Building, Portland, Oregon. The Congress was called to order by Vice-President General M. W. Wood. There were present Vice-President General Wood and the following delegates from the Oregon Society: D. W. Wakefield, Col. H. C. Cabell, Maj. V. M. C. Silva, Rev. H. L. Bates, and Wallace McCamant. Vice-President General Wood presided and Wallace McCamant was duly elected Secretary pro tem.

On motion of Mr. McCamant, seconded by Mr. Wakefield, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That this Congress do now adjourn for want of a quorum until the 10th of July, 1915, at the hour of 10 a. m., in the Grand Lodge Room of the Masonic Building at Portland, Oregon.

M. W. WOOD,
Vice-President General.
WALLACE McCAMANT,
Secretary Pro Tem.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard the reading of the minutes of the first session of the present Congress. Are there any objections? If not, they will stand approved as read.

Next is the report of the Board of Trustees and Executive Committee.

REPORT OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES AND EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, on account of the large body of material which must be read in these various reports, I will abbreviate them, unless there is a call for a full statement.

The Board of Trustees elected at Syracuse on May 19, 1914, met immediately after the close of the Twenty-fifth Congress. The principal items of business were the approval of an Executive Committee nominated by the President General; the acceptance of an invitation from the Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Montana, and Colorado Societies to hold the 1915 Congress at Portland, Oregon, and the authorization of the publication of the National Year Book for 1914. Several recommendations from the Congress and the State Societies were referred to the Executive Committee. At 9 o'clock a. m., May 20, 1914, the Executive Committee met at Syracuse and made appropriations for ordinary expenses and for carrying on the various activities of the Society, and considered various measures for the advancement of the organization, as recorded in the Official Bulletin and Year Book. On November 20, 1914, the committee met in New York City. The President General reported on the great success of the Washington Journey Celebration. The committee recommended that a pro forma session of the Twenty-sixth Congress be held on the third Monday in May and adjourned to the third Monday in July. A resolution was adopted favoring the publication of a memorial volume on the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, to be prepared under the joint auspices of the Sons of the American Revolution and the society of Descendants of the Signers, and a joint committee of three from each society was authorized for that purpose.

The President General was authorized to communicate with the State Societies and with court officials throughout the country with a view to the establishment of impressive ceremonies in connection with the naturalization of new citizens.

The committee met again on the morning of July 19 (this morning) and ratified measures informally considered at a conference on July 18. The Trustees also held a meeting this morning at 9.30 o'clock. Three amendments to the By-Laws were filed and will be acted on by the Board of Trustees at the meeting tomorrow. The Trustees recommended a resolution, which you have just adopted, in regard to a Committee on Resolutions. The Trustees ordered that to the standard form of application blanks there be added a request that the names, dates of birth, and addresses of the children and grandchildren of applicants for membership, the recommendation to that effect having been received from the Massachusetts Society. Acting upon the recommendation from the Michigan Society, it was resolved that more meetings of the State Societies should be held to arouse greater interest in the work of the Sons of the American Revolution, and there should be a general campaign for the organization of Local Chapters. The committee approved the recommendation of the Michigan Society that the State Societies, the Annual Congress, and the National Society adopt a resolution that the Congress of the United States be requested to authorize and direct the publication of the names of the heads of families, as recorded in the second census of the United States in 1800, from the States of Delaware, New Jersey, and Georgia, and other territory where the original lists of the 1790 census have been destroyed.

The Executive Committee recommend the adoption by this Congress of the following resolution, presented by the Committee on a National Archives Building:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution be instructed, at such time as it may be expedient, to urge upon Congress of the United States the appropriation of a sum sufficient for the purchase of a suitable site for a National Archives Building in the city of Washington and for the early construction thereof.

The Executive Committee also voted to recommend the adoption by this Congress of a resolution to be offered by the District of Columbia Society delegation, pursuant to a vote of that Society, calling upon the Federal Congress to provide for the publication of a summary digest of the names of the 78,000 pensioners of the Revolution.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard the report of the Executive Committee and the Board of Trustees. What is your pleasure?

A MEMBER: I move that the report be accepted and the resolutions referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The motion is that the report of the Board of Trustees and Executive Committee be accepted and the resolutions be referred to the Committee on Resolutions. Are there any remarks? All in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it and it will be so ordered.

Next is the report of the General Officers. I will first ask if our Vice-President General present, Colonel Wood, has any report to make?

VICE-PRESIDENT GENERAL WOOD: None.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The next is the report of our Secretary General.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY GENERAL.

COMPATRIOTS: The past year has been the busiest in the Society's history. The purely routine operations have been varied in the extreme and the patriotic doings have covered an unusually wide range of activities. Your Secretary General will not here attempt to detail what has been accomplished, for it will be told in the reports of the National Committees and of the several States.

The one great feature of the year was the very successful celebration of the anniversary of Washington's Journey from Philadelphia to Cambridge, lasting from June 22 to July 3, 1914. The influence of that event cannot be measured. The details of the pilgrimage have been recorded in the Official Bulletin, and will appear also in the report of the committee in charge. An account of the journey in 1775 was published by the committee in pamphlet form.

One of the results of the celebration was the patriotic suggestion by a resident of Connecticut that the roads along the entire route be improved and dedicated as the George Washington Highway. After much correspondence by your President General and consideration by the Executive Committee, it was decided to be inadvisable for the National Society to enter into this project further than to call it to the attention of the States involved therein for such action as those Societies may deem appropriate.

Again and again we are called upon to aid in the preservation of houses and sites pertaining to almost every period of the nation's history.

The Society has been requested to appoint delegates to meet with national leagues of every description. The President General, recognizing the importance and advantage of co-operation where the movements are within the sphere and policy of the Sons of the American Revolution, has appointed delegates to conventions whenever practicable.

In the promotion of laudable national measures there are usually found to be members of this Society directly connected with the movements who could serve as its representatives. In this capacity Compatriots William Howard Taft and former President General Edwin Warfield were appointed its representatives at the World Court Congress in Cleveland; and in the advancement of commendable public measures, with which Compatriots Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root, and former President General William Allen Marble are connected, they have been named to stand for the principles of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Past President General Henry Stockbridge represented the Society at the Star Spangled Banner Centennial at Baltimore in September, 1914. A member of the District of Columbia Society represented the National Society and displayed its banner at the dedication on July 3, 1915, of the Gen. Nathaniel Greene equestrian statue, erected by the Federal government on the Guilford Court-house Battle Ground, North Carolina.

There has been cordial co-operation with the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Sons of the Revolution in the celebration of historical anniversaries in many parts of the land. On Washington's Birthday the celebration in the city of Washington took the form of a large patriotic gathering in Memorial Continental Hall, under the direction of a joint committee of the three Societies, when the President of the United States participated in the exercises; and on the recent Fourth of July there was a public meeting arranged by a joint committee of the Sons of the American Revolution and the Sons of the Revolution at Washington Monument, one of the features of which was the presence of several hundred recently naturalized citizens, who had been personally invited to this celebration of Independence Day.

There has likewise been cordial co-operation with the American Historical Association, particularly in the effort to secure a National Archives Building; also with the Mississippi Valley Historical Association and other bodies of like character in the promotion of historical research. Researches are now in progress to discover in the archives of Spain the details of the military aid rendered the American cause by Governor Galvez, through the organization of the Louisiana Militia about 1779, several descendants of the army of Galvez having become members of the Louisiana Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The report of the Organization Committee in the North and West calls particular attention to the formation of Local Chapters as a very effective method of increasing the membership and the general interest in the Society. There are now 92 Chapters fully organized and several more will be chartered during the present year. The National Society has no jurisdiction in regard to Chapters, their regulation coming entirely under the control of the States. The number of members necessary to form a Chapter varies from five to fifteen. The qualification in every case is prior membership in the State Society. Several Chapters now number between 200 and 300 members and are powerful influences in their localities.

With a view to training youth and children in practical patriotism, the Sons of the American Revolution in New Jersey, Massachusetts, and a few other States have established the Washington Guard, an auxiliary body, in which boys of all ages under twenty-one may be enrolled, provided they are lineal descendants of soldiers, sailors, or active recognized patriots of the Revolution. Membership is divided into Senior Guardsmen for those from 15 to 21, Guardsmen from 10 to 14, and Junior Guardsmen, 9 years and under. The organization is made up of Commanderies and Chapters under the general control and maintained by the State Societies of the Sons of the American Revolution, with Commandants, Captains, Lieutenants, and Ensigns chosen from their own number by members of the Guard. It is not essentially a military body, but the boys are trained in the fundamental principles of the National government and in the need of proper equipment for self-protection. They are taught to foster true patriotism and to maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom; to faithfully perform the duties of citizens at all times, under all circumstances. Several hundred boys have been enrolled in the Guard during the past year and are enthusiastic in its work. As they become of age they are eligible to membership in the parent Society, and throughout their lives will be earnest in promoting practical patriotic activities.

The idea of forming the Washington Guard originated with the New Jersey Society, which planned the details of the organization and has been most active in its advancement, having enrolled about three hundred members.

Among the important present activities of the Society is that undertaken by the Memorial Committee, which for some years has been making a careful study of the lives of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence for use in a memorial volume now being prepared by a joint committee of this Society and the Descendants of the Signers. The work is planned to give an adequate, authentic biography of each of the fifty-six Signers of the Declaration.

The details of the story of the adoption and signing of the Declaration are still but imperfectly known. It was adopted on July 4, but the names of the Signers were not affixed until on and after August 2, when the engrossed copy was ready, and not on July 4, as generally supposed. On July 5 officially printed copies, bearing in print the names of John Hancock, President, and Charles Thomson, Secretary, were issued. On July 8 it was proclaimed at public meetings in Philadelphia and Trenton, and on later dates throughout the colonies and to the army. Its engrossing was not ordered until July 19. This order reads "and be signed by every member of Congress," though it was not clear whether the signing was considered a requirement or a privilege. Seven who voted for the Declaration did not sign it, and seven who signed it were not members when it was adopted, on July 4. There may possibly have been some party politics even in those days.

The well-known painting, "The Declaration of Independence," by Trumbull, the original of which is at the Yale Art School and a large copy in the rotunda of the Capitol at Washington, shows 48 portraits.

Four of these are of members who voted for, but did not sign, the document, and one is a portrait of Secretary Thomson. The painting therefore shows portraits of only 43 of the 56 Signers, Trumbull being unable to secure accurate likenesses of the missing ones, and it was his rule to make no imaginary pictures.

In an effort to fully perform the duties of his office, the President General traversed the country from Florida and Louisiana to Maine and Wisconsin, attending celebrations and business sessions of State Societies and Chapters, endeavoring everywhere to arouse greater and still greater earnestness in carrying out the purposes and objects of the Society, as defined by the Constitution. On one of these journeys in July and August last the President General and Secretary General participated in the dedication of a bronze tablet erected by the Vermont Society at Burlington, Vermont, the home of Gen. Ethan Allen and his brother, Col. Ira Allen. This trip was extended to historic Plattsburgh and to Montreal to view some of the scenes of the Canadian campaign during the Revolutionary War.

Among the measures to come before this Congress for action may be mentioned a resolution for the early construction of a National Archives Building. Recommendations come from Michigan, based upon successful work in that State, that a general campaign be undertaken for the promotion of Local Chapters and advocating the desirability of selecting topics for discussion relating to current matters of patriotic interest rather than relying entirely upon matters of historical concern alone.

Michigan also suggests the adoption of a resolution calling upon the government to publish the census roll of 1800, in order to supply the failure of the 1790 census in Delaware, New Jersey, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia, as well as for the tracing of the families in the other States in 1800. The Syracuse Congress recommended the publication of the census returns of 1820, but the government has taken no action thereon.

From the District of Columbia Society comes a resolution calling upon the Federal Congress to provide for the early publication of summary digests of the claims filed by the 78,000 pensioners of the Revolutionary War. The preparation of these very valuable genealogical and historic digests, condensed from the original statements of the soldiers themselves, was begun by the Commissioner of Pensions in 1904, upon petition of our St. Louis Congress, acting on the recommendation of the Massachusetts Society.

As authorized by the Syracuse Congress, the Official Bulletin was prepared and issued by the Secretary General in June, October, December, and March, aggregating 199 pages, at a cost of $2,035.01 for printing and mailing, an excess of $35.01 over the appropriation of $2,000 for that purpose. The Bulletin was sent to every member of the Society and to a list of libraries named by the States. This publication was established in 1906. The first two years the edition was limited, being sent only to the National and State Society officers and to the members when subscribed for by the States. By vote of the Buffalo Congress in 1908 it was ordered to be mailed to every member at the expense of the National Society. The total number of pages issued during the seven years beginning with 1908 has been 1,146, or 163 pages a year, at a total cost of $11,781.32, or about 14 cents per capita per year.

The National Year Book for 1914 was published in the usual form, in an edition of 1,000 copies. About 200 of them were sold to the Societies and individual members, and the balance, except a small supply in stock, were distributed, as customary, to National and State Society officers, Local Chapters, delegates attending the Syracuse Congress, and about 100 libraries. The total cost of publication and distribution of the Year Book since 1908 has been $7,089.65 and the receipts from sales about $350, making a net expense to the National Society of about $950 a year.

Respectfully submitted,

A. HOWARD CLARK,
Secretary General.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard the report of the Secretary General. What is your pleasure?

A MEMBER: I move that it be received and placed on file.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is moved and seconded that the report of the Secretary General be received and placed on file. Any remarks? All those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

The next is the report of the Treasurer General. Mr. Nathan Warren, of Massachusetts, former Treasurer General, will read that report, Mr. Burroughs, our present Treasurer General, not being present.

Mr. NATHAN WARREN: Mr. President General, I am requested to read the report of my successor as Treasurer General.

REPORT OF TREASURER GENERAL.

OFFICE OF TREASURER GENERAL, 15 WILLIAM STREET,
NEW YORK, N. Y., June 22, 1915.

Mr. A. HOWARD CLARK,
Secretary General, S. A. R.

MY DEAR MR. CLARK: You will find inclosed my annual report, approved by the Committee on Audit; also my report on the Permanent Fund. You will in addition find a report explaining the reason for a smaller amount of cash on hand this year than what we had the year before. The actual financial condition, however, of the Society is just as strong as ever, and next year I believe will show some improvement.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN H. BURROUGHS,

OFFICE OF TREASURER GENERAL, 15 WILLIAM STREET,
NEW YORK, N. Y., June 22, 1915.

MR. A. HOWARD CLARK,
Secretary General, S. A. R.

MY DEAR MR. CLARK: As the balance of cash on hand May 14, 1915, was $1,229.61 less than that on May 14, 1914, some explanation is due the National Congress in session.

Receipts for annual dues were less than the previous year, owing to three States paying their quota after the closing of the books, aggregating $732—Connecticut, with $586.50; Minnesota, $116.50, and New Mexico, $29. The amounts received from rebates and for the sale of Year Books were also less by $422.46. There was, however, a small increase in interest. From the sale of the "Washington Journey" book and of flags and badges for the pilgrimage $335.50 was added to the receipts.

There were expenditures amounting to $1,059.56 which will not be necessary during the coming fiscal year; these were for printing the "Washington Journey" books, flags and ribbons for the pilgrimage to Cambridge, the purchase of "Pierce's Register," and an appropriation toward preparatory work on the memorial volume of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence. The compatriots will also notice that there was purchased for the Permanent Fund a $1,000 bond of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry.

The appropriation toward the expenses of the Congress at Portland, Oregon, amounting to $500, has not yet been called for and this amount will have to be charged in the expenses of the coming year.

However, the net assets of the Society are not materially decreased.

On May 14, 1914—Cash on hand.....	$9,199.03
Securities owned.....	6,000.00
		$15,199.03
On May 15, 1915—Cash on hand.....	$7,969.42
Securities owned.....	7,000.00
Decrease	$220.61

The Treasurer General wishes to thank the various State Societies for the continued courtesies extended to him by them through their treasurers and secretaries.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN H. BURROUGHS,

REPORT ON THE PERMANENT FUND.

MAY 14, 1915.

The President General and Compatriots of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution:

The Treasurer General has the honor to submit the following report on the Permanent Fund: At the last Annual Congress his report showed that there was on hand $4,000 New York City corporate stock and $2,000 State of New York, Canal 4's, with $392.46 uninvested, since which time there has been received from rebates $223.64. By direction of the Executive Committee, there has been transferred from the General Fund to the Permanent Fund $337.65, and the Committee on Investments has purchased $1,000 Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe General 4's, costing $953.75. There is, therefore, now on hand $7,000—par value of securities.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN H. BURROUGHS,
Treasurer General.

THE SECRETARY GENERAL: I have here the report of the Committee on Investment of the Permanent Fund as to the safety of the Society's property.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY NATIONAL BANK,
PEEKSKILL, N. Y., June 26, 1915.

MR. A. HOWARD CLARK,
Secretary General, S. A. R., Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CLARK: Mr. John H. Burroughs, Treasurer General of the Sons of the American Revolution, desires me to report to you upon the securities now held by the National Society in the vaults of the Equitable Safe Deposit Company, New York City. I find the following securities are now deposited there, namely:

$2,000 State of New York, Canal 4's, 1961.

$2,000 New York City 4's, 1958.

$1,000 New York City 4's, 1959.

$1,000 New York City 4½'s, 1963.

$1,000 Atch., T. & S. Fe 4's, 1995.

Very sincerely yours,

C. A. PUGSLEY,
Chairman Committee on Investment of Permanent Fund.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriots, you have heard the report of your Treasurer General. What is your pleasure?

(It was thereupon moved that said report of the Treasurer General be received, approved, and placed on file; said motion was duly seconded, put to a vote, and carried, and it was so ordered.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I will make an announcement here in regard to the report of the Committee on the Washington Journey Pilgrimage. Compatriot Woodworth, of Syracuse, has prepared quite an address on that subject, with lantern slides, which he will deliver to us; and Compatriot Punderson, who originated the idea and acted as the Chief Marshal of the trip, will make his report. As it will be necessary to darken the room, arrangements have been made to hear this report and address at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and I hope, therefore, that as many of our compatriots as can and their guests and friends will come, for I assure you it is a rare treat.

Next is the report of the Registrar General.

REPORT OF THE REGISTRAR GENERAL.

COMPATRIOTS: From April 30, 1889, when the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution was founded, to the close of the past statistical year, March 31, 1915, 26,712 members were enrolled in the Societies in 46 States, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, the Philippines, and France, and the active roll on April 1 was 13,748 members, after deducting all losses by death and other causes. On July 1 the total enrollment had increased to 27,042, and the active roll was 14,078 members.

There were registered during the year ended March 31 1,151 new members, exceeding in number any previous year, and an increase of 25 per cent above the annual average of the prior decade. New Jersey added the largest number, 155, followed by Illinois, 123; Massachusetts, 110; New York, 94, and Washington State, 80. In present active membership Massachusetts takes the lead with 1,632; then comes New York, 1,443; Connecticut, 1,173; Illinois, 996; New Jersey, 914; Ohio and Pennsylvania (each), 588, and the District of Columbia, 483. Details for each State are as follows:

The losses each year by death and other causes are heavy, but it is gratifying to note that the past year shows a decrease of 111, as compared with the year preceding (692 in 1914, 581 in 1915).

Among the many honored members who have died since the last Congress there should be specially named in this report: Dr. Robert Alonzo Brock, for 16 years Secretary of the Virginia Society; Amasa Mason Eaton, ex-President of the Rhode Island Society; Hon. William Wallace Stephenson, Vice-President of the Kentucky Society; Brig. Gen. Edgar Romeyn Kellogg, of Ohio; George Clinton Batcheller, LL. D., of New York; Hon. Lee McClung, late Treasurer of the United States; Hon. Ezra S. Stearns, of New Hampshire; Thomas W. Prosch, former President of the Washington State Society; Hon. Lindon W. Bates, Jr., of New York, lost on the Lusitania; Hon. Alexander B. Hagner, retired Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia; the Right Rev. Franklin Spencer Spalding, D. D., Episcopal Bishop of Utah; Hon. Curtis Guild, Jr., former Governor of Massachusetts and Ambassador to Russia, and Willard Secor, former Treasurer General and Vice-President General.

The Traveling Banner was presented by the Colorado Society, to be awarded each year to the State numbering 100 or more which makes the greatest net percentage of increase in membership. The banner has been held by Iowa, Maryland, New Jersey, Kentucky, again by Maryland, by Nebraska, and again by New Jersey. It comes now across the continent to a Society which has made a net gain of 31 per cent—the Washington State Society.

In 1908 a generous compatriot donated a gold ceremonial badge to be presented to the State enrolling the greatest proportionate number of sons of present members, and he has since repeated the gift each year. Much interest has been aroused, until it seems to have become a habit for compatriots to have their sons enrolled as soon as manhood is attained. More than fifty sons in all have joined during the past year, and the State of Rhode Island, reporting the greatest proportionate number, is entitled to the badge.

This movement among men of 21 has now extended, and, through the Washington Guard, boys of all ages are being trained to be future earnest workers in our cause. This year we are to accept the Washington Guard flag and streamer presented by Vice-President General Herman W. Fernberger, as announced at the Syracuse Congress. It is to be held for a year by the New Jersey Society for its service in inaugurating the Guard, and each year thereafter it will pass to the Society enrolling the largest number of Guardsmen.

In 1901 there was issued, through the generosity of the late President General Logan, a large volume containing the full pedigree of every member, and annually since then there have appeared in the National Year Book the full pedigrees of all new members, thus making available a great amount of genealogical and military data. There is also kept in the Registrar General's office a card index of all compatriots and of the ancestors upon whom their eligibility is based.

The official rolls of soldiers and sailors of the Revolution are the very foundation of our membership. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, that every effort be made to have these rolls complete.

At the close of the war Paymaster General John Pierce was ordered to make a final settlement with every officer and soldier of the Continental Army, covering every demand for service or other claim, and to issue individual certificates therefor. Ninety-three thousand certificates for nearly $11,000,000 were thus issued, and the record, known as Pierce's Register, is preserved in the Treasury Department. It is the final pay-roll of the Continental Army. In 1786 a few copies of the record were printed and certified for official use. Only three copies are now known to exist—two of them in the Library of Congress and one in the possession of this Society. The register gives the names of about 30,000 officers and soldiers and specifies the amounts paid to each.

Through co-operation with the Daughters of the American Revolution, an alphabetical list of these soldiers prepared by that Society is now in press as part of Senate Document No. 988, 63d Congress, 3d session, and will be on sale by the Public Printer at Washington, D. C.

Another very valuable public document, the compilation and printing of which was accomplished by the Sons of the American Revolution a few years ago, is the roll of some 40,000 soldiers and sailors of France who participated in the American Revolution.

Some progress has recently been made in collecting and classifying, with a view to their publication, many of the scattered military and naval records of the Revolution. It was known that more than 250,000 men served in the Continental Army and in the Militia of the several Colonies, but a critical study of the naval service had not heretofore been made. A careful recent research by Rear Adm. Colby M. Chester, U. S. N., President of the District of Columbia Society, shows that there were 64 vessels in the regular Continental Navy, carrying 1,242 guns, and that the volunteer private-armed fleet numbered 1,250 vessels, with 18,000 guns. The total number of men serving on the sea is known to have been about 70,000, although the names of the majority of them have not yet been ascertained. British vessels to the number of 797 were captured, valued, with their cargoes, at $24,000,000. Prizes were brought into port and the proceeds of the sales divided in accordance with law between the captors and the government. Seventy per cent of the naval fights were won by the Americans, while the army was victorious in but 40 per cent. During the Revolution it seemed to be considered distinctly a gentleman's calling to serve on the sea rather than in the army. Search is being made in State archives and in collections of historical associations, as well as in private collections of manuscripts, for data to make the roll of both the army and navy as complete as practicable before publication by the government. Photostat copies of the various records have been made during the past two years aggregating 30,522 prints, chiefly in Massachusetts, Virginia, and North Carolina.

This important work has been carried on under the direction of the Secretaries of War and Navy in co-operation with the Sons of the American Revolution and other patriotic societies.

In carrying on the routine duties of his office the Registrar General issued last year 852 certificates of membership, nearly 200 more than during the year preceding. He also issued to every new member a permit to purchase the Society badge.

Your Registrar General for the twenty-second time thanks the officers of the State Societies for their courteous co-operation in the endeavor of us all to keep the credentials of our membership above reproach.

Respectfully submitted,

A. HOWARD CLARK,
Registrar General.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriots, you have heard the report of your Registrar General. What is your pleasure?

A MEMBER: I move that the report be accepted and published in the Year Book.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It has been moved and seconded that the report be accepted and published in the Year Book. Any remarks? All those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

In connection with this report it is customary to have certain formal ceremonies immediately following luncheon; therefore, upon reconvening after the luncheon recess, we will have first the delivery of the Traveling Banner from the New Jersey Society to the Washington State Society. A representative of the New Jersey Society will bring in the banner, and he will then make his address and deliver it to the representative of the Washington Society, who will make his address receiving it. The insignia also will follow the Traveling Banner in its order. It will be presented by Compatriot Woodworth, on behalf of the donor, to Compatriot Nathan Warren, of Massachusetts, on behalf of the recipient, there being no representative of the State of Rhode Island present; and Compatriot Warren will be kind enough to see that it is delivered to the Rhode Island Society. Then immediately following that will be the ceremonies connected with the Washington Guard flag, this being the first instance connected with this flag as an annual ceremony. It will be presented to the Washington Guard by Colonel Lauman, of the Illinois Society, acting on behalf of Vice-President General Fernberger, who is giving it for this purpose. It will be received on behalf of our National Society by Mr. Henry, President of our Michigan Society and member of the National Executive Committee, and by him will be transmitted to the representative of the New Jersey Society, who will take it home with him and retain it for a year by reason of the magnificent work which they have done in organizing the Washington Guard.

Next is the report of the Historian General.

Judge MORRIS B. BEARDSLEY: Mr. President General, I understand that the Historian General is not present in the Congress; that his report is quite lengthy, and I move, sir, that the reading of it be dispensed with, and that it be published in full in the Year Book and be accepted.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. Are there any remarks? All those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

REPORT OF HISTORIAN GENERAL.

Mr. President General and Compatriots of the Twenty-sixth Congress of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, Greeting:

Upon this fair city and its environment the thoughts of thousands of patriots are centered today, as the Twenty-sixth Congress of our beloved Society assembles for its annual remembrance of Washington, the patriotic men and women of our country's foundation era, and in furtherance of the activities making our organization effective and famous the world over.

To the compatriots of the Oregon Society fervent expressions of good-will are being expressed in every settlement where our Society has a foothold. As they take up at this time the pleasant duty of host to this midsummer meeting of our Congress the reflected glow of their bountiful hospitality radiates out, I am sure, all over the land and to the abiding places of our membership.

And among the kindly expressions of fellowship for this Congress are those of the survivors of our charter members, the first 200 enrolled by the New Jersey Society, which, as you all know, is the parent organization. The names of these compatriots are enrolled identically in State and National Society.

Of this first membership, 91 have died and 41 remain on the rolls today, many of whom are active. Among the number is our distinguished compatriot, Hon. Franklin Murphy, former President General and Secretary General. His number is 196.

The survivors of the first 100 members of the Society are: John Lawrence Boggs (No. 4), of Newark; Peter B. Fairchild (No. 15), of Orange; George W. Hubbell (No. 17), 346 Broadway, New York; Frederick Frelinghuysen (No. 26), Newark; Frank B. Conover (No. 38), Freehold; Samuel C. Cowart (No. 44), Freehold; David V. Perine (No. 58), Freehold; Horace S. Osborne (No. 65), Newark; George R. Howe (No. 86), East Orange; Henry A. Potter (No. 92), East Orange; Stanford Marsh (No. 95), East Orange; Henry P. Cannon (No. 99), Elizabeth; George P. Mellick (No. 100), Plainfield.

Never in the history of the world has there been such a universality of patriotic enthusiasm as that in evidence at this time. It has gripped millions upon millions in the maelstrom of war, engendered a spirit diametrically opposite to that of the brotherhood of man, and its baleful influences are even felt in our own country.

Indeed, so great was the feeling of depression that several of our State Societies curtailed their work along social lines. Many banquets were abandoned because of the great sorrow felt for those struggling in the awful war on the European continent.

Five of the State Societies received a great uplift as a direct result of the Pilgrimage from Philadelphia to Cambridge June 22 to July 4.

Far-reaching are the effects of this most ambitious undertaking of the National Society.

Historical places in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts have since been visited by many persons whose attention was drawn to them by the now famous tour by automobile.

Valley Forge, Trenton, Princeton, Springfield, N. J., Morristown, the Prison Martyrs' Monument, and the Battle of Long Island, old New York, New Haven, Compo Beach, Springfield, Mass., and Cambridge, and many, many other places mean more to the present generation than ever before because of this Pilgrimage.

Generous publicity by the newspapers and magazines gave a prominence to it and to our Society that was helpful in many ways. It was noted by the public before the tour had fairly begun that it was composed of serious-minded men and women, bent upon an important patriotic errand, that of marking Washington's route in 1775, when he proceeded to the command of the army at Cambridge, and it was so treated by all the publications of the country, many of which featured pictorially places marked by the Pilgrims.

Let us all trust on another occasion, not far distant, there will be another Pilgrimage, and that it will be to Washington's Headquarters at Morristown, which has been briefly described in previous reports from this office.

Excellent opportunity is afforded for placing a bronze statue of the General on the lawn in front of the mansion, where so many important days were spent by our illustrious chief.

It is hoped that the tribute will be placed by the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and that if it is finally erected there will be a grand rally at this old-time and historic headquarters upon the day of dedication.

Now one of the patriotic shrines of our country, Washington's Headquarters at Morristown, is visited annually by thousands of persons. It was visited by the Pilgrims on June 25, the third day out from Philadelphia.

During the summer of 1873 the mansion was offered for sale and, under the leadership of former Governor and United States Senator T. F. Randolph, it was purchased by a company of New Jersey patriots, who formed themselves into an organization, known ever since as the Washington Association of New Jersey, the membership fee being $100.

Immediately upon being made acquainted with this act, the New Jersey Legislature enacted a statute granting a charter to the association. This gives total exemption of taxation, prohibition to the erection of any unsightly objects adjacent thereto, police powers upon or near the grounds, and the semi-annual payment from the State treasury of $1,250 for repairs and maintenance.

The capital stock is limited to $50,000 and is transferable only with the consent of the association; then only to a male descendant of the holder. If no descendant claims it within five years after the death of a holder, then the stock becomes the property of the State.

Thus it will be seen that perpetual care and custody is given this famous structure.

Our Society could show its appreciation of Washington's services, particularly in that most rigorous winter, with its attendant sufferings, that winter of 1779-1780, in no better way than by erecting a noble statue of this our most distinguished American citizen upon the grounds of this patriotic environment.

Increasing observance of Independence Day, Flag Day, and Washington's Birthday are noted, though the latter was not so generally observed in 1915 as in other years on account of depression caused by the Great War.

Many States had numerous observances of Flag Day in 1914 and 1915. In several Commonwealths the holding of exercises in public schools on the anniversary of the flag's birthday is made obligatory by law.

One of the most intelligent ways in which we can give our patriotism expression is through the erection of liberty poles, their dedication and the display of the flag therefrom. The ceremony appeals to the higher emotions of every citizen, and both flag and pole are constant reminders of our duty and monitors of public department.

Every home claiming protection of the United States should possess an American flag and display it at least upon the patriotic holidays and anniversaries.

During the year 1914-1915, besides the remembrance of many local anniversaries, tablets were dedicated marking places of historical importance. On July 4, 1914, a tablet was dedicated on the outer wall of the Dutch Reformed Church at Paramus, near Ridgewood, N. J., by the New Jersey Society, noting the fact that Washington had encamped near that edifice during the latter part of the War for American Independence. A tablet was dedicated on July 30, 1914, on the north end of the Winooski Bridge, at Burlington, Vt., by the Vermont Society. It marks the first settlement and the site of the block-house erected in 1773, known as Fort Frederick. President General Thruston and Secretary General Clark were the guests of the Vermont Society on that occasion.

During the year inquiries for papers containing addresses have increased. About ten requests were made for copies and these were all promptly complied with. The only charge is that for copying. Every address is available to every member of the Society. One compatriot wrote for a copy of a certain address which was needed only in case the speaker failed to appear. This is a most excellent way to prevent disappointment when a meeting is left without a speaker. This feature gives evidence of greater usefulness in the very near future.

Attention is specially called to the exhibit in charge of General Beebe, of the Oregon Society, and which is at the headquarters in the Masonic Temple. A selected list of articles, all of vital interest to the compatriots, are arranged for inspection. Every delegate and every compatriot in the city will find many interesting pamphlets, pictures, etc. The object of the exhibit is twofold: First, to give an idea of the activities of the Society and, second, to give ideas for carrying on the work in the respective States.

At the holiday season your Historian made an effort to arouse the patriotic spirit of the country. Reminders were sent to every National officer, to the State Societies, and others in the country, asking that the 138th anniversary of the Battle of Trenton be remembered on December 26 by a moment's reflection upon the heroic movement of Washington and his starving and ragged band of patriots on the memorable night of that day. It was thought that in this way a gleam might penetrate the depressed atmosphere caused by the war and its effect upon this country.

Gratifying replies were received from compatriots, many of whom participated enthusiastically in the thought suggested. That Christmas night, 1776, was one, most positively, of deepest distress to Washington.

New Jersey, as the parent State, has well-sustained her record for patriotic activity. Society and Chapters have held many meetings during the year, and every section of the Commonwealth has felt the impetus of the enthusiasm.

As usual, the observance of Washington's Birthday at the headquarters in Morristown attracted several hundred distinguished Jerseymen and guests. The speaker, Compatriot William Howard Taft, former President of the United States, gave a most illuminating and instructive address on the general subject of neutrality, using Washington's strong position on the question in analyzing the theme.

Peculiarly is it our privilege to inculcate as far as possible the true spirit of patriotism into the national life. A general observance of Flag Day by State Societies and Chapters will help greatly, along with other observances, in accomplishing this end. This should be done especially where there are extensive foreign settlements.

Patriotism is something that must be felt according to each individual's temperament. If one receives the subtle spirit in a way that straightens the spinal column and the conscience, if they have become warped, then there is indeed a notable accession to the patriotic ranks. When in full glow the spirit of patriotism overwhelms, uplifts, and makes for civic righteousness and national greatness in a very large measure, much more so than the demagogue on the street corner haranguing about rights.

Reports from various State Societies in the Union indicate a growing interest in the display of the flag and its reverence. Our flag has a loyal following, but a deeper individual consecration to it and the institutions of our country are needed.

It has been a year of very pleasant memories in the patriotic work of our Society. To all the compatriots who have assisted in making the office of Historian General a real workshop during the past year and those preceding grateful appreciation is expressed. It has truly been a labor of love, this work of our Society.

As members of a most democratic Society, we have assumed a mighty responsibility in the country's welfare. Ideals we have and they must be applied to the good of all. Every individual owes something to the community, the State, and nation. He is untrue to himself and to his forbears if he shirks that which is his bounden duty to perform.

Is the man who in excess pleasure-making forgets responsibility of citizenship justified in complaining against evil practices in high places? This is one of the greatest dangers of our country, the absolute indifference of the man of leisure, who sees little else beyond his own horizon.

And so it follows as truly as the sun courses the heavens during the day that minute men are needed in the 1915 era, with full equipment for combating these untoward influences. More wholesome respect for the flag, more dignified public demeanor, and a more concentrated effort along patriotic lines, and the adoption of the doctrine of the brotherhood of man are the accoutrements needed by the twentieth-century patriots.

Forward our banner of the Sons of the American Revolution is leading us into the battle against indifference, selfishness, and ignorance, with the emblem of Washington and his patriots and our emblem today, the emblem of a highly organized civilizing force leading the way to victory.

Eternal vigilance is necessary if we are to finally plant our flag, representing a citizenship of 100,000,000, strongly welded together, upon the ramparts of the enemy to right living for all of God's people.

DAVID L. PIERSON,
Historian General.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Next are reports of standing committees. That of the Auditing and Finance Committee has already been made in connection with the Treasurer General's report. The report of the Memorial Committee is next.

It is my pleasure to introduce to you one of our dearest and best compatriots in the whole organization, General Bradley. (Applause.)

REPORT OF MEMORIAL COMMITTEE.

GEN. EDWARD E. BRADLEY, of New Haven: Mr. President General and Compatriots, I very much regret that I cannot include the ladies, who graced this session by their presence this morning, in my opening salutation; but as this is strictly a business meeting I suppose I must speak to the men only.

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: I don't see any reason why you should ever omit the ladies. (Laughter and applause.) God bless them; we always like to have them with us.

GENERAL BRADLEY: Well, with the permission implied by the President General, I will say "and Ladies." This report, Mr. President General, of the Memorial Committee should be made, of course, by our chairman, Professor Armstrong; but as he could not be present it has been delegated to me to read this report. And I want to say just a word regarding Professor Armstrong. He has taken a deep interest in the work of the committee and has been indefatigable in its work, and I know that you all regret with me that he is not here to present the report in person.

REPORT OF MEMORIAL COMMITTEE.

COMPATRIOTS: The Congress held at Syracuse in 1914 provided for a Memorial Committee of thirteen members, and said committee was specifically charged with two separate and distinct lines of investigation.

Your Memorial Committee was directed, in the first place, to continue its efforts to ascertain accurately the location of the grave of each of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence. A report on this subject was made to the Syracuse Congress and was published in the National Year Book, 1914, pages 119-123.

As a result of its work during the past year, your committee is glad to report that the burial places of several Signers which were previously unknown have either been ascertained, with a fair degree of probability, or have been accurately and finally determined. These data are primarily for reference, and so we shall, with your permission, omit the reading of them; but we ask that they be printed in the Year Book as supplemental to the report made last year.

We now pass to the second duty assigned to your committee; we were to obtain estimates of the cost of publishing a suitably illustrated volume on the Signers of the Declaration, similar in general form to the monographs which have already been published by several of the State Societies.

This question in its very nature is indefinite and complicated. Let us assume that the manuscripts are ready for the printer, and also that the plates for the printing of the pictures have been provided either by our National Society or by our State Societies without any expense to the printer. Let us assume that our National Society makes a contract with some publishing house for the printing and binding of the proposed memorial volume; that such book is to contain 400 pages of printed matter and 120 pages of pictures; that sixty of these pictures are to be printed on the paper used in the body of the book and sixty on inserts, faced with a leaf of tissue paper, making a total of 520 pages; that the binding be full cloth, and that the edition be 2,000 volumes. The cost of such an edition is estimated at $1,620. This figure, be it clearly understood, does not include the preparation of the manuscript nor the securing of the plates for the pictures.

We have now reported on the two topics specially referred to this committee. We will conclude our report with a statement of the progress that has been made in the preparation of manuscript and other material for the proposed memorial volume.

At a meeting of the National Executive Committee, held on November 24, 1914, a resolution was passed favoring the publication, under the joint auspices of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution and the Descendants of the Signers, to include a biography of each Signer, to be as fully illustrated as practicable, and the same resolution provided that three members of the Memorial Committee should act with a like committee from the Descendants of the Signers in arranging for the preparation, with a view to its publication, of said memorial volume.

The three members chosen to represent the Sons of the American Revolution on this joint committee were Prof. William C. Armstrong, Mr. Edward Hagaman Hall, and Gen. Edward E. Bradley. The Descendants of the Signers appointed as their representatives Mr. Charles Thornton Adams, Mr. Gordon Woodbury, and Judge Albert McClellan Mathewson. This joint committee met at Fraunces Tavern, New York city, on January 30, 1915; Professor Armstrong was chosen chairman and Mr. Adams was chosen secretary.

The preparation of material was commenced at once, and the work has been pushed forward as rapidly as is consistent with the insurance of correct literary form and with thoroughness and accuracy of research.

In addition to the biographical sketches which will constitute the body of the book, it is the desire of the committee to include the Declaration itself and brief accounts of several matters very intimately connected with the signing thereof.

Permission has been obtained from the various State Societies for the use of such brochures on the Signers as have been published, for which favor and privilege the committee is glad to extend their sincere thanks.

But a straight contract for a given number of books is not the only method of placing our memorial volume before the public. It is suggested that an arrangement might be made with some responsible house for the publication of our book, said house to print and market the same for the prospect of possible profits for the house, our Society agreeing to buy a specified number of copies of the first edition sufficient to insure the publisher against loss. It would seem wise to refer this matter to the Executive Committee of the National Society, with power.

But the work immediately in hand is the completion of the manuscripts and other material for the printer; the method of work has been outlined and substantial progress has already been made. It seems equitable that our National Society should bear half the expense and the Descendants of the Signers half.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM C. ARMSTRONG,
Chairman.

BURIAL PLACES OF THE SIGNERS.

Supplemental to the Report of May, 1914 (National Year Book, 1914, pages 120-123).

4. Carter Braxton, of Virginia, was born at Newington, on the north bank of the Mattaponi River, in the County of King and Queen. The site of Newington itself is a promontory, and the river winds around it on two sides.

Three miles from Newington is the Mattaponi Church, which was originally an Episcopal Church and was built before the Revolutionary War. In that churchyard Carter Braxton was buried. The grave is about 50 feet from the southern door of the church. The tombstone is a flat slab, resting on a brick foundation about 2½ feet high.

This information concerning Carter Braxton has been furnished by Mr. Charles R. Hoskins, of Newport News, Va., through the courtesy of Compatriot C. Loomis Allen, of Syracuse, N. Y.

(Frederick Horner wrote a History of the Blair, Barrister, and Braxton families, which was published by Lippincott in 1898. It is stated therein that Carter Braxton the Signer was buried, together with his two wives, at Chericoke, but that no gravestones mark the spot. Said statement (made in that book) is given on the authority of Tomlin Braxton, of Chericoke Falls P. O., King William Co., Va.)

17. John Hart, of New Jersey.

Some writers have confused John De Hart, of Elizabethtown, N. J., who was a member of the First Continental Congress in 1774, with John Hart, of Hopewell, the Signer, who was a member of the Second Continental Congress. Both were delegates from New Jersey to the Continental Congress, but De Hart's services ended before Hart's services began.

19. Thomas Heyward, Jr., of South Carolina, died and was buried at his country seat, Whitehall, in St. Luke's Parish, near Charleston, S. C.

26. Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, breathed his last at Chantilly, June 19, 1794, and was buried in the old family burial place at the "Burnt House Fields," Mt. Pleasant, Westmoreland County, Va., "as he desired in his will."

Those who are not familiar with the genealogy of the Lee family sometimes confuse the Signer with Gen. Henry Lee, who was known as "Lighthorse Harry." Lighthorse Harry Lee was buried on Cumberland Island, off the coast of Georgia, and in 1913 was reinterred in the mausoleum in the chapel at Washington and Lee University, at Lexington, Va.

28. Philip Livingston, of New York, is buried in Prospect Cemetery, near York, Pa.

He is sometimes confused with a nephew of his, who bore the same name and who is buried in Trinity churchyard, New York City.

31. Arthur Middleton, of South Carolina, died January 1, 1788, at his home on the Ashley River and was buried in his family burying ground at his plantation.

41. George Ross, of Pennsylvania, was buried in Christ Church burial ground, Fifth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

43. Edward Rutledge, of South Carolina, died in 1800 at Charleston, S. C., and was buried in St. Philip's Churchyard.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriots, you have heard the report of this committee. What is your pleasure?

Mr. ELMER M. WENTWORTH: I move you, Mr. President General, that the report be received with the thanks of this Congress and referred to the Executive Committee for further action.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

Dr. SAMUEL JUDD HOLMES, of Washington: Mr. President General, the work is not complete yet.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It will be within the province of the Executive Committee to continue it—that is, the idea—and it shall be continued through the Executive Committee. Are there any remarks? In connection with this I want to call attention to the Official Bulletin of this Society for June, 1915, with several pages on the Declaration of Independence, prepared by the Secretary General, giving information that almost nobody in the United States knows anything about. I will read some of this, because I think it is desirable for you to know it.

In Continental Congress, on June 17, 1776, Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved.

"That it is expedient forthwith to take the most effectual measures for forming foreign alliances.

"That a plan of confederation be prepared and transmitted to the respective Colonies for their approbation."

On June 10 it was voted to postpone consideration of the first resolution for three weeks, with a proviso that a committee be appointed "to prepare a declaration to the effect of the said first resolution."

On June 11 Jefferson, Adams, Franklin, Sherman, and R. R. Livingston were appointed to prepare the Declaration to serve as a preamble to the independence resolution.

On June 28 the Jefferson Committee submitted a draft of the Declaration, which was laid on the table for later consideration.

On July 1 Congress voted to resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider "the resolution respecting independency" and to refer the Declaration to said committee. The resolution as agreed to by the Committee of the Whole was reported to the Congress and "the determination thereof was postponed, at the request of a colony, till tomorrow."

On July 2 the resolution was adopted by the Congress. The Declaration was on that day considered in Committee of the Whole, and was again taken up on July 3.

Now, on July 2 the resolution was adopted. The United States of America declared their independence from Great Britain on July 2, 1776. Remember that.

On July 4 the Declaration, which included the first paragraph of the resolution, was agreed to by the Committee of the Whole, reported to the Congress, and adopted.

The so-called Declaration of July 4 was really a summary of our reasons for passing the resolution of independence two days before. On July 4 it was Ordered, That the Declaration be authenticated and printed.

"That the committee appointed to prepare the Declaration superintend and correct the press.

"That copies of the Declaration be sent to the several assemblies, conventions, and committees, or councils of safety, and to the several commanding officers of the Continental troops; that it be proclaimed in each of the United States, and at the head of the army."

In accordance with the above order, the Declaration was issued as a printed broadside on July 5, with the heading: "In Congress, July 4, 1776. A Declaration by the Representatives of the United States of America in General Congress assembled." It bore the name in print of John Hancock, President, and was attested by Secretary Charles Thomson. It was proclaimed at public meetings in Philadelphia and Trenton on July 8 and on subsequent dates throughout the colonies.

On July 19 the Congress

"Resolved, That the Declaration passed on the 4th * * * be fairly engrossed on parchment, with the title and style of 'The Unanimous Declaration of the thirteen United States of America,' and that the same, when engrossed, be signed by every member of Congress."

And therefore you will see the statement made that every member of Congress was required to sign the Declaration of Independence. They either had to win or hang together, and they knew what they were doing when they passed that resolution.

It could not have been headed "Unanimous" on July 4, for the New York delegates had not then been authorized to agree to it, and it was not until July 15 that it was announced in the Continental Congress that the Assembly of New York had approved the Declaration, and thus made it unanimous.

On August 2 "the Declaration of Independence, being engrossed and compared at the table, was signed by the members." Those who were not present on August 2 affixed their signatures at later dates; all but one had signed before January 18, 1777.

It has been ascertained that of the fifty-six Signers more than one-fourth were not present on July 4, and seven of them—Thornton, Williams, Rush, Clymer, Smith, Taylor, and Ross—were not members on that date. On the other hand, seven members of that date—George Clinton, John Alsop, R. R. Livingston, Henry Wisner, Thomas Willing, Charles Humphreys, and John Rogers—had not the privilege of becoming "Signers," for the membership of all but one had ceased prior to August 2.

The original parchment, now very much faded, is carefully preserved in an air-tight, light-proof case in the library of the State Department at Washington, a facsimile serving for public exhibition.

The first official issue of the Declaration bearing the names of the Signers was printed as a broadside in Baltimore, under resolution of January 18, 1777, ordering that copies be sent to each of the United States, with the request "to have the same put upon record." The illustration of this broadside, shown in the present Bulletin, is reproduced from one of the four copies now known to exist. It is authenticated by John Hancock, as President, and attested by Secretary Thomson. It is interesting to note that the name of Thomas McKean does not appear thereon. The date of his signing is uncertain, some authorities placing it as late as 1781.

There are at present about seventy-five members of the Sons of the American Revolution who are descendants of thirty-one of the Signers. There are also descendants of two of the seven members of the Continental Congress who voted for the Declaration on July 4, but who had not the privilege of signing the engrossed copy on August 2 or thereafter.

In that same Official Bulletin is a facsimile of the engrossed Declaration with the signatures of the Signers, and also a photographic reproduction of the copy printed by order of Congress of January 18, 1777.

Now, those are facts that very few people know about, and before you study the conditions existing at the time that that Declaration was passed, and the fact that every man, when he signed that Declaration, realized that if the American Colonies did not gain their independence it meant that every one of those fifty-six Signers would be hung, shot, or beheaded as a traitor to his country. Each one of those fifty-six knew what he was doing when he entered into that act; and, although this changes our knowledge of the true history of that event, it really increases in our minds the magnitude of what those men did. It makes us realize that this was not hurriedly passed by a Congress, but was done by men who felt that their lives and their fortunes and the lives and fortunes of their families were all at stake. It is more awe-inspiring than any other account of the Declaration of Independence that I have ever read or thought of. I think it is one well worth retaining and remembering by all of us here. (Applause.)

Now the report of the Committee on Organization, North and West, by Mr. Bowman, of Illinois. I have the pleasure, gentlemen, of introducing to you the Secretary of the Illinois Society, one of the livest wires in the whole Sons of the American Revolution. (Applause.)

Mr. LOUIS A. BOWMAN, of Chicago: This is the only time I ever knew our President General to exaggerate unduly. This report was prepared by Mr. Fyfe, of Detroit, the chairman of the committee, who sends a letter regretting his absence and reports as follows:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ORGANIZATION—NORTH AND WEST.

The report of your Committee on Organization, when made in detail, must of necessity be more or less a repetition of the various State Societies, and for this reason I deem it advisable not to burden your records with an extended report, which would, at best, be but a duplicate of the regular reports of the State Societies, but rather to make a few suggestions and give a brief outline of what has been done in my own State of Michigan.

It is generally conceded that if our National Society is to be increased in membership and influence, it must be done chiefly through the organization of new Chapters in the various States. However much the State Societies located in our large cities may endeavor to gain membership from the smaller towns, there will always be a feeling that they are not fully in sympathy with non-resident members.

There are in all probability as many men eligible to membership in the Sons of the American Revolution as there are women eligible to membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution, whose organization is shaped to encourage the formation of Chapters in the smaller towns, and yet the membership of the women's organization is incomparably greater than that of the men. If the proper effort is put forth in this direction, there is no doubt but that the result would be astonishing.

The development of Chapter organizations in Michigan has been as follows:

On January 15, 1897, eleven members of the State Society residing in Grand Rapids applied for a charter for a Chapter within the counties of Kent, Ottawa, Allegan, Kalamazoo, Ionia, Barry, and Muskegon. This charter was granted March 12, 1897, the Chapter being named the Western Michigan Chapter, and continued in existence until March 27, 1914. During this period forty-three gentlemen residing within these counties were members of the State Society.

From the organization of the State Society the great majority of the members resided in Detroit, and it was the custom for the State Society to hold its social functions in the city of Detroit. The members of the Western Michigan Chapter began to feel that the State Society was in fact rather a local affair, monopolized by the residents of Detroit, and to which they contributed their annual dues without opportunity of participating in the expenditure of the same. This disaffection resulted in a gradual diminishing of membership in Grand Rapids and other parts of the State.

To remedy this situation, the members residing in Detroit decided to divorce their local social functions from the activities of the State Society and to carry on their own local entertainments through the agency of a local organization. They applied for a charter for a Detroit Chapter with territorial limits comprising Wayne County. The charter for this Chapter was granted May 2, 1913. The Chapter was organized and a constitution adopted November 1, 1913. All members of the State Society residing in Detroit were invited to become members. Of the 266 members of the State Society residing in Detroit, only 28 have declined affiliation with the local Chapter. The Detroit Chapter holds monthly meetings during the winter season at the hotels, clubs, and, by invitation, at the residences of members. At these meetings an address is given upon some topic of interest, followed by a general discussion participated in by the members. Refreshments and social intercourse follow. The success of the Detroit Chapter became an established fact.

March 27, 1914, the members of the Western Michigan Chapter relinquished all territorial rights under their charter of 1897 to counties other than Kent, and received in return a new charter for a Kent County Chapter. The membership, which had diminished greatly, at once began to increase. During the past year thirteen new members have been added and four former members reinstated. Grand Rapids now has a membership of twenty-eight.

Upon the same date, March 27, 1914, five members residing in Washtenaw County, together with eleven new members whom they had secured, were granted a charter for the County of Washtenaw. This Chapter, with headquarters at Ann Arbor, now has a membership of twenty-one. Being situated at the State University, its opportunity for influence is wide.

January 22, 1915, ten gentlemen residing in Mt. Pleasant were admitted to membership in this Society and granted a charter for a Chapter for Isabella County. Their membership included an actual son of the Revolution—Peter Alverson Wilsey—who passed away shortly after the Chapter was organized. The membership in the Mt. Pleasant Chapter is now eleven.

February 22, 1915, five members residing at Kalamazoo met and formed a provisional organization for the establishment of a Local Chapter in that county.

Future Chapters are promised by local workers at Marquette, Lansing, Pontiac, and Port Huron, at each of which localities the Society has about five members.

The State Society receives from each new applicant an admission fee of $5, and has adopted the plan of returning to Local Chapters where such exist one-half of this admission fee. All members of the State Society pay annual dues of $3, whether members of Local Chapters or not. The amount of Local Chapter dues is optional with each Chapter. Members of the Detroit Chapter pay Chapter dues of $2. Ann Arbor charges $1.

There can be no question but what the organization of Local Chapters greatly stimulates interest in this Society throughout the State. Its effect upon the growth of membership in this Society may be noted as follows:

For the ten years ending in 1913 there had been no growth in membership in this Society, losses by death and resignation being just equal to the gain from new members. In the year ending April 1, 1914, twenty-four members were admitted, and the year ending April 1, 1915, sixty-two members were admitted.

At the request of the Secretary the officers of the Local Chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution have communicated to this Society the names of male relatives of members of such Local Chapters. Of these a card index has been kept, and invitations to membership have been extended to those eligible. The names of residents of adjoining States, whose eligibility has come to the attention of the Secretary, have been communicated to the Secretary of their respective jurisdictions. In one case the Secretary has received from the Secretary of another State names of eligible residents in Michigan. Interest in various localities throughout the State has been aroused through the sending by the Secretary to local newspapers articles referring to organization of Local Chapters.

In the vast territory under the jurisdiction of your committee there was, in May, 1914, only twenty-three Local Chapters. These were distributed as follows: Michigan, 3; Illinois, 2; Iowa, 5; Missouri, 2; Nebraska, 1; Colorado, 4; California, 2; Washington, 4.

The other States in the North and West have as yet organized no Local Chapters, maintaining merely the State organizations. During the year two additional Chapters have been organized in Michigan. The By-Laws of the Minnesota Society have been amended to provide for Local Chapters, and the George Washington Chapter has been organized at Minneapolis. In Nebraska the Fremont Chapter was installed February 18, 1915, with interesting ceremonies. There is a sturdy body of successful men at Fremont, originally largely settled by Americans with Puritan ancestry, and already a movement is on foot in the new Chapter for the erection of a monument there of John C. Fremont by the members of the Society there. A Chapter of from 75 to 100 members is expected to be installed soon at Lincoln, Nebraska, including a real son of a Revolutionary sire—Nelson Moore.

At the risk of seeming excessively persistent, I cannot close this report without urging upon the National Society the importance of encouraging the organization of Local Chapters outside of State Societies, which are located only in our large cities, the country at large having little or no opportunity to become affiliated with the organization, however much they may desire to do so.

RICHARD H. FYFE,

Chairman Committee on Organization—North and West.

DETROIT, MICH., June 18, 1915.

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard the report of your Committee on Organization—North and West. What is your pleasure?

A MEMBER: I move that it be received and filed.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Is there any objection? If not, it will be so ordered. The report will be received and filed.

Next in order is the report of the Committee on Organization—South, by Mr. J. B. Hundley. It is my pleasure to introduce to you, gentlemen, the President of the Kentucky Society, which entertained our National organization on its first Annual Congress in 1890 and again in 1911.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ORGANIZATION—SOUTH.

Mr. JOHN B. HUNDLEY, of Louisville: Mr. President General and Compatriots, I regret that the chairman of our committee is not here. He is absent on account of sickness in his family and I have been requested to read his report.

I will say in preface that as a member of this committee I have written quite a number of letters to different States—the Carolinas, Louisiana, Florida—urging them to organize their Societies and build them up, and in conjunction with the chairman of the committee; but the success, as you will see from his report, has not been at all satisfactory; in fact, I did not succeed in getting a single reply out of the number of letters that I wrote—I did not receive a single reply, and I made my report to the chairman of the committee, Mr. Boardman, at Nashville, Tenn., and he replied and said: "Well, now, you have done your work faithfully, but it seems that we will have to put some dynamite under these fellows to get them interested."

The chairman of the committee, Mr. Boardman, reports as follows:

A very earnest effort was made by your committee to push the work of the Society in the Southern States. Very soon after the Congress of 1914 the depressed condition in the Southern States, due to the low price of cotton, made it apparent that it would be impossible for your committee to make very much progress during the year. The efforts begun during 1913 to organize a Society in the State of Georgia were continued and these efforts were still being made. We have not been able to organize the Georgia Society, but we have taken in the Tennessee Society quite a number of members living in Georgia, and I believe it is a question of only a short time before the Society will be formed in Georgia. The chairman of your committee visited the Louisiana Society in December, on invitation from that Society, and addressed them after their annual meeting. The Louisiana Society stated that they would make every possible effort to increase the activity of their Society, and also stated they would get in communication with the Alabama Society with the idea of increasing the Society's activities in both States.

A small increase was made in the membership of the Tennessee Society and the prospects are that a continued gain will be made for that Society.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM K. BOARDMAN, Chairman.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: You have heard the report, gentlemen. Without objection it will go through the usual course, being received.

filed, and printed in the Year Book. Is there any objection? Then that method will be adopted.

Next is the report of the Committee on Education.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, I would suggest that the report of the Committee on Education, no member of it being present, be received and filed.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: You have heard the motion, gentlemen, there being no member of the Committee on Education present, the report of said committee be received and filed. It has been moved and seconded. Is there any objection? All those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. It is passed.

DENVER, COLO., June 19, 1915.

To the Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution, Meeting at Portland, Oregon.

COMPATRIOTS: We are pleased to report that your Committee on Education is advised of much work done by the various State Societies and Local Chapters over the country. Much of this activity has been in school work, but patriotic addresses delivered and papers read before our organizations have contributed not a little to the dissemination of knowledge among adults as well. Keen interest in patriotic matters has doubtless been aroused by the war abroad, and the opportunity is now presented for our State Societies to cultivate this increased spirit of patriotism among the citizens of their commonwealths.

Many prizes and medals were offered to pupils of the public schools on subjects pertinent to the history of the American Revolution. In a majority of cases these prizes have been the bronze or silver medal of our Society. A demand is noticed for framed copies of the Declaration of Independence and pictures of noted historical events by the public schools, even to a greater extent than for flags.

Among the Societies and Chapters awarding medals during the year are the Oak Park Chapter, of Illinois; the Connecticut Society; the Iowa Society, which awarded medals to students in colleges and schools for the best work in the study of the history of the United States; the Kansas Society; the Ohio Society, Anthony Wayne Chapter, awarded the Society medals to ward and parochial schools in Toledo; the Empire State Society; the New Jersey Society presented bronze and silver medals to the Newark High School; the Louisiana Society presented two silver medals; the Massachusetts Society; the Delaware Society, and the California Society.

The Colorado Society and its Chapters have been active in many branches of educational work. Addresses at the monthly Chapter meetings have been reproduced in the newspapers or read before other patriotic bodies. Two medals were given students of the public schools for patriotic essays. Some 600 pamphlets were distributed among our newly made citizens. The big public meeting held in the City Auditorium this year was even a greater success than its two annual predecessors. This function is given by The Washington-Lincoln Commemorative Association, organized by members of our State Society, your chairman having the honor of being president. It is held at some date between the 12th and 22d of February, and is now regarded as one of the most important public entertainments of a patriotic nature given in this State, the attendance this year being over ten thousand.

This Association is also making arrangements to receive the Liberty Bell in a fitting manner upon its arrival in Denver the 10th of July. The program planned is educational to a high degree and the school children of this city are to be the leading participants. As usual in affairs given by this Association, they will be held under the patronage of the Governor of Colorado and Mayor of Denver. Since the chairman of your Committee on Education was recently elected a Director of the Board of Education of this city, we are even in better position to be of use as a National Committeeman. A number of somewhat original ideas will be tested out in patriotic work in the public schools of Denver during the next school year and the results will be carefully summarized for the benefit of our Society.

Respectfully submitted,

CLARKSON N. GUYER,
Chairman Committee on Education.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Next are the reports of the special committees. The first is the report of the Committee on Information for Aliens.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, the chairman of the committee is unable to be present. The next member on the committee is the Secretary General, but I fear you will get tired of hearing my voice, and I would request that Judge Beardsley be invited to read the report.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have ex-President Beardsley. You ought to know him better than you do me. (Applause.)

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON INFORMATION FOR ALIENS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31, 1915.

MR. PRESIDENT GENERAL, COMPATRIOTS: In making its eighth annual report the Committee on Information for Aliens takes great pleasure in stating that its work for better citizenship has almost doubled during the year. The committee has formed closer relations with other societies working for the same ends and thereby has increased its sphere of usefulness. Neither our National Society nor our State Societies have the organization or equipment for independently carrying out this work to its fullest extent; but by co-ordinating our facilities with those of the State Executive Committee of the Young Men's Association and the Industrial and Immigrant Departments of that Association, the Associated Young Men's Hebrew Associations, Immigrant Welfare Committees, New Citizen Allegiance, City Immigration Bureaus, like that of the city of Cleveland; Civic Leagues, Public Libraries, and Public Night Schools, and still other organizations, your committee feels that it has done its best year's work. It has aided societies from coast to coast. It has advised our State Societies and Chapters to appoint committees to co-operate with other societies, and that its members, as individuals, could be of great assistance. Our Executive Committee and President General, after careful consideration, decided that the time was opportune to appeal to the State Societies and Local Chapters for a more active co-operation in this work, and on January 20 the following letter was sent out by the President General:

OFFICE OF PRESIDENT GENERAL, COLUMBIA BUILDING,
LOUISVILLE, KY., January 20, 1915.

To State Societies and Local Chapters.

COMPATRIOTS: The Sons of the American Revolution began a most important work of practical patriotism when the National Executive Committee, on October 1, 1907, approved a form of leaflet on "The United States: Its Opportunities, Government, and Institutions," and established a Committee on Information for Aliens to arrange for its publication in various languages and its distribution among immigrants and children of foreign-born parents throughout the land. Several hundred thousand of the above leaflet in English and thirteen foreign languages, and of a later one on "Naturalization," and copies of the "Constitution of the United States," have since been widely distributed among aliens in industrial centers and in night schools in many parts of the country.

"Americanism is not determined by race or place of birth, but by the spirit that is in a man." The thirteen colonies were settled by peoples of several tongues, and in 1775 one-fifth of the inhabitants could not speak English, while one-half was of other than Anglo-Saxon descent. During succeeding decades immigration brought to our shores hundreds of thousands of many nationalities, culminating in some ten million arrivals during the last decade and resulting in a present proportion of as much as 30 per cent of foreign-born inhabitants in some of the States.

To bring about the early and intelligent assimilation of this immense host, imbued with high ideals and a full sense of the personal responsibility of each individual in a government like ours, is a most patriotic endeavor. The entry of these masses into the full privilege of citizenship should be made an impressive event in their lives.

Upon the recommendation of the Syracuse Congress and of the National Executive Committee, your President General calls upon each State Society and Local Chapter of Sons of the American Revolution to take such measures as may be feasible through conference with bar associations and judges of United States courts, and of other courts having jurisdiction thereof, to establish simple but dignified and impressive ceremonies when oaths of allegiance are administered to groups of new citizens, in order that these may most fully comprehend the solemnity and importance of the duties assumed by them as they become members of the body politic.

It is further recommended and urged by your President General that local committees be appointed to initiate methods to benefit the foreigners in our midst, or to co-operate with agencies already in existence, equipped for effective work in this direction, in their most commendable systematic plan of maintaining classes and lecture courses for teaching new-comers the English language; for instructing them in the rights, duties, and obligations of citizenship; for improving their living conditions, and for promoting their general uplift in every direction.

The Executive Committee and your President General specially request that this letter be read before the next meeting of your Society, and that action be promptly had, either by the Society or its Board of Managers, to give effect to the suggestions herein contained.

Cordially yours,

R. C. BALLARD THURSTON,
President General.

At the same time the method of administering the oath of allegiance to aliens was considered, and it was felt by all that some of our courts and citizens in general should have their attention called to the present manner of creating the new citizen.

On January 25 the President General sent the following letter to all Federal or State Court judges, some fifteen hundred in number, who, under the law, may administer the oath of allegiance to the new citizen:

OFFICE OF PRESIDENT GENERAL, COLUMBIA BUILDING,
LOUISVILLE, KY., January 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR: The importance of impressing upon those who are becoming American citizens through the process of naturalization a due sense of what they are doing and the duties and obligations they are assuming is becoming more and more manifest with each succeeding year. Too often it has been regarded as perfunctory merely, and the proceedings, including the oath administered to the new citizen, have been characterized with an apparent indifference, suggestive of a disagreeable duty to be gotten through with as speedily as possible. No one will question the proposition that in some manner such an attitude upon the part of court officials is to be deprecated, and therefore, as far as practicable, should be obviated.

The Society of the Sons of the American Revolution has had occasion to observe the conditions as they have existed and, as looking to the improvement of the situation, respectfully, but urgently, invites and asks your assistance.

Several suggestions have been made, such, for example, as that those of foreign birth who have shown themselves qualified for admission to citizenship should all be assembled upon a set occasion, when, after a brief address by the presiding judge or some other citizen of high standing in the community upon the importance of the act of the transfer of allegiance from one nation to another and the obligations which such an act carries with it, the prescribed oath should then be administered in a solemn and impressive manner.

In some cases such a procedure may not be practicable, but in nearly all cases, with the co-operation of the presiding judge, it is possible, and this Society believes will be of important practical value; that the oath shall be thus administered.

May we not have your co-operation in the accomplishment of this as a step toward the elevation of American citizenship?

Sincerely and earnestly yours,

R. C. BALLARD THURSTON,
President General.

This letter, judging from the numerous letters of commendation received from various judges located in every section of our country, has done an immense amount of good. The Bureau of Immigration of the Department of Labor has taken up the matter and is doing strenuous work to have the administration of the oath made as formal and impressive as possible. This work has been started so thoroughly that it will be quite an easy matter for our compatriots, by a little personal effort, to keep it alive in their own localities.

For the first time in the history of our country a municipality has taken an active part in extending to the newly made naturalized citizen a greeting and congratulations.

On May 10 of this year the city of Philadelphia organized and carried out one of the greatest meetings of the kind that has ever occurred. On May 30 Chicago did the same. A National Americanization Committee has been organized in New York City to extend formal welcome to newly arrived immigrants and recently naturalized citizens as a part of the Fourth of July celebration, and that city will hold such exercises this year in the new Stadium of the City College. It is the intent of this committee to have such exercises held in all of our principal cities on the Fourth, and a large number of favorable replies have been received from mayors with whom correspondence was had regarding this patriotic movement.

During the past ten years the Bureau of Naturalization has been gradually extending its sphere of usefulness, and today is doing everything it can do with its small force of field men to assist the alien in obtaining citizenship. The present variegated system of preparing the alien for citizenship is far from effective, and it is the present intention of the Bureau of Naturalization to prepare and launch a plan of education that can be adopted by all. As a National Society, we can do little more than commend this measure; but our State Societies and Chapters can be of great assistance to the Bureau of Naturalization by seeing that the public schools in their respective sections adopt such courses of instruction as will meet the requirements of the Bureau.

I am pleased to state that the same pleasant and cordial relations have been maintained with the Department of Labor as in the past.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN H. MOORE,
Chairman Committee on Information for Aliens.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: You have heard the reading of this report. What is your pleasure?

A MEMBER: Mr. President General, I move that it be received and filed and printed in the Year Book.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, then, gentlemen, in connection with this report, I want to make some remarks myself, and I am going to ask you to detain Mr. Woodworth, for I want him to tell you something. I am going to ask Mr. Woodworth in a moment to tell you what was done at Syracuse in regard to Naturalization Day, and in addition to that I am going to tell you a little of the way that this happened to come up last year at Syracuse. Mr. Woodworth and Commander Moore and one or two other compatriots and I were talking in regard to this question of naturalization, and those of us who are lawyers have become so accustomed to the courts and the court-rooms that they don't pay to the court that respect that others seem to think should be paid to it, and it has a tendency to belittle the courts in the eyes of the community. I am not a lawyer, but I have many times been in court as a witness and otherwise, and I have been very, very much impressed with the fact that when the clerk or proper officer is administering an oath to a witness he, "M-u-m-y-u-m-m-m to God," and that is about all you get out of the oath. No human being can tell what he is swearing to unless he is familiar with the oath, and no one but a lawyer is familiar with it, and I don't believe that one per cent of the lawyers know it themselves. Now, then, going a little further than that; come to the alien who is accustomed to a great deal of form and ceremony in foreign lands, especially in empires and kingdoms. They come to this country, to our democratic methods, and they are brought into a room that is dirty, filthy; the floor is often covered with tobacco spit and the stumps of cigars; the room is badly ventilated; it is disagreeable; it is nasty, and an oath is administered to a bunch of them, huddled up together, in a form which has nothing about it to impress that alien with the realization of the fact that he is foreswearing his allegiance to the country where he was born and taking an oath of allegiance to the country to which he has moved; and we must not be surprised that those men should call themselves "German-Americans," or "French-Americans," or "Irish-Americans," always putting first the country where they are born and lastly the country to which they have moved. That first part in front of that hyphen should be eliminated in every regard, in every case. These men should be taught to realize that they are Americans, and that they are going to be true and loyal to the country of their adoption; and that is the reason why these letters were gotten up. They have already done a great deal of good in calling attention to those conditions; but our lawyers and those who are interested in the subject will have to take this question up through our bar associations, when they themselves go on the bench, in urging those forms and ceremonies, taking but a few minutes in the court-room, but saving in the future many, many hours of trials and tribulations, and thus doing good to our country in a way that I don't believe anything else will. Now we are having these meetings held all over the United States. There were probably one hundred of them on the fourth or fifth of July; they were everywhere, and they were brought about mainly through these letters that were sent out. They acted as an inspiration not only to our own organization and to our own members, but to other organizations. And at Syracuse there was a very excellent one that was handled by Mr. Woodworth. It was he that got it up. He was the moving spirit. He was the power behind the throne that carried it through, the mayor and all acting really at his request; and I am going to ask Mr. Woodworth to tell you what was done there before I put this motion. It was one of the best meetings of the United States and I want you to hear about it. I have the pleasure to introduce to you Mr. Newell B. Woodworth, member of the National Executive Committee and President of the Syracuse Chapter of our Empire State Society. (Applause.)

Mr. NEWELL B. WOODWORTH, of Syracuse: Compatriots, it is late and I will not take up time with going into detail; but I wish to call your attention to just two facts in connection with our meeting on Sunday evening, July 4. We had an auditorium that seated 4,500 people. There were over 4,000 people in that auditorium. Of that number about 2,200, by actual registration, were alien born. The whole purpose of the meeting was directed toward reaching the alien. At the very opening of that meeting the "Colors" were brought in. There was not a flag in the auditorium until the color guard of the local military company brought the "Colors" down the center aisle around to the platform. The guard presented arms and the audience were requested to rise and repeat the pledge to the flag. That pledge was printed on the program, "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Republic for which it stands—one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice to all." And those 4,000 people stood there with their right arms raised, extended toward the fla. 1

I assure you, gentlemen, it was an inspiring moment; it was a moment that thrilled one to see the earnestness, or, rather, hear the earnestness and see the faces, particularly of those aliens, as they repeated in their broken way the pledge to the flag. Then our speakers directed themselves principally to one point in as simple language as possible; that was respect for the controlling law of the land; that while each was sovereign under our form of government, nevertheless each was subject to the controlling law of the land; that liberty meant law and not license. That one point particularly was touched upon by all the speakers, and I believe, from what I was able to ascertain in a few short days between the meeting and the time I left to attend this Congress, that it made an impression upon many of the aliens. I particularly went out and asked two or three Italians whom I knew personally, who were leaders in the community of Italians, and they told me that it did good; that they had heard it talked among their countrymen, and they desired to know when we were going to have another meeting that they could attend. They inquired if we would not have two or three a year, and whether they would have to wait until the next Independence Day before they could have one. The Italian papers commented editorially very favorably upon the meeting, both before and after, and the German papers did likewise. So we felt that our work had not been in vain; that we had at least reached the hearts of some of the aliens. Many seemed eager and glad of an opportunity of becoming one of us, of being recognized; they wanted to be considered American; but hitherto we have given them no opportunity for any outward display of that feeling or of any interest on our part. The spirit all the way through was the spirit of America, which is the brotherhood of man. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I attended a similar meeting in Chicago on Decoration Day, and among the members present most prominent in that meeting were the members of the Illinois Society. Mr. Jenks, I see, is here. I don't know whether he is prepared to say anything on that subject or not. Mr. Jenks, do you care to tell us anything on that subject? It had not occurred to me to ask you to before. Will you come up here please, Mr. Jenks. Chancellor L. Jenks, gentlemen, President of the Illinois Society, whose membership in good standing has passed the thousand mark. (Applause.)

Mr. CHANCELLOR L. JENKS: Mr. President General, what I remember as the greatest pleasure of that meeting was that you were yourself present.

That meeting was an exceedingly impressive one. One of our local judges, Judge Goodland, a man who possesses the confidence of the entire State, as well as the county of Cook, is very much interested in an organization seeking to get at the alien just as quickly as it is possible to do so; and the movement has been eminently successful in Chicago. As a member of the bar, especially before we had our present palatial court-house, I remember the dingy rooms in which litigation was carried on, trials were conducted, and some of the darkness in which the bewildered applicant for citizenship was led in and took the oath. There was no dignity attached to it at all. It was administered in wholesale. I have seen crowded into a court-room one-fourth the size of this room 600 who took the oath at one time—just before election. (Laughter.) Now that has been done away with entirely, and in many of the court-rooms, where the oath of allegiance is administered, the flag is displayed and the affair is made one of great and of increasing dignity. We needed it in Chicago, and it has brought about, I have no doubt—it is repeatedly asserted, and there is no question of its truth—it has brought about a condition of better citizenship not only among the aliens who have come into citizenship, but it has had a very salutary effect upon the native American citizen. I know of no movement in which this organization is interested which is more important than that and which will lead to a greater movement in citizenship. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: So much for a movement that was really started by our compatriot, General Anderson, who organized this Society. General, would you like to make some remarks on the subject?

Gen. THOMAS M. ANDERSON: Mr. President General, I don't know that I could make any remarks better now than to ask those who have ever been soldiers to recall the oath that all soldiers take when they go in the service of the United States that was taken by those that fought in the Revolutionary War, that fought in the War of 1812, that fought in the Mexican War, and that have fought in all wars since. I took it and I have administered it to many thousands of men. It is this: "I solemnly swear before Almighty God to bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America; to defend them against all enemies whatsoever, foreign or domestic; to obey all orders of constituted authorities, and to be faithful to the end." That was the oath that we all took. It has been taken from the time of the Revolution; it is taken now and must be taken in the future. That was the oath of allegiance to the United States as taken by the soldiers. (Applause)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are you ready for the question, gentlemen? All those in favor of the motion to receive this report of the Committee on Information for Aliens and put it through the proper process of publication, etc., please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

Judge MORRIS B. BEARDSLEY: Mr. President General, I move you that we now take a recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

(Said motion was duly seconded and carried.)

Afternoon Session, 2 p. m., July 19, 1915.

President General Thruston in the chair.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The Congress will please come to order. Before proceeding to the ceremonies of the afternoon, I am requested to make the announcement that not as many men have registered for the trip to San Francisco as the committee have been expecting, and the probabilities are that many of them have forgotten it. We would thank those who have overlooked it if they would turn in their names as soon as possible in order that the California Society may know what preparations to make. Now, is Major Silva present?

Maj. V. M. C. SILVA, of Portland: Mr. President General, I would ask permission at this time to present to our National Congress Mr. Daniel H. Simmons, who, I believe, is the only real son of a Revolutionary soldier living on the Pacific coast.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I wish you would bring him up here first and have him sit on this platform. Let me come down to help you.

(The President General here approached and met Major Silva and Mr. Simmons and escorted Mr. Simmons to the platform.)

Maj. V. M. C. SILVA: I would like to state, Mr. President General, that the Oregon Society appointed a committee to visit Mr. Simmons at the Odd Fellows' Home and examine the records of his father's service, and we were satisfied of the authenticity of his father's record, which is borne out by official certified copies of the Commissioner of Pensions at Washington, and for that reason the Oregon Society conferred upon him the honor of an honorary membership, and they desire to present him to this Congress at this time. (Mr. Simmons has since filed his application papers and been duly enrolled by the Registrar General.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Major Silva, I want to thank you sincerely for the efforts which Oregon has made to give us the honor of witnessing and shaking hands with a real Son of the American Revolution. Gentlemen, Colonel Simmons is too infirm to make an address, but he wants to extend to you all his greetings and his appreciation of being invited here to meet so many men who are still preserving the spirit of those with whom his father fought during the American Revolution. Thank you. (Applause.)

Now, in regard to the ceremonies which are to take place this afternoon, the first was the transfer of the Traveling Banner from New Jersey to Washington State, which the parties interested have requested be postponed until the first thing tomorrow morning.

Mr. WALLACE McCAMANT: Mr. President General, before we get to the afternoon's regular business may I have the floor to make an announcement or two?

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Certainly. Make your announcements.

Mr. McCAMANT: I desire to make two announcements, Mr. President General and gentlemen of the Congress. One of them came at the request of the Historian General, Mr. Pierson, of East Orange, New Jersey, who found it to be impossible to be present. Those of you who have been in the habit of attending Congresses need not be reminded of the very interesting exhibit which the Historian General always has for our inspection. He gets together all the programs, cards, and everything else that emanate from the different State Societies and presents them for our inspection at every Congress. While he was unable to come to this Congress, he has sent this exhibit and it is in the next room, right through that door, or you can reach it by going through the door at the rear. It is in charge of General Beebe and will be on exhibition all day today and until tomorrow noon. I hope that all of you will take pains to see it, and I am sure that any State Society can gain new ideas by a careful study of the programs, indicating activities of the other State Societies.

The other announcement I have to make has to do with the reception tonight. The invitation is to all. All the Sons of the American Revolution who are in Portland at this time, with their ladies, are cordially and earnestly urged to attend the reception this evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Rockey. * * * Dr. and Mrs. Rockey have one of those charming homes in this part of the Union, and it is in a very lovely suburban section, about five miles out, on the bank of the Willamette River, and I am sure any of you who attend will feel very well repaid and will have a very delightful evening. (Applause.)

PRESENTATION OF PRIZE BADGE.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Next is the presentation of the insignia, which will be presented by Mr. Woodworth to Mr. Nathan Warren, of Massachusetts, who will accept it on behalf of the Rhode Island Society.

Mr. NEWELL B. WOODWORTH: Mr. President General and Compatriots, part of our official designation of this Society is the word "Sons." I take that word to mean not alone our physical being, but the spirit which we have received from our forefathers, the spirit which brings us here to join in the deliberations of this Society, the spirit which actuated those who were the companions of the father of our honored guest this afternoon in that struggle, not for revolution, but simply to enforce the rights of Englishmen, as they considered themselves, and to maintain those rights against the usurpation of the king. It is that spirit which has influenced the development of this country. It has been virile, intense, and it has throbbled its way through all of these decades and brought us to the great nation that we are today; and I think it is only in humbleness that we can look back over the past century or more and admit that there is a Divine Providence that has guided us to reach the heights that no other nation has ever reached as to equal opportunities in the brotherhood of man. It is fitting, then, that we, as "Sons"—nay, it is more than fitting—it is a demand upon us that we should transmit, pure and virile, the spirit that has come to us, to our successors, that our priceless heritage may be always maintained; and so it is particularly pleasing to me personally to be called upon to hold this insignia of the Society and transmit it to the State that has done more the past year than any other State in securing, and thus perpetuating, our spirit in their sons. It is fitting, too, sir, that it should go to New England, the first place, you might say, of independence—fitting it should go to the smallest State of that great Puritan Republic—and it is with great pleasure, sir, that I, representing the donor of this gift, this badge of our Society, tender it to you, Colonel Warren, as representative of the State of Rhode Island, with the wish that the work there may be but an incentive to work in every other State. (Applause.)

Mr. NATHAN WARREN, of Massachusetts: Mr. President General and Compatriots, I certainly am very much pleased to be the custodian and the transmitter of this emblem to the Rhode Island Society. Rhode Island is our nearest neighbor, and I promise you that I will not send it by express or mail, but I will make a function of it myself to go down to Providence and tender it officially to the proper authorities of the Society in Rhode Island. It is particularly gratifying to me, too, because Rhode Island is the State in which my grandfather served, and I have some old letters which he wrote from camp in Rhode Island when the French were there and Rochambeau was there awaiting the attack and making preparations for aggressive movements in that State. So I feel a deep interest in that State, an ancestral feeling that this is the home of my grandfather's service. And also Rhode Island, you will remember, was the home of Nathanael Greene, that great patriot next to Washington, to whom a monument has just been erected at Guilford Court-house, in North Carolina; and I am very glad that this emblem is going to the smallest State in the Union, always first in its patriotic services, and to the home of Nathanael Greene. I promise you, Mr. President General, I will see that this is properly carried to the authorities to whom it belongs.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Thank you very much indeed. (Applause.)

The next will be the services in connection with the Washington Guard Flag. Are the colors ready?

The colors were brought forward by the color-bearers.

PRESENTATION OF WASHINGTON GUARD FLAG.

Colonel LAUMAN, of Illinois: Mr. President General and Compatriots of the Order, and Howard Clark, son of our Secretary General: Howard, you know that this is the American Flag, the National Colors; that under this flag a great popular government was established and solidified and unified, and that under this flag the word freedom was made a reality and not the mournful dream of millions of our own people, and the eyes of millions abroad are cast to its glorious colors. Energy, money, and lives have been given without stint to preserve the principles for which that flag stands. It is our contract one to another that we will be true to one another and steadfast in our dealings. Now, you know there are lots of us that have served under those colors, and we are not afraid to call a soldier a soldier and a gun a gun, and we think that both the soldier and the gun are most efficient when they are ready for use; so we want all our boys to grow up with an idea of being useful to these colors, that they will have a sense of duty to maintain the government which under these colors has been established and solidified. Now, with that end in view, Mr. President General and Mr. Henry and Compatriots, our Vice-President General, Herman W. Fernberger, of Philadelphia, Pa., has desired to present these standard colors with these ideas to this Society, with the idea of its being presented ultimately elsewhere, as will appear; but in the streamer of this is written the Washington Guard of the S. A. R., and that Washington Guard simply is, when it is fully established, the idea that the sons of our members shall be inspired with the patriotic spirit of our forefathers and be made to feel that they are co-workers with us in our endeavors to preserve and maintain these national characteristics by which the liberty and unity of our country have been secured. Now, I have the pleasure, on behalf of Mr. Fernberger, Mr. President General and Mr. Henry, of turning over into the keeping of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution this Washington Guard Banner. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, salute the flag. In behalf of the President General and in behalf of the Board of Trustees, I desire to tender their thanks for this banner to the donor, Vice-President General Herman W. Fernberger, of Philadelphia.

Mr. HENRY, of Michigan: As under the terms of this gift and because the State of New Jersey has organized this body, this Washington Guard, I have great pleasure in tendering this flag to you and through you to the Societies that hereafter may win it by the formation of new Washington Guards throughout the States. This is a day of progress. We change all of the time. There was simply the Sons of the American Revolution, and then there was the Daughters of the American Revolution, and then there was the Society of Children of the American Revolution, which was organized by the Daughters. These children became the primary school, as it were, and this Washington Guard will perhaps be the collegiate department, as they develop after the age of twenty-one into full-fledged Sons of the American Revolution. So I think the State of New Jersey is to be congratulated in organizing this body. I understand Mr. Weeks stands for the State of New Jersey, and, as such, I desire to present this banner to him (passing the banner to Mr. Weeks). (Applause.)

Mr. JOHN R. WEEKS, Secretary of New Jersey Society: Mr. President General and Compatriots, it is with a feeling of special pride that I stand here as New Jersey's representative to receive at your hands this flag for the Washington Guard. The Washington Guard idea originated with our former President, Mr. Merrill, and I would that he were here today in his own inimitable way to receive, as he ought to, the flag for this new organization. I can say this: that I know he will be proud, when it is brought back to New Jersey, to receive the flag and see that it is properly presented to the new organization which we have established there, and one which we hope will not alone cover New Jersey. We hope that today, or during this Congress, at least, there may be established the National Society of the Washington Guard, of which New Jersey shall only be a branch. I take special pleasure also in receiving this flag because I think the idea of the Washington Guard is the most magnificent one that can be advanced in connection with our work. You and I and some of the rest of those here today are getting just a little touch of gray at the temples, and I think, perhaps, that the day may come, not so many years hence, when we may pass out of activity. We want to feel when we go that there is left behind us a nucleus for a new organization which will carry on the work which we have tried in our feeble way to do while here. It seems to me that the most magnificent idea of all is the thought that our sons and our grandsons, if you choose, shall have the idea kept alive as to what we have meant by this organization of the Sons of the American Revolution, and shall carry on and perpetuate that idea through such an institution as this of the Washington Guards.

I thank you in behalf of the New Jersey Society for the presentation of the flag, and I assure you that in all of our handling of it we shall see that the boys of our State realize what the flag stands for, and are taught to respect it and the ideals, not only of our fathers, but the ideals as developed in these modern days from those ideals into perhaps a larger meaning than even our fathers fought for. I accept it with pleasure. I accept it, appreciating the honor, and thank the National Society as the representative of New Jersey.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriots, I want you to witness the only Washington Guardsman at present on the Pacific coast (holding Howard Clark, Jr., close to his side). It is such boys as he of whom his mother spoke this morning when she said, "I shall raise my boy to be a soldier." I want little Howard Clark to see you all, and I want you all to see him, because I am very fond of him; and I also want him to shake hands with Colonel Simmons, in order that he may, later in life, realize that he has shaken hands with the son of one who fought in the American Revolution. I thank you all.

(There was a pause in the proceedings at this point, during which Col. D. H. Simmons was escorted from the room.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The next in the order of the business will be the report of the Flag Committee. Is Dr. Holmes present? Dr. Holmes, will you please come up and read the report of the Flag Committee? Compatriots, it gives me pleasure to introduce to you Dr. Holmes, ex President of the Washington State Society.

Dr. S. J. HOLMES, of Seattle: Mr. President General, I mingle my pleasure in presenting this report with my regret. The chairman of the Flag Committee, Mr. Cox, and the Secretary, Mr. Samson, of the same committee, are not privileged to be here today, and it has fallen to me, by request of the chairman of the Flag Committee, that this report of the year's work, 1915, be presented today, and I am extremely pleased to present to you the developments of this committee during the year 1915.

REPORT OF THE FLAG COMMITTEE, 1915.

The Flag Committee begs to report that it has continued its efforts to secure Federal legislation to prevent the desecration of the flag of the United States of America.

CONGRESSIONAL HEARING.

On February 10, 1915, there was a hearing by the House Subcommittee on the Judiciary on the Sheppard bill, which had passed the United States Senate at the previous session of Congress. Your committee believed that the psychological time had at last come, some members of the Judiciary Committee having stated that the flag of the United States, created by Congress, should and doubtless would be protected by its creator. Unfortunately, however, there was no unanimity in the presentation of the case by the advocates of flag legislation. On the contrary, many divergent views were expressed. Technical objections were urged against a flag law that might repeal State flag laws, the manner of procedure and prosecution were also questioned, one committee of ladies, in all seriousness, advocating Congress passing a bill to prevent the misuse of the American flag in foreign countries. Such a collection of heterogeneous views were presented in person and by letter that the members of the House Committee were confused. The hearing proved profitless, the do-nothing policy again triumphing, the United States being still without a law to protect its flag, the symbol of government, the emblem of the nation's power.

CONCERTED ACTION URGED.

Your committee, after years of industrious effort, close observation, and a varied experience, reports to you that it is of the opinion that no congressional action will be had looking to the protection of the flag from insult, mutilation, desecration, misuse, and commercial degradation until there is concerted action by the patriotic societies and associations advocating protection to the flag from abuses never contemplated by its creators. The committee believes that any bill to become a law will have to be agreed to by the societies in advance, their representatives pledging themselves to go to Congress as a unit, harmoniously, advocating the passage of the bill agreed to in advance.

It is useless to go before the committees and indulge, as in the past, in debate among ourselves, and there exploit technical and profitless theories that confuse the members of the committees as to the need of flag legislation sought by patriotic Americans.

After the hearing of February 10, Mrs. George B. Macfarlane, chairman of the Committee to Prevent the Desecration of the Flag, National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, wrote your committee. The chairman, in reply, said: "Many bills have been killed through lack of harmony among those appearing before congressional committees and elsewhere. I feel from long experience that if this method is persisted in flag legislation may continue to be postponed at each session of Congress."

DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION URGE UNITY OF ACTION.

On April 20, 1915, Mrs. Macfarlane's committee adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that it is most desirable to appoint a joint committee, composed of three members of this Society (D. A. R.), three members from the Sons of the American Revolution, and three members from the American Flag Association, and members of other patriotic organizations who have taken active interest in protecting the flag of the United States, to meet at a given time and place in order to discuss the provisions of the various flag bills before Congress, and if possible agree on the wording of a bill that all organizations can and will support."

Your committee feels that this unselfish and patriotic resolution for unity of action is most praiseworthy and should in all fairness commend itself to other patriotic organizations. This or some other equitable plan of getting together should be agreed to in order that the bill adopted may contain the fundamentals of wholesome flag protection.

CONCESSIONS NECESSARY.

To secure such a bill concessions will have to be made by all. Your committee is now prepared, with the approval of the National Society, to make any changes in the bill that are not fundamental in character in order to secure a practical flag law. In the interest of unity of action, we are prepared to add an additional section to the Sheppard bill to the effect that nothing therein shall annul the provisions of any State law.

STATE FLAG LAWS.

The State flag laws, although very general in character, have done good, practically and educationally. Your committee commends the States that have enacted laws to protect the flag of the United States, so long neglected by Congress.

STATE AND FEDERAL COURTS HAVE CONCURRENT JURISDICTION.

As to the objection raised to the prosecution of cases in the Federal courts, your committee believes that it does not seriously matter whether Federal or State courts or both have jurisdiction in flag-violation cases. These courts we know have concurrent jurisdiction in the naturalization laws of the United States (Sec. 2165, Rev. Stat.).

Any court of the United States, or a district or supreme court of the Territories, or a court of record of any of the States having common-law jurisdiction and a seal and clerk has jurisdiction, under section 15 of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat., 569, c. 3592), of proceedings to cancel certificates of citizenship obtained by fraud or illegally.

In the interest of unity of action, it is suggested that the proposed law relative to the desecration of the flag contain the following provisions:

"This law shall be enforceable in any court of the United States or court of record of any of the States having jurisdiction to try and punish crimes and misdemeanors."

COPYRIGHT FEATURES.

As to the objection raised to the copyright feature of the Sheppard bill, your committee feels that section 2 of that bill should stand as printed: that no "copyright shall subsist in the flag, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States, or any simulation thereof." Such a law has worked well in the Patent Office, where the law prohibits the registration of any public insignia as a feature of a trade-mark. Through the efforts of Hon. E. B. Moore, former Commissioner of Patents and a Past President of the District of Columbia Society, S. A. R., the registration of the flag, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States was for some time discontinued before the passage of the act of 1907 (34 Stat. L., 1251).

THE FLORAHOME CASE.

During the year the President General called the attention of the Flag Committee to a case of alleged mutilation and destruction of a United States flag in Florahome, Florida.

The committee investigated the case and afterward forwarded the papers to President Wilson, requesting him to recommend in a message to Congress the enactment of a flag law, should it be found that the United States government had no legislative power to protect its flag. The papers were referred by the White House to the Secretary of War for action.

ABSENCE OF LEGISLATION TO PROTECT THE FLAG.

Gen. Henry G. Sharpe, in his reply of December 17, 1914, said: "You are informed that in the absence of legislation by Congress upon the subject, it is not seen what action can be taken to prevent occurrences of the character specified in the letter addressed to you by Mr. Tubbs, of Florahome, Florida, on the 11th ult."

Resolutions to prevent the desecration of the flag of the United States have from time to time been introduced in Congress, but all have thus far failed of enactment.

The latest bill upon the matter was introduced in the House of Representatives, on April 28, 1913, by the Hon. S. A. Witherspoon, of Mississippi, action upon which is now pending (same as Sheppard bill, 1905, 63d Congress, 2d session).

FLAG USED AS A FLOOR.

The flag design worked into the floor of the State House at Des Moines, Iowa, and tramped over by thousands of people, has not been removed, although the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution in Iowa has earnestly worked for its elimination.

The Old Continental (periodical of the Iowa Society) says: "The Stars and Stripes design is now desecrated more reprehensibly than before by being surrounded with counters and paraphernalia of the restaurant in the basement and is thus in a position not of honor, but dishonor."

FLAG DAY, 1915.

The Star Spangled Banner celebration in Baltimore in September, 1914, and the wave of patriotism that is still sweeping over the country, caused Flag Day of 1915 to be more generally and more enthusiastically observed than ever before. The tribute to the flag paid by President Wilson in Washington on June 14 was responded to by millions of Americans as at no other time in the history of the United States.

It is interesting to recall that it was during the Civil War, June 8, 1861, that Flag Day was first publicly advocated. Mr. Jonathan Flynt Morris, of Hartford, Conn., suggested to Mr. Charles Dudley Warner, who was the editor of a Hartford paper, the propriety of celebrating Flag Day throughout the United States, inducing Mr. Warner to write an editorial, which appeared in his paper, The Courant. Mr. Morris later became a member of the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and died in 1899. The credit for originating Flag Day belongs to him. He was intensely interested in the work of the Flag Committee of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

NEW STATE FLAG LAWS.

West Virginia is the last State to enact a flag law. The names of the States having such laws were printed in the National Year Book for 1912, pages 112-117, and by now adding West Virginia, Porto Rico, Philippine Islands, and Alaska the list will be complete to date. The Alaska law is somewhat out of the ordinary. It "prohibits placing any inscription, portrait, advertisement, marks, or notice whatever upon the flag or what purports to be such flag." It also prohibits public mutilation or use in any parade, unless carried at the head of such parade, above all other flags or ensigns, and any display in public from any hall any flag belonging to an organization unless the American flag is displayed above foreign flags. Violation of these provisions is made a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not exceeding $200, or imprisonment for one year, or both.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

Your committee recommends that the policy of conciliation advocated by the Sons of the American Revolution be continued as best calculated to secure unity of action of patriotic people in the passage of a bill to protect the flag of the United States from desecration, mutilation, or improper use.

Your committee recommends that the National officers of this Society, or a committee to be appointed by the President General, and to which this report shall be referred, be directed to enter into correspondence with the officers or committees of other patriotic societies and individuals, with a view of holding a conference in Washington at the beginning of the next session of Congress for the purpose of exchanging views on flag desecration, and if possible agree on a bill that the societies will empower their representatives to pledge support.

Your committee recommends that this Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution empower its President General to request the President of the United States to incorporate in a message to the Congress of the United States a recommendation favoring the passage of the bill to prevent the desecration of the flag of the United States when agreed to by the Society, S. A. R., and other patriotic organizations.

CONCLUSION.

Your committee suggests that this Congress recommend that the following sentiments in the opinion of the late Justice Harlan in the Nebraska Flag case (Halter & Haywood vs. State of Nebraska, March 4, 1907, 205 U. S. R., 34) be read at Flag Day exercises in the public schools of the United States June 14 of each year:

"To any true American the flag is the symbol of the nation's power, the emblem of freedom, in its truest and best sense. It is not extravagant to say that to all lovers of the country it signifies government resting on the consent of the governed; liberty regulated by law; the protection of the weak against the strong; security against the exercise of arbitrary power, and absolute safety for free institutions against foreign aggression."

W. V. Cox,
Chairman.

HENRY W. SAMSON,
Secretary.

Dr. HOLMES: Mr. President General, appended to this report, sir, is a printed copy of the hearing February 10, 1915, before the Committee of the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, Sixty-third Congress, third session, on Senate bill 1905. Mr. Cox, chairman of our Flag

Committee, submitted to the Judiciary Committee on that occasion a synopsis of the statutes of the States and Territories, thirty-six in all, relative to the desecration of the American flag. It was compiled about a year ago by the Flag Committee, under direction of Mr. Cox, to be presented to the House Committee. The synopsis is as follows:

STATUTES OF THE STATES AND TERRITORIES RELATIVE TO THE DESECRATION

ARIZONA.

Sections 613, 614, penal code, make it an offense to deface or otherwise show disrespect to the flag or to use it or any pictorial representation thereof for advertising purposes. Penalty of fine of from $5 to $100, or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both.

Does not apply to acts permitted by statutes of the United States, Army and Navy regulations, or use by newspapers, etc., when disconnected from advertisement.

OHIO.

Act of April 29, 1902, prohibits the use of the flag and any picture or representation thereof for advertising purposes and makes violation thereof a misdemeanor. By it, it is also a misdemeanor to publicly mutilate, deface, defile, or defy, trample upon, or cast contempt, either by word or act, upon the flag. The penalty prescribed is not exceeding $100 and imprisonment for not more than 30 days. The act does not apply to any act permitted by the statutes of the United States or Army and Navy regulations, nor to newspapers, etc., on which is printed, painted, or placed the flag disconnected from any advertisement.

OREGON.

Laws, 1901, page 286 (Lord's Oregon Laws, vol. 1, secs. 2203-2205), prohibits use of flag or representation thereof for advertising purposes, its mutilation, etc.; makes violation a misdemeanor punishable by fine of from $20 to $100. Does not apply to acts permitted by statutes of the United States, Army and Navy regulations, and use by newspapers or other periodicals when disconnected from advertisement.

PENNSYLVANIA.

By act of May 23, 1907, it is made a felony, punishable by fine of not exceeding $500 and imprisonment for not exceeding six months, to place any advertisement, etc., on the flag or any representation thereof, or to publicly or privately mutilate, etc., the same. The act does not apply to any act permitted by the statutes of the United States or by the Army and Navy regulations, nor to newspapers, etc., when the use is not connected with any advertisement; nor does it apply to any patriotic or political demonstration or decorations.

RHODE ISLAND.

Public Laws, 986, April 3, 1902, makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine of not exceeding $100 and imprisonment for not more than 30 days, to use the flag or any representation thereof for advertising purposes or to publicly mutilate, deface, defile, or defy, trample upon, or cast contempt upon the same. Acts permitted by statutes of the United States and Army and Navy regulations and the use of the flag by newspapers, etc., disconnected from any advertisement, are exempted.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Act of March 1, 1901, makes it a misdemeanor to wilfully and maliciously deface, mutilate, burn, alter, or trail in the dust, or to alter or falsify the service of the flag by fixing any advertisement, etc., thereon and exposing the same to public view, and prescribes a penalty of not exceeding $100 and imprisonment for not exceeding 30 days. Acts authorized by the laws of Congress and Army regulations are exempted from the operation of the act.

UTAH.

Compiled Laws, 1907, section 4487-4, makes it a misdemeanor to place, or cause to be placed, on the flag any advertisement, etc., or to mutilate, deface, or defile the same, and prescribes a penalty of not exceeding $100 and imprisonment for not more than 30 days.

VERMONT.

By Public Statutes, section 5969, it is punishable by fine of from $10 to $100 for any person to attach to or imprint or represent upon goods, wares, or merchandise, or an advertisement of the same, the national flag or the coat of arms of the United States, or an imitation or representation of the same.

WASHINGTON.

Session Laws, 1900, section 423, page 1024, prohibits use of flag or representation thereof, its public mutilation, etc., and makes violation a misdemeanor, but does not prescribe any penalty.

WISCONSIN.

Laws of 1901, chapter 142, prohibits the use of the flag or any representation thereof for advertising purposes, its public mutilation, defacement, and defilement, and makes violation thereof a misdemeanor, punishable by fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100, with costs of prosecution, or imprisonment for not exceeding 30 days. Act does not apply to acts permitted by statute of the United States or Army and Navy regulations, nor to newspapers or other periodicals when the flag, as printed, is disconnected from any advertisement.

WYOMING.

Laws, 1905, chapter 47 (Comp. Stat., 1910, sec. 5984), prohibits use of flag or representation thereof for advertising purposes, its public mutilation, defacement, defilement, etc.; makes violation a misdemeanor punishable by fine of not exceeding $250 and imprisonment for not exceeding one year. Does not apply to flags the property of or used in the service of the United States or of the State upon which inscriptions, etc., are placed pursuant to law.

HAWAII.

Act of April 3, 1905, Laws, 1905, page 20, prohibits use of flag or any representation thereof for advertising purposes, its public mutilation, defacement, defilement, etc.; makes violation a misdemeanor punishable by fine of not exceeding $100 and imprisonment for not more than 30 days. Act does not apply to any act permitted by the statutes of the United States or Army and Navy regulations, nor to a newspaper, etc., in which the flag is used disconnected from any advertisement.

An examination of the laws of the following States, Territories, and insular possessions of the United States fails to disclose any legislation respecting the desecration of the American flag: Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Panama, Canal Zone, Philippine Islands, Porto Rico, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriots, you have heard this report. What is your pleasure?

General BRADLEY: I move, Mr Chairman, that it be accepted and approved and follow the usual course.

(Said motion was duly seconded and carried.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, there has been received by the Secretary General quite a number of greetings by wire, and if there is no objection we will have him read those greetings to you now.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, there are several telegrams and one letter. Treasurer General John H. Burroughs wires: "Greetings to officers and delegates. Regret inability to be present."

From Herman W. Fernberger, Vice-President General, Philadelphia: "To the Congress assembled I send my best wishes and greetings. May your deliberations meet with the success and harmony you all desire."

From Mr. Woolson, the Second Vice-President General, Toledo: "Of all the disappointments of my life, the greatest is the fact that I cannot attend the National Congress now convening at Portland."

From Past President General Edwin S. Greeley, New Haven, Conn.: "Please extend to my compatriots most cordial greetings and best wishes for a pleasant and successful meeting.

From the Secretary of the George Washington Chapter at North Yakima: "George Washington Chapter of the Washington State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution sends greetings to the National Society now in session at Portland, Oregon, and the best wishes for a successful and inspiring session."

From John H. Cross, President of Florida Society, Pensacola, July 19: "Florida Society in meeting today sends greetings and loyalty to the National Society in Congress assembled. We hope some day to have the Congress assemble with us. Have eight new applications for membership."

REPORT ON MILITARY AND NAVAL RECORDS.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The next order of business will be the report on military and naval records.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, there is no member of that committee present. The report is in regard to the progress made in connection with the money which was appropriated by Congress at the suggestion of this Society and other organizations—$32,000 two years ago and another $32,000 one year ago. The money has been expended largely in making photostat copies of records found in the States of Massachusetts and North Carolina. At the last session of Congress the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee called for a hearing, which was held, and the army officer in charge of the work told what progress had been made, and estimated that to complete the work as planned would cost about $1,000,000; whereupon the hearing adjourned and no further appropriation resulted. In this connection, Mr. President General, I would suggest that the District of Columbia Society delegation be called upon to present certain resolutions looking to the publication of a summary digest of the 78,000 pensioners of the American Revolution, a resolution which has been approved by the Executive Committee of the National Society.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Mr. De Caidry, have you the resolutions ready to present?

Mr. WILLIAM A. DE CAINDRY, of the District of Columbia: Mr. President General, I have the report ready to present. In behalf of the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution and in accordance with their desire I, on behalf of the delegation, now offer for the favorable consideration of this National Society the following resolutions:

Resolved by the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, in Annual Congress assembled, at Portland, Oregon, July 19, 1915, That the President General and the Secretary General of the Society be, and they are hereby, empowered and requested to petition the Congress of the United States on behalf of this Society to authorize the publication by the Secretary of the Interior, in book form, for sale to the public at cost price, of an edition of one thousand [amended to read five thousand] copies of the summary cards or digests of the pension papers of the officers and enlisted men of the Revolutionary War, which cards or digests are now complete and ready for publication in the hands of the Commissioner of Pensions, and to request Congress to make adequate appropriation for the purpose.

And the President General is further authorized to appear in person, or by committee to be appointed by him, before the appropriation committees of both Houses of Congress in advocacy of the measures here proposed:

Resolved, That the various State Societies be requested by the President General to intercede with the members of Congress and Senators of their respective jurisdictions in favor of the publication herein proposed.

This is a matter that has been receiving desultory attention from Congress for some time. It happens that a law was passed at the last session of Congress which prevented the executive officers from pursuing the course they had marked out in the securing of the publication of these records. It now becomes necessary that we appeal to Congress to make appropriation to meet the expense of this publication. The merits of the case lie in the fact that it will be an authentic publication of the names of 78,000 men who received pensions on account of the service they rendered in the cause of the American Revolution—a book that would be of very great genealogical value, and to this Society it would be of very superior importance. The various States of the North—the New England States—have been very generous in their publication of records of Revolutionary soldiers and officers, and it would be a very great convenience and value to this Society and kindred organizations if we could get Congress to publish so valuable a work as this would be. (Applause.)

Mr. ZEBINA MOSES, of the District of Columbia: Mr. President General, I second the motion of the chairman of our committee, and I just want to say this matter is of the deepest interest to the District of Columbia Society. They have debated the matter and have taken a great interest in it for a number of years. For a number of years I was chairman of the special committee on these Revolutionary records, or pension records, and the effort has been all the time to get them completed—that is, to get the work done in the Pension Office. Now, for the first time the work is all done and all we lack is an appropriation to have them printed. If they are printed they will be of great value. There are no other government publications that give as much as is given in these summary cards. In the Year Books of 1904, 1905, 1908, and 1909 are samples of these summary cards. Now, you will find in the summary cards not only the name of the soldier, but you find the date of his birth, the date of his death, the removals to different places that he may have made in receiving his pension at different places. You will find very often the names of his children; and you find a great deal which has been summarized and is found in these cards; and when you think that 78,000 is about one-quarter of all of the land forces that we had in the Revolution—I get this from our able Secretary General, that the land forces in the Revolution were somewhere between 250,000 and 350,000—you can see how valuable this matter would be if we can get it, and this is our opportunity. I think I may say that the Department of the Interior is favorable to its publication, and that is a great step in advance. Hitherto the work has not been done. Now it is completed and everything is all ready. I know of nothing virtually that is of more importance to this Society and to the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution than the publication of these records.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are there any remarks?

Mr. FRANK M. MILLS, of Sioux Falls: Mr. President General, I move to amend by striking out one thousand and inserting five thousand. Every printer knows that the expense of the first thousand in making a book is so great that for the duplication of copies there is but a light expense. I am sure more than one thousand people will want that book. I move to amend by inserting five thousand instead of one thousand.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, there is an amendment to the motion.

Mr. HALL, of Michigan: I second the motion, the amendment to the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Is the amendment accepted by the original mover, that it be five thousand instead of one thousand?

Mr. DE CAINDRY: The instructions I received from my Society were that it should not be a larger number than one thousand. I prefer, if it is the wish of the Society, that it be five thousand, but it should be made so by formal vote.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: How would it do to make it one thousand or as many as necessary?

Mr. DE CAINDRY: In the final analysis, the number of copies that will be published will be governed entirely by the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior, with the assistance of the Commissioner of Pensions; so that if we make it five thousand we will be more likely to get more than one thousand than if we should leave it one thousand; so that if it is the desire of this Society to have more than one thousand it might be very well that the Society amend the resolution so as to make it five thousand.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, gentlemen, you have before you a motion, with an amendment. Are you ready for the question?

(The motion was put amending the original motion to make the number five thousand instead of one thousand and was carried.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, then, on the original motion as amended. Are there any further remarks? If not, those in favor will please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it. The resolutions presented by Mr. De Caidry are therefore adopted as amended.

REPORT OF PRESS COMMITTEE.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. Chairman, the Press Committee has no written report. The chairman and other members of the committee have taken what steps seemed desirable to give this Society the proper publicity, and that has been especially done in connection with this Congress. The Associated Press headquarters requested that information concerning matters that would come up before this Congress be given as fully as possible ten days in advance of the Congress in order that it might be sent by mail all over the country. Your chairman under that request prepared a number of statements about the School Peace League, the Washington Guard, the Declaration of Independence, and other subjects, and the Associated Press seemed very gratified to get the material. It was sent out to be released today and tomorrow, and we hope that all over the country tomorrow there will be mention of this Congress. I believe there is nothing more to be said.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: You have the report of the Press Committee. Without any motion it will be put through the usual rules.

Next is the report of the Committee on Archives. Mr. De Caindry.

Mr. DE CAINDRY: Mr. President, I am not ready at this moment to make the report. I will do it a little later.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: We will pass that, Mr. De Caindry, for the present. The next is the report on the Washington Guard. Who was to present that report?

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. Weeks.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Mr. Weeks, Secretary of the New Jersey Society, where the Washington Guard originated.

Mr. JOHN R. WEEKS: Mr. President General, this is a report of the committee of which Mr. John Lenord Merrill is the chairman, addressed to the President General and National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON THE WASHINGTON GUARD.

66 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, July 4, 1915.

HON. R. C. BALLARD THURSTON,

President General, National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, Portland, Oregon.

MR. PRESIDENT GENERAL: The undersigned Committee on the Organization of the Washington Guard, appointed by your good self, would strongly urge the institution of a national organization of the Washington Guard, Sons of the American Revolution, at the Congress of the Society to be held at Portland. To this end we respectfully suggest the passage of a resolution similar to the following:

Whereas it is eminently fitting and proper that the sons of our members should be inspired with the patriotic spirit of our forefathers and be made to feel that they are co-workers with us in our endeavors to preserve and maintain those national characteristics by which the liberty and unity of our country have been secured; and organization, to be composed of the sons of members, under the age of twenty-one years, and other youths, of like age, likewise eligible: now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Congress of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, in regular meeting assembled, That the Washington Guard of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution be, and it hereby is, instituted, with the objects and purposes aforementioned; and be it further

Resolved, That the Special Committee on Organization, Compatriots John Lenord Merrill, Benjamin C. Allin, and Webster Bruce, with such others as they may elect to add to the committee, be, and they hereby are, authorized to take such steps as they may deem wise to perfect the permanent organization of the Washington Guard of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, on the lines hereinbefore mentioned; and be it further

Resolved, That said Special Committee on Organization be, and they hereby are, authorized to adopt a Constitution and By-Laws for the said Washington Guard, which shall be submitted to the Executive Committee of the National Society for approval or correction; and be it further

Resolved, That upon the approval of the said Executive Committee the Constitution and By-Laws formally agreed upon shall be the recognized Constitution and By-Laws of the Washington Guard of the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution.

Your committee would respectfully suggest, as a basis of organization, that the said Constitution and By-Laws should provide for (a) a national organization, (b) State organizations, and (c) Chapter organizations, and that the Chapter plan of the Daughters of the American Revolution be closely followed.

Your committee would suggest that the various State organizations should be formally chartered by the national organization, and that the State organizations should be termed by the name of "Commandery"; for instance, "The Oregon Commandery, Washington Guard, Sons of the American Revolution."

Your committee would suggest that the eligibility qualifications should be exactly similar to the present Sons of the American Revolution requirements, and that any boy, under the age of twenty-one, who is a son or grandson of a member of our Society, or of a Daughter of the American Revolution, or a Daughter of the Revolution, or otherwise eligible, should be made welcome as a Guardsman.

Your committee would suggest that the membership be divided into three classes, viz., Senior Guardsmen, 15 to 21 years; Guardsmen, 10 to 14 years; Junior Guardsmen, 9 years and under, and that the Commandery and Chapter offices should be held mainly by the Senior Guardsmen.

Your committee would suggest that all of the supervisory offices in the National, State, and Chapter organizations should be held by Sons of the American Revolution. It is vitally important that our Society of the Sons of the American Revolution should retain control of the Washington Guard.

For the purposes of record, your committee would suggest that the National Society should adopt a regular form of application paper, similar to the present S. A. R. form, but printed on different colored paper, for applicants for membership in the Washington Guard, and that these papers should be supplied to the State Commanderies free of charge.

Your committee suggests that the matter of dues be left discretionary with the State Commanderies and Chapters. It is highly important that no boy should be debarred from membership because of excessive dues. In this connection your committee would suggest that the financing of the Guard is a comparatively simple matter; that each State Society could afford to appropriate some small sum annually for expense of postage and stationery, and that an honorary membership could be created in each State Commandery, to be composed of members of the S. A. R. who would be willing to contribute a small sum annually toward the expense of administration.

Through the kindness of Compatriot Allin and the Illinois Commandery of the Washington Guard, an enameled button has been prepared, consisting of the colors of the Sons of the American Revolution. These buttons are most attractive and, if ordered in large quantities, may be purchased for a small amount. It is the hope of the committee that each State Commandery will furnish these buttons gratuitously to each member of the Guard in their respective Commanderies.

Your committee would report that active Commanderies have already been instituted by the Societies of Massachusetts, Illinois, and New Jersey.

If the National Congress adopt the resolution suggested and constitutes the present committee as a Committee on Permanent Organization, your committee will suggest a form of ritual, oath of allegiance, and other details which we think will be both helpful, inspiring, and attractive.

The committee feels that the possibilities of such an organization are undreamed of, and that the Washington Guard will prove to be a mighty asset to the Sons of the American Revolution.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN LENORD MERRILL, Chairman
(New Jersey Society, S. A. R.),
BENJAMIN C. ALLIN
(Illinois Society, S. A. R.),
WEBSTER BRUCE
Committee.

Mr. WEEKS: I move the acceptance and approval of this report, and move also that these resolutions, as recommended, be approved by the Annual Congress.

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Just one moment. Has the Committee on Resolutions considered it? Would it not be well to refer it to the Committee on Resolutions and ask them to report it?

Mr. WEEKS: This is a committee appointed by yourself, Mr. President General, and, having made its report, it has the same standing the Committee on Resolutions would have, and under those circumstances I thought my motion would be a proper one, that this report be approved and the resolution be adopted.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: You have heard the motion, gentlemen. It has been seconded. Are you ready for the question? All of those in favor signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it. It is unanimously carried.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, I have been requested by one of the members of the Society in this city to nominate his son as one of the members of the Washington Guard—Mr. William

Vance Ward, son of Hubert H. Ward. I have his picture. He is a nice boy. I should think he is about four years old. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Well, you will see that he is elected.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: All right.

REPORTS OF STATE SOCIETIES.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, gentlemen, the next is the report of the State Societies. We have passed the Washington Pilgrimage Journey report until 4 o'clock. We have eight minutes leeway.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, I have here the reports of the State Societies, some of them reports directly from the State Societies, others compiled by myself from data received during the year, much of it printed in the Official Bulletin. I have read new material. Wherever there are any recommendations they have been extracted, and they have been acted on today, or are now in the hands of the Committee on Resolutions. It seems unnecessary to read all of this material; it would take an hour or two. But if any State Society knows of anything in connection with its report that it wishes to have brought up, now would be the time; otherwise the reports might take the usual course and be printed in the Year Book.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: As I understand it, every suggestion has been considered?

The SECRETARY GENERAL: So far as I know.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Either by the State Society or by the Trustees or by the Executive Committee?

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Yes.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Or is being considered by the Resolutions Committee?

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, gentlemen, if there is no objection to the suggestion made by the Secretary General, the suggestion will be adopted. Has any one any objection? Then it stands adopted.

The Arkansas Society has a small membership, but maintains an active interest in patriotic work. On Washington's Birthday a banquet was held at the Hotel Marion, in Little Rock, at which the officers of the three Chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Little Rock were guests of the Society. There was a full attendance of the members and of the Daughters and friends. The following toasts were responded to: "The Cities of the American Revolution," Hon. Charles E. Taylor, Mayor of Little Rock; "The Character of Washington," by Gen. Jonathan Kellogg; "The Daughters of the American Revolution," by Mrs. S. S. Wassell, State Regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution; "Our French Allies," by Gen. B. W. Green; "The Minute Man of '76," by Rev. John Van Lear, and "Arkansas and the American Revolution," by Mr. Fay Hempstead, toastmaster and Secretary of the Society. A feature of the banquet was the receipt from President General Thruston of a hatchet of Colonial pattern made from the wood of a wild cherry tree cut from the estate at Wakefield, the birthplace of Washington. Mr. George Russ Brown, National Trustee for the Society, represented President Thruston in the presentation, the gift being received by Mr. Frank W. Rawles, President of the Society.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 6, 1915.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress of the National Society of Sons of the American Revolution, Portland, Oregon.

GENTLEMEN: The California Society of the Sons of the American Revolution makes the following report for the year ending April 19, 1915:

The Society gave a dinner in San Francisco October 23, 1914, at which ladies were present. The Daughters of the American Revolution of California and this Society gave a reception and ball to the delegates of the State Conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution in San Francisco February 18, 1915. The New England Association of California celebrated Concord and Lexington Day at the Massachusetts State House, on the Exposition grounds, April 19, 1915. This Society was invited and took part in the celebration. There was a large attendance on each occasion. The annual business meeting was held April 19, 1915. The Board of Managers held ten business meetings.

The membership was 414 March 31, the same as a year before. Although 32 members were gained during the year, there was a loss of the same number, 15, by death. The receipts during the year were $1,542.70; balance on hand, $1,098.16.

Dues were reduced to $2 for members living outside of the bay counties. Three circulars and the Constitution, roll of members, etc., were published. More than 60 books were bought, and the Society now has a very good reference library. The San Diego Chapter is in a prosperous condition. The Los Angeles Chapter has disbanded. Dr. James Lafayette Cogswell, who called the first meeting to organize the Sons of Revolutionary Sires in San Francisco, October 22, 1875, is living in Los Gatos, Cal.

Respectfully submitted,

T. A. PERKINS, Secretary.

The California Society is the oldest of the various State Societies making up the Sons of the American Revolution, and had its foundation through Dr. James Lafayette Cogswell, born in Wellington, Conn., November 23, 1830, who went to California in 1849, arriving in San Francisco September 15 of that year. He has been a resident of California ever since then and now lives at Los Gatos. He invited Peter W. Randle, Richard R. Randle, Ira C. Root, Emory L. Willard, and a few others to meet at his office, 230 Kearney street, San Francisco, on the evening of October 22, 1875, to organize a Society of Sons of Revolutionary Sires. A temporary organization, called "The National Society of Sons of Revolutionary Sires," was organized on that date, with Dr. James Lafayette Cogswell as President and Peter W. Randle, Vice-President. All of those who attended the first meeting are dead except Dr. Cogswell.

The Colorado Society participated in a number of patriotic meetings during the year. On the evening of September 18 more than 10,000 school children and adults assembled at the Denver Auditorium to celebrate the centenary of the composition of the "Star Spangled Banner" and the presentation by the public-school children of a flag to the city of Denver for Genesee Park. The celebration was almost entirely under the management of the Sons of the American Revolution and of the Daughters of the American Revolution. All patriotic societies were invited to co-operate and materially assisted in carrying out the plans. The money for the purchase of the flag was raised by a penny-a-piece contribution from school children of Denver, aggregating $166.24.

The Board of Managers of the Society gave a banquet at the Adams Hotel on December 7, 1914, in honor of Compatriot S. Thruston Ballard, brother of President General R. C. Ballard Thruston, and to his associates of the Industrial Commission.

The third annual patriotic meeting in commemoration of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln was held at the Denver Auditorium on the evening of February 20, under the auspices of "The Washington-Lincoln Memorial Association." Several hundred of the National Society leaflets were distributed among the foreign element of the large audience. The program included the following features: Recitation, "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address," Mr. Daniel G. Holland; Flag Ritual and Song "Columbine," Denver Public-school Pupils; Address, "To Our Newly Made Citizens," Dr. N. J. Myers; Presentation of Peace Banner (purchased by penny contributions of children in elementary grades, Denver public schools); Marshalling the Colors, "Flag Evolutions"; Songs and Tableau, "Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock"; Patriotic March, "Spirit of '76"; Motion Picture, "Battle Hymn of the Republic"; Drill and Tableau, "Cohorts of the Red, White, and Blue"; National Anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner"; Tableau, "Peace Enshrined."

An interesting feature at the annual banquet, on February 22, 1915, at the Adams Hotel, Denver, was a representation of the birth of the "Star Spangled Banner," which consisted of a picture, 12 feet by 4 feet, constructed along the lines of a stained-glass window, using colored papers and cardboard lead lines. It was illuminated with electric lights controlled by a rheostat run by clock-work. The lights in the hall being extinguished, miniature lights were flashed, representing the "bombs bursting in air," daylight gradually and almost imperceptibly approaching, so that it requires seven minutes for full daylight, when Frances Scott Key was seen standing on the deck of the vessel facing the fort where the flag is seen "floating in the air." The banqueters were supposed to be standing on the deck behind Key.

Fort McHenry was represented as from a picture of the same, received from the President of the Maryland Society. The entire work was the effort of two young men, who will in time become members of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The Denver Chapter held its usual monthly meetings during the season for the discussion of historical topics. The Colorado Springs Chapter and also the Chapters at Fort Collins and Greeley held occasional meetings.

The Connecticut Society numbers 1,173 members, which includes 49 new members admitted since April 1, 1914.

The graves of many Revolutionary soldiers and sailors have been marked with the Society marker during the year.

The Board of Managers have voted to offer prizes for the best essay written by high and grammar school pupils during the school year on any Revolutionary subject. Prizes were offered in the schools by members of the Society, and the winners of these prizes are eligible to compete for the State prize, which is a gold medal and $50 in gold for the winning high-school pupil and a silver medal and $50 in cash for the winning grammar-school pupil.

On June 27 the Washington Journey Pilgrims stopped at Westport, where a tablet was unveiled to commemorate the first engagement in Connecticut between the Continental and British troops when Connecticut was invaded, April 2, 1777.

On June 28 another tablet was unveiled on the Hotel Taft, where the patriotic citizens of New Haven rallied to welcome and bid God-speed to General Washington, who was on his way from Philadelphia to Cambridge to take command of the Army of United Colonies. He lodged that night at the Tavern of Isaac Beers, in New Haven, which stood on the site of the Hotel Taft.

On September 16, 1914, the regular Field Day was held at the Hotel Momauguin, near New Haven, attended by about 100 members and guests from all parts of the State. Following the shore dinner, President General Thruston delivered an address on the "Evolution of the United States Flag," in which he stated many facts of historical importance not generally known in connection with the origin of the "Stars and Stripes." Governor Simeon E. Baldwin also spoke on the advantages of the disarmament of nations and the settlement of disputes between nations by an International Court of Justice.

On account of the unsettled condition of business in this country and because of the disturbed feeling owing to the European war, it was decided to omit the annual banquet, usually held on Washington's Birthday, and contribute the amount that members would expend to a charitable fund of the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. The fund contributed amounted to over $600.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers in March it was voted to elect Prof. William Howard Taft as an honorary life member of the Connecticut Society.

A committee has been appointed which will take steps to distribute circulars among the aliens of the State, printed in various languages, outlining the history and advantages of our country and its government and institutions; also to take measures as may be feasible, through conference with bar associations and judges of the United States courts, to establish simple but impressive and dignified ceremonies when oaths of allegiance are administered to groups of new citizens in order that these may more fully comprehend the solemnity and importance of the duties assumed by them as they become members of the body politic.

The Col. Jeremiah Wadsworth Branch held a meeting in October at the Hartford Club, with a paper read by Dr. Roger M. Griswold, which dealt with the first sailing vessels and merchant mariners on the Connecticut River, and disclosed the little-known fact that Wethersfield was at one time one of the most important naval bases of the young United States, and that the first vessel of the American Navy was built there also. Mr. Belknap read an account of the Washington Journey Pilgrimage.

On December 16 another meeting was held, with an address by William Webster Ellsworth, President of the Century Company, on the making of Europe, superbly illustrated with stereopticon views of Europe from the days of Julius Caesar.

The Gen. David Humphreys Branch held their annual banquet on May 7, at the Café Metzger. The speakers were President Wilson H. Lee, Dr. Benjamin H. Cheney, and the Rev. Elisha Gifford.

The Delaware Society, through its President, Col. George A. Elliott, who was a member of the committee, participated in the unveiling of the granite marker erected by the State of Delaware in Valley Forge Park, Pennsylvania, on October 31, in memory of the Revolutionary soldiers of Delaware. The annual meeting and dinner was held at the Wilmington Club on Saturday evening, April 17. The reports of the various officers and committees showed commendable activity during the year. The Society was honored with a visit from President General Thruston, who was enthusiastically received by the members. At the conclusion of the business session the members retired to the spacious dining-room of the club, where they entertained the President General, R. C. Ballard Thruston, and the Governor of Delaware, Hon. Charles R. Miller. Colonel Elliott presided at the dinner. The principal speakers of the evening were President General Thruston, who spoke concerning the work of the National Society; Governor Miller, and Prof. Christian Sanderson, who occupies the old Washington headquarters at Chadd's Ford, Pa.

The District of Columbia Society held its usual monthly meetings from November to April. At the November meeting Rear Adm. Colby M. Chester, U. S. N., read a paper on "The Volunteer Navy During the Revolutionary War," reviewing the part played by the "Boat Department" under General Washington and the private-armed boats and vessels commissioned under authority of the Continental Congress. He showed that, while the deeds of the army had been recorded in every history of the war, little had been told of the many valiant exploits on the sea. There were 64 vessels in the regular Continental Navy, carrying 1,242 guns, and the volunteer private-armed fleet numbered 1,250 vessels, with 18,000 guns. The total number of men serving on the sea was about 70,000. British vessels to the number of 797 were captured, valued, with their cargoes, at $24,000,000. Prizes were brought into port and the proceeds of sales divided, in accordance with law, between the captors and the government. Seventy per cent of the naval fights were won by the Americans, while the army was victorious in but 40 per cent.

The customary "Ladies' Night" meeting was held on January 20. Col. Frederick C. Bryan presided at the exercises preceding the supper and dancing. Addresses were made by Mrs. William Cumming Story, President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and by Compatriot Henry S. Breckinridge, Assistant Secretary of War, who spoke of the present military strength of the United States. He urged the members of the Society to study the question of national armament and take a leading part in the determination of the controversy as to whether or not there shall be greater preparedness for war. He asked them to remember that nothing is more commendable than to seek peace, and also to recall the advice of George Washington, that nothing is more prudent than to prepare for war.

In the forenoon of February 22 there was held at Memorial Continental Hall a joint celebration by the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Sons of the Revolution, and the Sons of the American Revolution, under the direction of a Joint Committee on Arrangements, of which Commander John H. Moore, U. S. N., was chairman. The President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution presided. The celebration was attended by the President of the United States, members of the Cabinet, Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand, and others of the diplomatic corps, and a large public audience. Music was rendered by the United States Marine Band.

At a meeting on March 24 the Society strongly indorsed the proposal of the Commissioner of Pensions to publish in volume form for their historical and genealogical value the 78,284 admitted claims for pension by reason of service in the Revolutionary War. The Commissioner has called the matter of publication of the records to the attention of the Secretary of the Interior, recommending that permission be granted for the printing of 1,000 sets of two volumes each, to be sold at $2 per volume. All the data could be embraced in two such volumes.

The resolutions adopted were as follows:

Whereas the Commissioner of Pensions has written to the honorable Secretary of the Interior, notifying him that there are on file in the Pension Bureau 78,284 admitted claims pensioned by reason of service in the War of the Revolution, stating that said files contain valuable historical and genealogical data, and that they are constantly consulted for such purpose by those whose ancestors rendered service in the Revolution, and others, and asking permission to cause the same to be published, estimating that the most important data could be contained in two volumes of 1,000 pages each, and published at a cost of $2 per volume, and asking the Secretary for permission to publish 1,000 sets of two volumes which might be disposed of at cost; therefore be it

Resolved by the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, That we most heartily indorse the project, and we request of the honorable Secretary of the Interior that he give his consent to such publication, and that we extend the thanks of the Society to the Secretary, and also to the Commissioner of Pensions.

Be it further resolved, That the delegates of this Society at the coming National Congress be instructed to offer and urge a resolution of similar import with a view to its adoption.

Rear Admiral C. M. Chester, U. S. N., retired, President of the Society, read a carefully prepared address on the importance of increasing the war forces of the United States. He cited incidents in the history of this country when military force was the only power that averted war. He considered that "disarmament propaganda is not only dangerous for the future, but for the present, in that it has a pernicious effect on the manhood of the country. It is destroying the spirit of Spartan motherhood that made the women of the nation send their sons out to do or to die for their country."

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Society was observed on the evening of April 21, when the principal guest of the occasion was President General R. C. Ballard Thruston, who was visiting Washington also to address the Daughters of the American Revolution at the opening of their Continental Congress.

Mr. Thruston addressed the District Society on the origin and history of the American flag, calling particular attention to the various flags or standards carried by the army and the navy since the period of the Revolution.

President General Thruston met with a number of members of the Florida Society at the San Carlos Hotel, Pensacola, on the evening of March 17, when he addressed them on the patriotic work of the National Society, calling particular attention to the efforts being made to secure the construction of an archives building in Washington for the preservation of the priceless historical records now scattered through many government buildings and out-of-the-way places, where they are inaccessible and in danger of destruction. Mr. Alexander Clement Blount, of Pensacola, has been elected as Secretary, and an effort is being made to arouse greater interest in the Society throughout the State.

SOCIETY IN FRANCE.

The Society in France has not been active in holding meetings, but its members have accomplished a great achievement in past years in bringing about the publication of the roll of the soldiers and sailors of France who aided the cause of Americas Independence. On each Fourth of July its members participate in exercises at the Tomb of Lafayette, under the auspices of the Empire State Society.

The Hawaiian Society held its annual meeting on June 24, 1914. On November 25 patriotic exercises were conducted at the Punahou Academy and the Normal School, in Honolulu, in celebration of the centennial of the "Star Spangled Banner" and of one hundred years of peace with Great Britain. An address was delivered by the President of the Society, Dr. S. D. Barnes, in which he told the story of Francis Scott Key and the writing of the national song.

On December 21 the Hawaiian Society and the Aloha Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution held a joint banquet to commemorate the landing of the Mayflower, December 21, 1620, and the signing of the Treaty of Ghent, December 24, 1814. It was attended by a large number of officers of the army and navy and public officials and guests. Dr. Samuel Denham Barnes, President of the Society, presided as toastmaster, and addresses were delivered as follows: "Experiences with Puritanism," Governor Lucius E. Pinkham; "Forefathers in Hawaii," Hon. Sanford B. Dole, Federal Judge and ex-Governor of Hawaii; "The Good Ship Supply," Maj. Gen. William H. Carter, Dept. Commander, U. S. A.; "Puritan and Cavalier," Hon. Malcolm A. Franklin, Collector of the Port; "The Mayflower Pact," Hon. William R. Castle, lawyer and chief citizen; "The Good Ship Welcome," Prof. William A. Bryan, College of Hawaii; "The Treaty of Ghent a Permanent Peace," Dr. Wilbert P. Ferguson, President of Mills School.

The Society has issued a Bulletin of Progress, setting forth the activities and purposes of the organization. Delegates have been appointed to attend the Portland Congress. A contribution has been made to the "The La Fayette Box" fund in accordance with an appeal from the Massachusetts Society. Co-operation is had with the Daughters of the American Revolution in promoting patriotic work in the Hawaiian Islands.

The Idaho Society held its annual meeting and dinner in the Jungle Room of the Owyhee Hotel, Boise, on the evening of February 22, with an attendance of twenty. The guests were ex-Gov. James H. Hawley, former Attorney General Samuel Hubbard Hays, and State Senator Ravenel McBeth.

Following the dinner a business session was held, when reports from the President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Registrar were received and accepted. The committee appointed to supervise the award of medals for essays on patriotic subjects by high-school pupils reported a successful contest about to be concluded, and a similar contest was ordered for next year. Col. M. W. Wood was nominated Trustee for the National Society. The Secretary was authorized to invite the members of the Empire State Society tour to stop in Boise en route to the Portland Congress. Telegrams of greeting were read from the President General and from the President of the Oregon Society.

Following the business session an interesting program was rendered, including a number of patriotic addresses.

The Illinois Society held its annual Yorktown Day Banquet on Monday evening, October 19, at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, attended by 300 members and guests. President Chancellor L. Jenks presided as toastmaster. The program was as follows: Music by the Schubert Male Quartette; addresses on "Recent Experiences in Europe," by John D. Shoop, first assistant superintendent of schools, Chicago; "Our New Commercial and Industrial Era," by John J. Arnold, vice-president First National Bank, Chicago, vice-president Chicago Association of Commerce; "America the World's Peacemaker," by Thomas E. Green, LL. D., vice-president American Peace Society, President Illinois Society, Sons of the Revolution.

The annual meeting was held at the Auditorium Hotel Thursday evening, December 3, the anniversary of the admission of Illinois into the Union. About 150 members were present. Reports were made on the condition and activities of the Society, which now numbers 1,010 active members—the largest in its history. An address was delivered by Louis P. Lochner, director of the American Peace Society, on "Personal Observations and Impressions in the War Zone."

At the quarterly meeting at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, on the evening of January 22, the 140 new members of the year were urged to be present and to respond when their names were called, stating, in seven words or less, their answers to the question, "How I became interested in the Society" or "Why I joined." For several years this has proven a most interesting feature. An address was delivered by Rev. Dr. John P. Brushingham, of Chicago.

At the quarterly meeting on March 26 an address was delivered by Compatriot Hon. Hugh S. Magill, Jr., superintendent of schools of Springfield, Ill., on "Does Illinois Need a New Constitution? If so, Why?"

The 140th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington was observed on April 19 by a reception and dinner at the Auditorium Hotel, with lady guests. The celebration was under the direction of the Patriotic Advancement Committee, Mr. James Edgar Brown, chairman. President Chancellor L. Jenks presided as toastmaster. The program included an address by Edmund J. James, president University of Illinois; address on "Our Debt to the American Revolution," by Rev. Preston Bradley; address on "The Human Race—Can it be Civilized or Will it Remain Savage?" by Judge Frank P. Sadler.

Resolutions having been adopted by the Illinois Society suggesting the observance of the semi-centennial anniversary of the death of President Abraham Lincoln, the Governor of Illinois issued a proclamation calling upon citizens of the State to pay tribute to the memory of that great American on April 15. Public attention was called to this fitting observance, resulting in the issuance of an executive order by the President of the United States closing all offices of the government throughout the country on that day and the display of the flag at half mast on all Federal buildings, forts, and vessels of the navy as a mark of respect to Abraham Lincoln.

The Springfield Chapter, in co-operation with other patriotic organizations, held Lincoln memorial exercises, which included the reading of Governor Dunne's proclamation by Compatriot Hon. Hugh S. Magill, Jr., and an address by Col. Charles F. Mills, President of the Chapter. The Chapter arranged a special program of exercises attending the decoration, on Saturday, May 29, of the graves of twenty-five soldiers of the Revolution buried in Sangamon County. The program at each locality includes a statement of the objects of the Sons of the American Revolution, reading of the record of the soldier whose grave is decorated, patriotic song by school children, and placing of the flag and flowers on the grave.

The Oak Park Chapter held its annual business meeting and banquet at the Unity House on Saturday evening, January 30, when about 100 were present. Chancellor L. Jenks, President of the State Society, referred to the large value the Oak Park Chapter had been to it and spoke of the broader patriotism which is now coming to be understood as the spirit wherein each finds his own best good in the highest welfare of all. W. H. Hatch told of the prizes awarded to Oak Park schools for the best essays upon some theme pertaining to the American Revolution by pupils in the eighth grades. Isaac E. Brown gave an address on "Faith of Our Fathers." He referred to the stern traits of our colonial ancestors, but showed, notwithstanding this, their love of recreation and their love of home life and their faith in God and in immortality. Former Gov. Charles S. Deneen delivered an address on the history, resources, laws, and achievements of Illinois and her people.

The Indiana Society held its twenty-sixth annual business meeting at the University Club, Indianapolis, on the evening of February 25, the anniversary of the Battle of Vincennes. At the banquet following the business meeting the speakers were R. C. Ballard Thruston, of Louisville, Ky., President General of the National Society, who spoke on "The Work of the National Society"; Capt. J. J. Toffey, Jr., who spoke on "The Army," and Henry Lane Wilson, who spoke on "Mexico."

Captain Toffey was a member of the brigade which relieved the marines after the capture of Vera Cruz. He gave an account of the expedition and praised the excellent discipline of the American troops.

Mr. Thruston made a plea for greater care of government and State archives and urged the creation of a Department of Archives, with appropriations to suitably house the mass of valuable documents. He lamented the careless method of administering the oath to foreigners, asserting that a more dignified ceremony should be used to impress the foreigner when he was forswearing allegiance from another country to that of the United States.

The John Morton Chapter held its annual business meeting and dinner at Terra Haute on the evening of September 4, when the Chapter outlined a plan of systematic marking of historical places, urged a department of genealogy in the city library, and decided on permanent meeting dates to celebrate historic events.

The dates fixed for permanent meetings were September 4, anniversary of the Battle of Fort Harrison; December 11, anniversary of the admission of Indiana to the Union; February 22, Washington's Birthday; June 14, Flag Day.

Prof. Herbert Briggs, retiring President, acted as toastmaster. Guests at the dinner responded with informal talks. Colonel Jewett recalled the history of Fort Harrison. On suggestion of President Briggs, the Chapter instructed James E. Somes, Past President of the Indiana Society, to use his effort in supplying a genealogical department in the city. Dr. J. R. Morgan, of Kokomo, President of the Indiana Society, briefly reviewed the Syracuse Congress.

The Iowa Society held its annual meeting at Des Moines on March 16, when officers were elected and reports made on the operations of the State organization and the several Local Chapters. Much good has been done during the past few years in promoting the study of history in Iowa through the award of numerous medals to students of the colleges and high schools.

The Ben Franklin Chapter of Des Moines held a series of monthly meetings for the reading and discussion on various topics, including "The Attitude of France Toward the American Colonies During the Revolution" and "America in the World's Tomorrow." The Woodbury Chapter, on November 30, celebrated the anniversary of the signing of the preliminary Treaty of Peace in 1783. A banquet was served and extracts from the Treaty were read by O. B. Talley. There was an informal discussion of the Revolutionary War and of the present struggle in Europe.

The Kentucky Society, at its annual meeting and banquet, at the Pendennis Club, Louisville, elected officers for the year. Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Charles Ewell Craik, on the services of his grandfather, Dr. James Craik, Washington's physician and personal friend; President General Thruston, on the need of better preparedness for war; R. R. Burnam, on marking historic sites in Kentucky, and by Rev. Dr. W. W. Landrum.

The Society met on January 19 to celebrate the 134th anniversary of the Battle of Cowpens (January 17, 1781), when President General Thruston and Mrs. Julia Blackburn were hosts of the Society. President Albert M. Henry, of the Michigan Society, a member of the National Executive Committee, was a special guest of honor and made a brief address on the Society's work. Brig. Gen. Philip Reade, U. S. A. (retired), Historian of the Massachusetts Society, read a paper on "The Negro in the War of the Revolution." General Reade said 3,000 negroes served as soldiers during the war.

President General Thruston, responding to a request, talked briefly about the researches of a committee which is writing the history of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The Society observed the 140th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington with a meeting and banquet at the Tavern Club, Louisville. A letter was read from President General Thruston, in which he urged the Louisville organization do all in its power to solicit Federal judges to make the naturalization ceremonies, in which foreigners are admitted to American citizenship, more impressive and to lay special emphasis on the responsibilities of an American citizen, its advantages, what it means, and what is expected of a good citizen and voter. Mr. Thruston also urges that judges be induced to give much of their time in assisting to improve, promote, and uplift the condition of the new American, and at all times to show a willingness to co-operate in the betterment work.

Following the reading of the letter, President Hundley said that he desired to impress upon those present that Americans must arouse themselves in the treatment and education of the hordes of immigrants entering this country each year. President Hundley appointed a committee of five to carry out the suggestions made by Mr. Thruston.

A discussion of the immigration problem was participated in by Prof. R. P. Halleck and Congressman Swager Sherley. Miss Ingram spoke on "Making Americans Out of Foreigners," and Mrs. Tucker told of her experiences at Ellis Island among the immigrants and the work that is being done in Louisville to educate them.

To the Secretary General:

I beg leave to render this my annual report to the National Society of the activities of the Louisiana Society for the current year. From the report of the change in our roll of members, which I recently mailed you, it was with great regret that I had to drop eight members from the roll for non-payment of dues; also to record the death of two of our compatriots since last report. The year, as a whole, has been a very uneventful one for us. Our work has been entirely routine. We decorated the Revolutionary soldiers' graves as usual. We conferred prize essay medals in the name of the National Society on two young ladies of the Girls' Upper and Lower High School of New Orleans for best papers on Lafayette in the War of the American Revolution. We held our reunion and banquet this year on Jefferson's Birthday. Our President, Mr. Leach, announced it to be, instead of a formal banquet with set speeches and toasts appropriate to the occasion, a getting-together affair, with a free exchange of ideas as to the ways and means to build up our Society and enthruse greater interest in its welfare and success into our old members. Many splendid and practical suggestions were made, and the President appointed a committee to see to it that they were carried out as far as practicable. Before concluding this report I must not forget to note the fact that we admitted six new members into our ranks during the last year and have placed many more applications which we hope will soon be returned to the Secretary properly filled and acceptable to the Registrar General. With greetings to the delegates from the Louisiana Society, I remain,

With high regards, THOMAS DABNEY DIMITRY, Secretary.

The Maine Society held its annual business meeting and dinner at Riverton, near Portland, on February 22. Measures were discussed for promoting various patriotic activities.

The retiring President, Hon. John Francis Sprague, spoke on the mission of the Sons of the American Revolution in developing in the minds of the people a deeper love for their country and in the promotion of historical research. Gen. Philip Reade, Historian of the Massachusetts Society, the chief speaker of the day, took for his subject "What Women Did in the War of the Revolution." He recalled the women who took up arms and those who stayed at home and by their humble duties did so much to make the success of the war possible.

The Maryland Society co-operated with the city of Baltimore in celebrating the Centennial of the writing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Francis Scott Key in September, 1814. Ex-President General Hon. Henry Stockbridge was appointed by President General Thruston to represent the National Society on that occasion. Ex-President General Edwin Warfield was chairman of the Committee on Patriotic Organizations, and many other members of the Maryland Society were officially connected with the celebration.

The anniversary of the Surrender of Cornwallis, in 1781, was observed at a meeting at the Belvedere Hotel, Baltimore, on the evening of October 19, attended by more than a hundred members and guests, including Vice-President General John H. Moore, U. S. N., and Secretary General A. Howard Clark, who made brief addresses. Mr. Hancock reviewed the Yorktown campaign; Mr. Shanahan described Tench Tilghman's ride to tell the news to Congress, and an original poem on the ride was read by Rev. Dr. Huckel.

The Society celebrated Washington's Birthday by a general meeting at the Hotel Belvedere, Baltimore, on the evening of February 22, attended by 136 members and guests. Compatriot Layton F. Smith read a paper entitled "Extracts from the Autobiographical Sketch of the Life of Gen. John Burroughs, of Lycoming County, Pa."

The Hon. John C. Rose, judge of the United States Court for the District of Maryland, delivered an address on "Some By-products of the Revolution."

It was announced that the Society was preparing to erect a memorial over the grave of Gen. Mordecai Gist, one of the most noted Marylanders in the Revolutionary War. This grave is located in the cemetery of St. Michael's Protestant Episcopal Church, in Charleston, S. C., and the design of the memorial consists of a flat slab of grayish-pink granite, 6 feet in length by 3 feet in width and 1 foot in height, upon which is laid a wreath of oak leaves bearing the insignia of the Sons of the American Revolution, with the name of General Gist and proper inscription cut into the stone below the wreath. It is expected that the memorial will be completed and ready for unveiling some time in the early fall of this year.

The annual meeting of the Maryland Society was held at the Hotel Belvedere on April 19, attended by more than 100 members. An address was delivered by Dr. John H. Latane, of the Johns Hopkins University, on "America's Interest in the European War," showing the shifting changes of the rules for neutrality during the present war.

The Massachusetts Society enrolled 110 new members during the year, largely through the efforts of the George Washington Chapter of Springfield and the Old Essex Chapter of Lynn.

The State Society has held the usual three meetings and the Board of Managers its stated meetings, all with a good attendance of members.

The annual Field Day, on "Columbus Day," October 12, 1914, was an excursion to the Wayside Inn, South Sudbury, via Concord by train, and from there by automobiles, stopping en route at places of historic interest.

Massachusetts' part in the Washington Journey Celebration, from the time of the arrival of the "Pilgrims" at Springfield, June 30, to the close of the ceremonies at Cambridge, July 3, were fully described in the "Bulletin" of October, 1914. Besides the markers mentioned, there was one placed in Weston through subscriptions raised by Compatriot William B. Clarke, of that town.

During the summer of 1914 the Society's office was removed to Room 439, Tremont Building, Boston.

The 1913 Triennial Year Book has been given to all of the members who have applied for it, and 125 copies were given to public libraries in the State.

A new Chapter of the Society has been formed in Edgartown through the efforts of Abner L. Braley, Esq.

Contributions were made to the American Red Cross and to Boston Chapter for its "Lafayette boxes," which were sent to sick and wounded soldiers in the Paris, France, hospitals.

At the annual meeting on Patriots' Day, April 19, 1915, resolutions on the death of former Gov. Curtis Guild, a member of the Society, were adopted by a rising vote. Governor Guild will be pleasantly remembered as one of the orators at the New Haven Congress in 1903 and the Boston Congress in 1906; also at a public meeting, February 17, 1915, at Montpelier, Vt., under the auspices of the Vermont Society.

The Secretary of the Michigan Society herewith submits his report of the progress of the State Society during the preceding year, together with such suggestions as he deems proper for the promotion of the objects of the National Society.

At the Twenty-fifth Annual Congress of the National Society, held at Syracuse, N. Y., May 18, 1914, the Michigan Society was represented by Albert M. Henry, Edward W. Bissell, Richard H. Fyfe, Wm. M. Finck, and Williams C. Harris. Our Society has been represented during the year on the Board of Trustees of the National Society by our President, Albert M. Henry, who was further honored in May, 1914, by being appointed a member of the Executive Committee of the National Society.

Two additional Local Chapters have been organized during the year—one at Mt. Pleasant and a provisional one at Kalamazoo. Those previously established are Detroit, Ann Arbor, and Grand Rapids. The interest in this Society throughout other portions of the State has materially increased, new members having also been admitted from Howell, Alpena, Escanaba, and Munising. Eighteen new members have been added to the Detroit Chapter; thirteen new members added and four ex-members reinstated in Grand Rapids, eleven in Mt. Pleasant, and nine in Ann Arbor. The membership by Chapters is now as follows: Detroit, 227; Grand Rapids, 38; Ann Arbor, 21; Mt. Pleasant, 11; Kalamazoo, 5.

There are also in the city of Detroit thirty-nine members of the State Society who have not yet affiliated with the Detroit Chapter.

During the year the Society interested itself in expressing its approval of a bill pending in the State Legislature for the purchase of two copies of the Houdon statue of Washington at Richmond, Va., for location in the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, and the State Capitol, at Lansing.

The campaign for membership and organization of Local Chapters was continued, and Chapters at Marquette, Lansing, and Port Huron are expected to organize during the coming year.

The annual banquet and election of officers of the State Society was held at the Detroit Club, Detroit, Friday evening, April 16, 1915. President Albert M. Henry presided. Greetings were received from the Local Chapters, and addresses were delivered by Hon. Ormond F. Hunt; "Our Flag Afloat," by Compatriot Congressman George A. Loud, and "Our Country," by Compatriot U. S. Senator William Alden Smith.

A public meeting was held Washington's Birthday, 1915, under the auspices of this Society, in the Auditorium of the Art Museum, Detroit, consisting of an address, "Washington and Patriotism," by Compatriot Harry A. Lockwood, Vice-President of the Detroit Chapter, and an illustrated talk on "The Life and Times of Washington," by Compatriot Charles Moore, secretary of the Michigan Historical Pioneer Society.

The local social events are carried on in Detroit by the Detroit Chapter, the annual meeting of which for 1914 was held May 29, at the Hotel Pontchartrain, President Williams C. Harris presiding. A buffet luncheon was served.

The first meeting for the season of 1914-1915 was held December 11 at the University Club, when Charles E. Chadsey, Ph. D., superintendent of schools, spoke on "The Teaching of Patriotism in the Schools." Attendance, 70. The second meeting was on February 12, at the Hotel Statler, when Mr. John R. Lee, personal representative of Henry Ford, talked on "The Immigrant as a Worker and a Citizen." Attendance, 100. At the third meeting, March 19, at the residence of Harry A. Lockwood, 1077 Second avenue, Ira W. Jayne, superintendent of the Municipal Recreation Commission, spoke on "Recreation and its Proper Supervision as a Necessary Factor in the Making of Good Citizens." Attendance, 65.

The annual meeting of the Detroit Chapter was held Friday evening, May 14, at the Detroit Athletic Club, President Frederick B. Smith presiding. Attendance, 75. An important feature of the Chapter's work during the past year was the report of the Committee on Patriotic Education and the report of the Committee on Immigration and Citizenship. J. H. Dague, Industrial Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., explained the school now being conducted by that organization for the training of applicants for citizenship.

Ann Arbor Chapter held an entertainment December 14 in the high-school hall, consisting of illustrated lectures on "Camp, Canoe, and Camera," by Prof. Geo. R. Swain; "Forest Scenes," by Prof. Filibert Roth, head of the Foresters' Department of the University of Michigan, and the Washburn Yellowstone Expedition, illustrated by views of Yellowstone Park, by Prof. Warren W. Florer, President of the Chapter. The annual meeting and banquet was held February 22 and officers were elected.

Kalamazoo Chapter on Washington's Birthday was provisionally organized under the chairmanship of Edward C. Parsons.

Mt. Pleasant Chapter had its first regular meeting on February 8 and elected officers for the year.

Apparently there is a considerable revival of interest in matters of a patriotic nature in this State, the attendance at the meetings being larger than ever before.

The suggestions occurring to mind at this time are, first, the great value of a campaign for the promotion of Local Chapters throughout the State as a means of arousing interest in this Society; second, the desirability of selecting topics for discussion relating to current matters of patriotic interest rather than relying entirely upon matters of historical concern alone; third, the adoption by the Annual Congress of the following resolution:

Whereas the volumes entitled "Heads of Families at the First Census of the United States, 1790," as published by the Department of Commerce and Labor, Bureau of the Census, are incomplete, in that those for Delaware, New Jersey, Georgia, Kentucky, and Tennessee are missing, and that for Virginia contains only 39 of the 78 counties into which that State was divided, the original lists having been destroyed when the British burned the Capitol at Washington during the War of 1812; and

Whereas the publication of the heads of families at the second census of the United States would tend to supply this deficiency, and would also, as to the other States, be of great value to patriotic societies, persons interested in genealogy, and those desirous of studying the early history of the United States: now therefore be it

Resolved, That Congress be requested to authorize and direct the publication in permanent form, by counties and minor civil divisions, of the names of the heads of families returned at the second census of the United States, in 1800.

DEVELOPMENT OF CHAPTER ORGANIZATION IN MICHIGAN.

Prior to the granting of a charter to the Detroit Chapter, there existed in Michigan but one Chapter organization. This—the Western Michigan Chapter—was granted a charter March 12, 1807, upon the application of eleven members of the State Society residing in Grand Rapids, giving them territorial jurisdiction over the counties of Kent, Ottawa, Allegan, Kalamazoo, Ionia, Barry, and Muskegon. This Chapter continued in existence until March 27, 1914, during which period forty-three gentlemen residing within these counties were members of the State Society.

From the time of the organization of the State Society the great majority of the members resided in Detroit. It was the custom for the State Society to hold its social functions in that city. Members of the Western Michigan Chapter began to feel that the State Society was in fact rather a local affair, the benefits of which were principally enjoyed by the residents of Detroit, and disaffection resulted which considerably diminished the membership in Grand Rapids and other parts of the State.

To remedy this situation the members residing in Detroit decided to divorce their local social functions from the activities of the State Society and to carry them on through the agency of a local organization. On March 12, 1913, they applied for a charter for a Detroit Chapter, with territorial limits comprising Wayne County. The charter for this Chapter was granted May 2, 1913. The Chapter was organized and a constitution adopted November 1, 1913. All members of the State Society residing in Detroit were invited to become members. Of the 266 members so invited only 28 have declined affiliation with the Local Chapter.

Detroit Chapter holds monthly meetings during the winter seasons at the hotels, clubs, and by invitation at the residences of members. At these meetings addresses are given upon topics of interest, followed by general discussion participated in by the members. Refreshments and social intercourse follow.

Other Chapters have been established in Michigan as follows: On March 27, 1914, the members of the Western Michigan Chapter relinquished all territorial rights, under their charter of 1897, to counties other than Kent, and received in return a new charter limited to Kent County. Their membership, which had diminished greatly, at once began to increase. Thirteen new members have been added and four former members reinstated. Grand Rapids now has a membership of 28.

Upon the same date—March 27, 1914—five members of the State Society residing in Washtenaw County, together with eleven new members whom they had secured, were granted a charter for the County of Washtenaw. This Chapter, with headquarters at Ann Arbor, now has a membership of 21. Situated at the State University, its opportunity for influence is wide.

On January 22, 1915, ten gentlemen residing in Mt. Pleasant were admitted to membership and granted a charter for a Chapter for Isabella County. Their membership included an actual son of the Revolution—Peter Alverson Wilsey.

On February 22, 1915, five members residing in Kalamazoo formed a provisional organization for the establishment of a Local Chapter in that county.

Future Chapters are promised by local workers at Marquette, Lansing, Pontiac, and Port Huron, at each of which localities the Society has five members.

The State Society receives from each new applicant an admission fee of $5, and has adopted the plan of returning to Local Chapters, where such exist, one-half of this admission fee. All members of the State Society pay State and national dues, amounting to $3, whether members of Local Chapters or not. The amount of Local Chapter dues is optional with each Chapter. Members of Detroit Chapter are required to pay Chapter dues of $2 each.

There can be no question but that the organization of Local Chapters greatly stimulates interest in this Society throughout the State. Its effect upon the growth of membership in the State Society may be noted as follows:

For the ten years ending 1913 there had been no growth in membership, the losses by death and resignation being just equal to the gain from new members. In the year ending April 1, 1914, 24 new members were admitted, and in the year ending April 1, 1915, 62 new members were admitted, making a total membership at that time of 430.

The Minnesota Society on October 19, 1914, celebrated the anniversary of the surrender of Yorktown by a banquet at the Hampshire Arms, Minneapolis, about 60 members being present. President Charles T. Thompson presided. Mr. Allin D. Albert, editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, delivered an address on the "Results of Yorktown." At a business meeting following the address the by-laws of the Society were amended to permit the formation of Chapters throughout the State, through which it is hoped to stimulate interest and largely increase the membership and influence of the organization. As a result of this action the George Washington Chapter was formed at Minneapolis.

At the annual meeting of the Society, on January 11, 1915, Rev. L. A. Crandall, President of the George Washington Chapter, delivered an address on "The Power of an Idea in American Life," which has been published as a twelve-page pamphlet.

The Nebraska Society held its annual business meeting at the Pioneers' Rooms, Omaha, on February 22. Resolutions were passed asking the State Legislature to pass a bill appropriating funds for the erection of a fire-proof building for the Iowa State Historical Society and a bill providing for a commission to design and adopt a State flag for Nebraska.

The Fremont Chapter was installed on February 18. The ceremonies took place at Odd Fellows' Hall and were very interesting and impressive, and the many addresses were full of patriotism, Americanism, and loyalty to all the best interests that can help our Society's cause. There is a very sturdy body of successful men at Fremont, which city was originally largely settled by Americans with Puritan ancestry, and already a movement is on foot in the new Chapter for the erection of a monument to John C. Fremont in that city by the members of the Society there.

On May 10, the 140th anniversary of the surrender of Fort Ticonderoga, at a banquet tendered by the members resident at Lincoln, the Lincoln Chapter, No. 3, was formally installed, with about 100 charter members. Compatriot Chancellor Samuel Avery, of the Nebraska State University, presided as toastmaster. Mr. Nelson Moore, 84 years old, one of the charter members of the Chapter, was the guest of the evening. He is a real son of the Revolution; his father, King Moore, born in Connecticut in 1762, died in 1836, served three years and seven months in the Third Continental Artillery.

The Board of Managers hope to install Chapters at some other towns in 1915, and are directing special efforts toward the increase of membership in the Nebraska Society.

Yours very truly,

EDWIN O. HALSTEAD,
Secretary.

The New Jersey Society has completed another year of active work, with a net membership increase of 151, or an increase of four greater than our net increase of last year.

The pilgrimage in commemoration of Washington's journey from Philadelphia, Pa., to Cambridge, Mass., in 1775, to take command of the Continental Army, was most successful. New Jersey bore her part well; and, although the weather was very warm, the program was carried out to the enjoyment of all. The members of the Society in localities through which the pilgrimage passed responded well to the call of the committee and assisted in maintaining the enthusiasm to the end. Three tablets erected by this Society, marking General Washington's route, were dedicated—one at Trenton, on St. Michael's Episcopal Church; one at New Brunswick, on the Second Reformed Church, and the third on the Firemen's Building, Newark. The trip was made by automobile. Our New Jersey Committee was originally composed of Compatriots David L. Pierson, George H. Richards, and Nehemiah Perry Howell; but Mr. Howell was compelled by illness to resign, and Compatriot Thomas W. Williams was appointed. The committee met the pilgrims on the bridge over the Delaware River, near Trenton, as they crossed from Pennsylvania, on June 23, and conducted them through New Jersey to the ferry at Jersey City, where they crossed over to New York on June 25. The original route and time schedule of General Washington were adhered to as far as possible, but on account of the difference in the method of travel the pilgrims had some little time to spare. This was occupied by trips to near-by points of interest, such as the Trenton Battle Monument, the graves of some of the Signers from New Jersey of the Declaration of Independence—Richard Stockton, John Witherspoon, and Abraham Clark—where wreaths were placed; the Headquarters of Washington at Rocky Hill, the Battlefield of Monmouth, near Freehold, and the old Tennent Church; the Freehold Battle Monument, the grave of "Fighting Parson" Caldwell at Elizabeth, the statue of Washington in Washington Park, Newark; Springfield Battlefield, and Washington's Headquarters at Morristown. Greetings were extended to the pilgrims by President Hibben of Princeton University, President Demarest of Rutgers, and President McPherson of Lawrenceville School. The Jersey Blue Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution gave a reception at the home of their regent, Mrs. M. Bedell Vail, at New Brunswick, on the evening of June 24. The enthusiasm and interest of the citizens along the route were evidenced by the display of flags, and the principals and teachers of a number of the schools in Essex County assembled the children to greet the pilgrims. The program of the Societies in the other four States through which the pilgrims passed—Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts—were similar. Newspaper clippings from the various towns and cities along the route have been secured. A set of kodak pictures taken on the journey have been presented to the Society by President General R. C. Ballard Thruston, and Compatriot George H. Richards also secured some pictures of interest. The clippings and photos will all be placed in a scrapbook and filed at headquarters for a permanent record of the event.

Under the direction of our Committee on Monuments and Memorials, a tablet was erected on the Reformed Church of Paramus, at Ridgewood, N. J., in memory of the Revolutionary patriots of the vicinity. It was dedicated on Independence Day, July 4, 1914. The members of Paramus Chapter co-operated with the committee in making the arrangements. Luncheon was served at Ridgewood Country Club, and a patriotic band concert at the Paramus Church followed, with open-air service and unveiling of the tablet. The principal address was made by Rev. William H. Vroom, D. D. The tablet was presented by President Merrill and accepted by Rev. Henry D. Cook, pastor of the church.

The annual church service in commemoration of the surrender at Yorktown was held in Trinity Episcopal Church, Newark, on October 18, 1914. Representatives of other patriotic societies and of the Washington Guard of this Society attended. Rev. Mercer Green Johnston, pastor of the church, delivered the address.

A series of receptions to the Traveling Banner were held during November and December. President Merrill presented the banner and greetings were exchanged by the Chapters. Music and speeches added to the interest and enjoyment of the gatherings, and social hours followed the formal exercises.

The first meeting was held by Elizabethtown Chapter at Carteret Arms, Elizabeth, N. J., on November 6. The principal address was by William T. Stuchell, on "The New America," in which he made an inspiring appeal for a higher patriotism.

The second meeting was held by Orange Chapter on November 14 at the home of Compatriot Col. Henry A. Potter, East Orange, N. J. Historian General David L. Pierson, who is also President of the Chapter, reviewed local history and patriots in an address on "Some Scenes and Incidents in the Mountain Settlement During the War for American Independence." The gold insignia awarded to the State Society at the National Congress was presented to Compatriot William J. Conkling, whose four sons have joined the Society.

At a meeting on January 14, 1915, the literary exercises of the evening took the form of a debate on the question, "Resolved, That women had more influence than men in promoting and concluding the Revolution." Gen. Henry W. Freeman acted as judge, with the ladies present serving as jurors; and Howard Marshall, F. Edwin Elwell, Dr. Geo. H. Richards, and David L. Pierson spoke for the affirmative side, while John T. Neff, S. Carl Downs, and John Lenord Merrill took the negative. The question was decided in favor of the affirmative side.

The reception by Montclair Chapter was held at the home of Compatriot Albert French, Montclair, on November 20. "The Condition and Needs of the Navy" was the subject of an address by Lieut. McDowell, U. S. N., who held that the expense of an adequate navy should be regarded as national insurance.

The next meeting was held by Newark Chapter on November 24, at the Essex Club, Newark. Compatriot Harry F. Brewer, Secretary of Elizabethtown Chapter, discussed "The Tendency of America to Depend upon Europe." Mr. Brewer cited present conditions as a sad commentary on this dependence on Europe.

Monmouth Chapter received the banner December 2 in the rooms of the Chapter at Asbury Park. An address was delivered by Rev. Charles E. Brugler.

Compatriot Cornelius Doremus entertained Paramus Chapter and guests on the occasion of the reception by that Chapter on December 11. Rev. Isaac J. Lansing, D. D., spoke on "The Larger Patriotism," in which he said that the greater patriotism comprehends a larger education and not the mere brutal idea of the survival of the fittest. It is founded on righteousness.

On December 16 the final reception of the series was held by the recently organized Morris County Chapter in the Blue Moon Tea Room at Morristown. Compatriot William P. Tuttle spoke on the local topic, "Morris County in Revolutionary Days."

The annual meeting of the Society was held in the rooms of the New Jersey Historical Society, Newark, on January 2, 1915, and was preceded by a luncheon for members and guests and a reception to the retiring officers. Presiding officers of other patriotic societies in the State were guests of the Society and extended greetings. The Washington hatchet gavel received from President General Ballard Thruston was formally presented to the Society by President John Lenord Merrill. The reports of the officers and committees showed great activity throughout the year and the largest increase in membership in the history of the Society. Hearty congratulations and words of appreciation were extended to retiring President Merrill for his faithful service during the two years of his administration. Under the provisions of the Constitution, Mr. Merrill was not eligible to re-election this year. The following officers were elected: President, W. I. Lincoln Adams; First Vice-President, John Lawrence Boggs; Second Vice-President, Samuel Craig Cowart; Secretary, John Randel Weeks; Treasurer, Arthur Metcalf Morse; Registrar, George Herbert Richards. After the election the officers came forward, President-elect Adams being escorted by members of Montclair Chapter, of which he is a member, and the color-bearers. Retiring President Merrill congratulated Compatriot Adams, placed around his neck the insignia of his office, and presented him to the Society. This ceremony was followed by the singing of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." President Adams then expressed his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him by the Society and assumed the chair. Retiring Treasurer Oscar H. Condit was also warmly thanked for his long and faithful service. Compatriot John L. Merrill was appointed chairman of a committee to perfect the organization of the Washington Guard of this Society.

A reception was tendered President W. I. Lincoln Adams by the Chapter on the evening of February 3 at the home of Dr. George H. Richards, Orange. During the evening President Adams predicted that after the war immigration from European countries would be increased, and suggested that patriotic organizations should not only be interested in the welfare of the foreigners in this country, but should avail themselves of every opportunity to prepare for the responsibilities of citizenship the people who will come to America. Messages were received from National officers and of other State Societies.

The State Society has offered a gold insignia of the Society to the Chapter securing the largest number of new members for the State Society, who also join the Chapter between April 1, 1914, and March 31, 1915.

Four of the five representatives from New Jersey at the Star Spangled Banner Centennial, held at Baltimore, Md., in September, 1914, were members of this Society.

We were also represented, upon invitation, at the 250th anniversary service of the First Presbyterian Church at Elizabeth, N. J., on October 25, 1914, and at the civil celebration of the city during the following week.

The Committee on Increase of Membership has worked faithfully and the results of their work are apparent in the statistical report.

Another Chapter has been added to the roll, Morris County Chapter, No. 7, of which Compatriot Edward Q. Keasbey is the founder. A charter was presented to the Chapter at the Traveling Banner reception on December 16. The organization of this Chapter will probably be the means of increasing our Morris County membership.

During the past year our Society has also completed the organization of the Washington Guard, whose membership includes all sons of members under twenty-one years of age. We expect much good will be obtained from this organization, which has already resulted in increasing interest in the work of our State Society.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN R. WEEKS,
Secretary N. J. Society, S. A. R.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY.

The June, 1914, meeting of the Society was held at Buffalo, as the guests of the Buffalo Chapter. The officers attending were most cordially received and entertained.

On the Fourth of July the Society had charge of the ceremonies held in the City Hall Park of New York City, and on the same day the Society, represented by Compatriot Hon. Hanson Cleveland Coxe, placed an American flag upon the tomb of Lafayette in the Picpus Cemetery, at Paris, France.

The President of our Society has attended, as a guest, the annual banquets of a number of sister Societies.

The usual Year Book of the Society was published and mailed to each compatriot.

At the commencement exercises of the Huntington Grammar School last June one gold and one silver medal were presented to pupils of the eighth grade for essays upon Revolutionary incidents.

At the October meeting of the Society a very interesting lecture was delivered by Prof. J. A. Clairmonte, of the Panama-Pacific Exhibition, illustrated with stereopticon views; also the Rev. A. Eugene Bartlett, D. D., gave an informal talk on his experiences in Paris and London at the outbreak of the war.

In June the Society entertained the visiting compatriots that took part in the "Pilgrimage" from Philadelphia to Cambridge in commemoration of Washington's journey in 1775.

An invitation was received from the "Lower Wall Street Association" to take part in the ceremonies at "Fraunce's Tavern" on October 31; also to the reception connected with the Tercentenary Celebration at the Metropolitan Museum of Art on October 29, 1914. A number of our compatriots attended both of these exercises.

The Society also took part in the parade of the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the commercial settlement of New York City on the evening of October 31.

The annual banquet of the Society was omitted on account of the war in Europe.

The February meeting of the Society was held at the Hotel Martinique, at which addresses were made by Mr. Washington I. L. Adams, the President of the New Jersey Society, S. A. R.; President Ames and Past President John H. Burroughs of our Society. This being "Ladies' Night," a dinner was served previous to the business meeting.

Our annual church service was held at the "Church of the Divine Paternity" on Sunday afternoon, February 21, 1915, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Frank O. Hall, D. D., the Pastor and our Chaplain.

Washington's Birthday was duly celebrated in Paris, France, this Society being represented by Compatriot Hon. Hanson C. Coxe. The following is taken from the Paris edition of the New York Herald of February 23, 1915:

AMERICANS PLACE WREATH UPON WASHINGTON'S STATUE.

Delegate of State Society of Sons of American Revolution Carries Out Ceremony.

Acting under instructions from the President of the Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, Mr. H. Cleveland Coxe placed a handsome wreath of flowers upon the statue of Washington in the Place d'Iéna, Paris, yesterday.

Owing to police regulations, no speeches were permitted in the open street, and the ceremony was confined to simply placing the flowers upon the statue and showing the loyalty and respect of those present for the historical event.

Among those present were Mr. William G. Sharp, American Ambassador; Mr. A. M. Thackara, American Consul General; Mr. Frazier, Second Secretary of the American Embassy; Marquis de La Fayette, Mr. Henry du Bellet, former American Consul at Rheims, and Mrs. du Bellet, Miss E. du Bellet, of the Colonial Dames of Virginia; Miss G. du Bellet, of the National Colonial Dames of Virginia; Mr. R. L. Daus, Mr. William Daus, and Miss Daus; Mr. Alfred S. Heidelbach, former president of the American Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Abram Sharpe Smith, Mr. Charles G. Loeb, Mr. Henry M. Wisler, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mme. Tessayre, Mr. J. Whitney Ganson, in French uniform; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Liebig, Mr. L. Bromhead, and Mr. Hector Feltham.

The floral emblem was very beautiful. Across the wreath was the Society ribbon in blue, yellow, and white—the colors of the uniform of the Continental Army—with the inscription: "Presented by the Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution."

Yours very truly,

WALTER B. HOPPING, Secretary.

The North Carolina Society awarded a gold medal for the best essay on Col. Waighstill Avery to W. Herman Stephenson, of Raleigh, a recent graduate of the Raleigh High School. The essay is printed in the Raleigh News and Observer of June 21, 1914. Colonel Avery was born at Groton, Conn., in 1741; graduated from Princeton in 1766; studied law in Maryland; went to North Carolina in 1769; was a member of the Provincial Congress in 1775. He was the first Attorney General of that State and resigned that office in 1779 to become Colonel of Militia. He died in 1821.

The Society has offered a gold medal to students of colleges and high schools in the State for the best essay on Fort Dobbs, erected in 1755. The essays must not exceed 3,000 words. The officers of the Society are continued for another year.

The North Dakota Society held its fourth annual business meeting and banquet at Grand Forks May 13, 1915. Plans were discussed for a greater membership and practical work among our new citizens as they come to North Dakota. Judge Charles A. Pollock presided at the banquet. Benjamin Franklin was the subject of the evening. Dean George F. Wells spoke on "Franklin the Philosopher and Scientist"; "Franklin in Literature," Prof. Vernon P. Squires; "Franklin the Diplomat," Dr. W. N. Stearns, and "Franklin the Patriot," Judge B. F. Spalding. The members were enthusiastic and already they are planning two Local Chapters for the near future. The attendance was good and the outlook for the coming year is excellent.

The Ohio Society held its annual meeting at the Virginia Hotel, Columbus, on April 19. The annual banquet in the evening was attended by about 100 members, with their wives and families. Addresses were delivered by Governor Willis, who was the guest of honor, and by Hon. Thomas S. Powell, of Columbus.

EXTRACTS FROM REPORT OF THE REGISTRAR, COL. W. L. CURRY.

The total number of members who have joined the Society since its organization, April 22, 1889, is 1,227.

As shown by the reports of the officers, the Chapters have all had regular meetings during the winter months, some in the evenings and others have had noon-day luncheons. These meetings have been well attended, with good addresses and patriotic music, and have been very interesting and beneficial.

These Chapter meetings, omitting routine business, should be encouraged, as it gives the members, all of whom are usually busy men, not only a little relaxation, but opportunity for better acquaintance in these days of rush along all lines of business and professions.

Since the publication of the last Year Book, which is now considered one of the standard reference books, many letters of inquiry have been received not only from citizens of our own State, but from a number of other States, for information regarding records of ancestors. The Year Book has been of great assistance in answering these inquiries.

Locating graves of soldiers of the Revolution is still continued and another list of names is being prepared for publication in the Year Books. Olentangy Valley Chapter, of Delaware, has been very active in this laudable work, and has taken the advance of all other Chapters by locating 49 graves in Delaware and Morrow Counties. Markers will be furnished all such graves by making application to county commissioners, as provided by law.

Some good work has been done along educational lines by officers of the State Society.

A large number of circulars have been distributed for the information of foreigners during the year, including the "Constitution of the United States" and "Naturalization," printed in English only; "Information for Immigrants," printed in fourteen different languages.

An eight-page booklet was prepared by the State Society, with a patriotic program arranged for the public schools for the centennial celebration of the writing of the Star Spangled Banner, by Francis Scott Key, September 14, 1814. Several hundred copies were distributed to the schools and were used in their exercises. The program gave a brief history of the flag, writing of the Star Spangled Banner, flag etiquette, with words of patriotic songs.

Letters have been received from a number of school superintendents, commending the program and tendering thanks to the members of the Society for their courtesy in furnishing it.

One new Chapter was organized during the year at Coshocton, and the reports of both the State and Chapter officers were very interesting, showing that great interest had been manifested along patriotic lines.

A committee was appointed to formulate a plan for taking up patriotic work with the pupils of the public schools in all parts of the State during the ensuing year by offering medals and other prizes for essays on historical subjects written by the pupils.

The Oregon Society celebrated the centennial of the writing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by a smoker and collation at the University Club in Portland on September 14. The celebration was given jointly with the Oregon Commandery of the Loyal Legion. The paper of the evening was read by Compatriot John L. Travis, city editor of the Oregon Evening Journal. His subject was "The National Flag and the National Anthem." He explained the manner in which the Stars and Stripes came to be adopted as the banner of the Republic and spoke of the glory which had been won for them on the sea by Paul Jones in the Revolution and by Isaac Hull, Oliver Hazard Perry, and others in the War of 1812. He went fully into the circumstances under which the national anthem was written by Francis Scott Key and concluded his paper with a discussion of the hold the flag had on the affections of the people. An even hundred gentlemen were present.

The Society held its annual business meeting and banquet on February 22. At the banquet 65 were present. The addresses were: "Washington as a Public Servant," James F. Ewing; "George Washington, Conservator of Anglo-Saxon Liberty, vs. George III, Foreign Despot," Dr. Henry Waldo Coe; "Replacing the Old," Hubert H. Ward.

The opening session of the Annual Congress of the National Society was held at Portland on the third Monday of May (May 17), as required by the Constitution. There were present: Lieut. Col. M. W. Wood, U. S. A., Vice-President General, who presided; Mr. Wallace McCamant, President of the Oregon Society and Trustee of the National Society, and Mr. D. W. Wakefield, Col. H. C. Cabell, Maj. V. M. C. Silva, and Rev. H. L. Bates, delegates of the Oregon Society. Mr. McCamant was duly elected Secretary pro tem. On motion by Mr. McCamant, seconded by Mr. Wakefield, it was voted to adjourn until 10 a. m., July 19, 1915, to meet in the Masonic Building at Portland.

The Pennsylvania Society held its annual business meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, Pittsburgh, in the afternoon of February 22, 1915. Reports were received from the officers and various committees and from the Philadelphia and New Castle Chapters. Major Veale, as a member of the Flag Committee, spoke on "The Respect Due to the Flag," and described his trip when as a representative of the Sons of the American Revolution he delivered an oration before 6,000 people assembled on the occasion of the transfer of the State flags to the new Capitol Building at Harrisburg. The Flag Committee was requested to study the Federal and State laws in regard to the use of the flag and to print them for distribution among the schools of Pennsylvania.

The annual banquet was held in the evening at the Union Club, attended by 200 members and guests, including several Chapter regents of the Daughters of the American Revolution and other ladies. President Thomas Stephen Brown introduced the toastmaster, Dr. Harry C. Westervelt. The speakers of the evening were Maj. Moses Veale, John Lenord Merrill, former President of the New Jersey Society, and Rev. Dr. George W. Montgomery. President Brown appealed for a broader celebration of Washington's Birthday throughout the nation. Dr. Montgomery spoke on "Our Alien Citizenship."

The annual report of the Society is printed in a pamphlet of 24 pages, containing the proceedings of the annual meeting, with reports of officers and committees and of the Local Chapters. Addresses delivered before the Society during the last four years on Pennsylvania Signers of the Declaration of Independence have been published in three pamphlets.

The Society appropriated a liberal sum toward the celebration of the Washington Journey Pilgrimage in June, 1914. The Pilgrims were the guests of the Philadelphia Chapter on Monday, June 22, on an automobile trip to Germantown and Valley Forge and at a banquet at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in the evening. On the morning of June 23 the pilgrimage began its journey to Cambridge, being met at the New Jersey boundary by the committee from that State.

The Rhode Island Society held its annual business meeting at noon on February 22, in Manning Hall, Brown University, Providence. Prof. Wilfred H. Munro made an appeal for greater recognition of Gen. Nathanael Greene, and former Governor Lippitt reported on progress made toward obtaining a memorial. A contribution of $100 was made to the General Greene Memorial Association and a like amount to the General Varnum Memorial Fund. Reports of officers showed the Society to be increasing in membership and in good financial condition.

At the conclusion of the business meeting the members of the Society were escorted by the Varnum Continentals of East Greenwich to the Old Marine Armory, where the annual dinner was in order. President Dexter served as toastmaster. Addresses were made by Lieutenant Governor San Souci, Mayor Gainer, William Chace Greene, and Marshall Putnam Thompson, of Brookline, Mass. A poem was read by Mr. Farnsworth. Compatriot Thompson took for his subject "The Fifth Musketeer." He reviewed in detail the life of La Fayette and told of his rôle in the American Revolution.

At patriotic exercises to which the Society was invited in Sayles Hall, Brown University, in the morning of February 22, Compatriot David Jayne Hill, of the District of Columbia Society, former Ambassador to Germany and other countries, delivered an address in which he reviewed the events leading up to the Revolutionary War, the preparation of the first written Constitution, and the application of the Constitution in such a way that the happiness and contentment of the individual more than the affairs of the State were emphasized.

The Society participated in meetings throughout the State on May 4 in observance of the 139th Anniversary of Independence Day of Rhode Island. At a meeting of the Gaspee Chapter of the D. A. R., in Providence, Compatriot ex-Senator Addison P. Munroe delivered an address in which he recounted the events of May 4, 1776, when the General Assembly of Rhode Island passed an act declaring its independence of Great Britain.

On Memorial Day the usual exercises were held at Hopkins Park, under the auspices of the Rhode Island Society, the audience being largely of Italian pupils of the public schools.

The Tennessee Society has increased in membership and has aroused much interest in the work of the organization.

On June 15 Vice-President General William K. Boardman, Secretary of the Society, presented a flag for the high-school playground in Nashville with appropriate ceremonies, including an address by President Leland Hume. The Society has enrolled as a member a son of Joseph Greer, Kings Mountain Messenger. On the occasion of the dedication, in May, of a tablet marking the grave of Joseph Greer at Petersburg, Compatriot Boardman delivered an address on the Battle of Kings Mountain. Messenger Greer, after an arduous journey, brought the news of the victory to the Continental Congress at Philadelphia.

On the evening of March 30 the Society gave a banquet at the Commercial Club in Nashville in honor of President General Thruston. President Leland Hume presided and introduced Mr. Thruston, who spoke of the work of the Sons of the American Revolution. He urged closer co-operation between the now existing eight societies of descendants of the American Revolution. One of the chief objects of the Society is to produce a complete history of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Thruston gave a very interesting account of the famous instrument. He told of the efforts of the organization to impress upon our foreign-born population the oath of allegiance to the United States. He said that one million men were coming to this country from foreign shores each year until the war started. Of this million about one-half, on the average, remained, the others returning. Out of the 500,000 becoming naturalized, it was the duty of the S. A. R. to encourage them to hold in high respect their allegiance to our nation. The National Society is distributing 50,000 booklets annually to night schools throughout the United States, designed to encourage patriotism and instil in the hearts of the foreigners a love for our nation, for which our forefathers fought so valiantly. A most interesting description of the pilgrimage of the National Society's committee over the route General Washington traversed from Philadelphia to Cambridge when he went to assume command of the army was related. Vice-President General W. K. Boardman then spoke of the probable entertaining of the National Congress in the city in 1916. Mr. Thruston outlined plans for the Tennessee Society.

COMPATRIOTS: The Utah Society, at its annual business meeting, at Salt Lake City, on December 26, 1914, elected officers for the year 1915.

The twenty-first annual banquet was given at the Hotel Utah, Salt Lake City, January 30, 1915, with seventy members and guests present, Hon. C. W. Fairbanks, former Vice-President of the United States, and Gov. William Spry, of Utah, being among the guests of honor. Compatriot Hon. Samuel C. Park, mayor of Salt Lake City, acted as toastmaster. This banquet is regarded as one of the most brilliant and most successful banquets ever held in the State of Utah.

Through the year the Society has lost by death its former Chaplain, Right Rev. Franklin Spencer Spalding, D. D., Episcopal Bishop of Utah. Bishop Spalding was a most gifted man, of unusual attainments, a noted orator, and one of the very great bishops in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and his death was most lamentable and a severe loss not only to the Utah Society, but to the entire organization of the Sons of the American Revolution.

A magnificent bronze memorial tablet, manufactured by the Gorham Company, is being erected in the new Utah State Capitol by this Society as a tribute to the heroes of the American Revolution.

At the annual banquet ceremonial badges were presented by the Society to National Trustee and former President Hon. Daniel Samuel Spencer and to State Registrar William Dalton Neal.

Medals for patriotic oratory were presented through the year, in contest, at the Utah Agricultural College and at the Salt Lake High School. These presentations are annual events.

The Society is in a flourishing condition, substantial financially, and within the last few years has increased in membership upward of 200 per cent.

Through the patriotic action of Compatriots Mayor Samuel C. Park and Commissioner, former Governor, Heber M. Wells, the Liberty Bell, en route to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco, Cal., has been ordered to be stopped in Salt Lake City on Sunday, July 11, in order that it may be seen by the thousands of school children and citizens of Salt Lake City. The Society publicly acknowledged the action of these two distinguished compatriots for their laudable efforts in this matter.

President.

During the past year the Vermont Society dedicated two historic memorials—one at the village of Winooski, just across the Winooski River from Burlington, near the site of the blockhouse known as Fort Frederick, erected by Remember Baker and Ira Allen, two of the leaders of the Green Mountain Boys; the other at Randolph, on the site of a camp occupied at the time of the burning of Royalton during the latter part of the Revolutionary War. It is the purpose of the Society to continue the policy of marking historic sites. The Winooski tablet was dedicated on July 30. The ceremonies included a parade, participated in by United States cavalry from Fort Ethan Allen, the First Regiment, Vermont National Guard, numerous civic organizations, and a number of historical floats. The occasion was a gala day in the town, factories being closed, and almost the entire population assembled on the town green to listen to the addresses. President Frederick S. Pease, of the Vermont Society, made a brief presentation speech and the tablet was accepted by the town authorities. Secretary Walter H. Crockett delivered an address, reviewing the early history of the region and the struggles of the first settlers. The life history of Ira Allen, younger brother of Ethan Allen, was related in detail. President General Thruston delivered the closing address, in which he spoke of the inspiring character of Vermont scenery. He explained the construction of the old blockhouse, how it was roughly built of hewn logs and was usually about 16 by 20 feet in size. He said that the blockhouse was the arsenal and the fort of the community, and went on to tell of the type of fortified settlement common in the early times of his own State of Kentucky.

In closing his address Mr. Thruston related the historical evolution of the American emblem out of the British flag into the flag we know. He told, finally, how, after the admission of Kentucky and Vermont, at the suggestion of a Vermonter in the National Legislature, two stars and two stripes were added to the original thirteen, in recognition of these States, making a flag with fifteen stars and fifteen stripes, which remained the nation's flag for twenty-three years, until 1818, when it was changed to thirteen stripes and a star for each State. "It was a flag of fifteen stars and fifteen stripes flying over Fort McHenry during its bombardment in 1814 that inspired Francis Scott Key to write the 'Star Spangled Banner.'" A reproduction of the original Fort McHenry flag was then presented by Mr. Thruston to the Vermont Society as a gift from the Kentucky Society. The flag was accepted on behalf of the Vermont Society by the Hon. Robert Roberts.

On the evening of July 30 President General Thruston and Secretary General Clark, with other guests, were entertained by the Society at a banquet at the Van Ness House, Burlington. Following the dinner Mr. Thruston talked of the work of the National Society in various activities of national character and importance distinct from the patriotic work of State Societies, and also gave an account of the pilgrimage over the route of Washington's journey to Cambridge in 1775.

At the annual business meeting, held at Montpelier on February 17, 1915, resolutions were adopted to secure the preservation of the Old Constitution House at Windsor as a historic relic and permanent memorial of the Convention of Delegates from the towns of the New Hampshire Grants that met at Windsor, July 2 to 8, 1777, and adopted the first Constitution of the free and independent State of Vermont.

At 8 o'clock in the evening a public meeting was held in the hall of the House of Representatives, in the State Capitol, which had been granted by vote of the General Assembly. The retiring President, Frederick S. Pease, presided. Gov. Charles W. Gates, other State officials, and a large audience were present. In his opening remarks President Pease told of the gifts to the Society from President General Thruston. He then introduced ex-Gov. Curtis Guild, of Boston, Mass., former Ambassador of the United States to Russia, who delivered an address on "Our Outworn Consular and Diplomatic System." He urged the need of a "United States Diplomatic Academy," in line with the United States Military Academy and the United States Naval Academy. "We boast of being the best educated country in the world, yet we refuse expert training to the very body of men who represent us most constantly and conspicuously before the governments and peoples of the world," said Compatriot Guild. This was one of the last public appearances of Governor Guild, who died on April 6.

The Virginia Society held its annual meeting on the evening of February 22 at the Westmoreland Club, Richmond. President Clarke presided at the meeting, and short addresses were made by City Attorney Henry R. Pollard, Capt. John Lamb, and Dr. George Ross. The topic was "The American Revolution and the Men of that Time," including particularly Alexander Hamilton and Robert Morris.

Mr. Pollard presented short sketches of the two men, showing their power throughout the conflict which gave to the Colonists their liberty, and declared that next to Washington himself these two men were leading forces in the establishment of freedom and a country which has arisen to the leadership of the civilized world.

Captain Lamb referred to the War of 1812 briefly, after following Mr. Pollard in words of recognition of the great power wielded by Hamilton. He took occasion to refer to the part the Virginia Peninsula played in the Revolution, the War of 1812, and the Civil War, and showed the people of that section had played their part well. "The atrocities practiced in the Revolution and the War of 1812," said Captain Lamb, "were as bad as those we hear of now in the European war."

Dr. Ross said this is "an occasion of expression of patriotic devotion and thoughts of the multitudinous hosts who have performed their duties and gone before." He paid his respects in beautiful language to those who took the lead in making the country what it is today.

The Washington State Society has been very successful in enrolling new members during the past two years, and particularly since April 1, 1914. The Society has actively co-operated with the Young Men's Christian Association at Seattle in a teaching course to prepare the alien for naturalization and better citizenship. President Samuel Judd Holmes, M. D., of the Society, once a week attended the class meeting, which now numbers about a hundred members. The course includes ten evenings of study and lectures. The program for each session is so arranged as to give the first half of the evening to some speaker who can give in an authoritative way the essential facts about the city, county, State, or National government which an alien must know in order to successfully pass the hearing before the courts. The latter half of the evening is spent in small classes, where a teacher conducts a quiz and answers questions.

High-school oratorical contests were held at Spokane, North Yakima, Tacoma, and Seattle, under auspices of the Local Chapters in these cities, at which cash prizes were awarded. - First, $20; second, $10; third, $5.

The annual business meeting was held in the Chamber of Commerce assembly rooms, Seattle, at 1 p. m., on February 22.

The annual banquet was held at 7 p. m., at the Hotel Washington Annex. The toastmaster, Walter S. Fulton, was introduced by the retiring President, Dr. Samuel Judd Holmes. Toasts were responded to as follows: "George Washington," by Col. William E. McClure; "The Century of Peace," by Prof. Edward S. Meany; "The Relation of the Sons of the American Revolution to Our National Defense," by Lemuel L. Bolles; "The Marking of the Old Oregon Trail," by Mrs. Overton G. Ellis; "Virginia: George Washington's Native State," by Carter Helm Jones, D. D.

On the evening of February 19, at the Broadway High School, Seattle, there was a Patriotic Oratorical Contest under the auspices of the Washington State Society. The subjects of the orations were: "The Economic Causes of the American Revolution"; "The Tory, His Place in History"; "Thomas Jefferson, the Advocate of the People's Rights"; "The Common Soldier of the Revolution"; "Oratory as a Revolutionary Force"; "The American Revolution: England's Lesson in Colonial Government."

The Wisconsin Society celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its organization by a banquet at the Hotel Pfister, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on the evening of Thursday, February 25, 1915, when an address was delivered by Hon. James Edgar Brown, of the Illinois Society, on "The Evolution of the American Flag," illustrated by stereopticon views.

The officers of kindred patriotic societies of the city, including the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Mayflower Society, the Colonial Dames, the Society of Colonial Wars, and U. S. Daughters of 1812, were invited guests.

There was an informal supper and smoker at a meeting of the Society on Saturday, January 16, at the University Club, Milwaukee. The meeting was attended by President Albert M. Henry, of the Michigan Society, a member of the National Executive Committee, and by Mr. Adkins, of the Illinois Society. Resolutions were adopted arranging for a series of lectures to foreigners who contemplate applying for citizenship, and also for giving prizes to school children for patriotic essays.

The annual business meeting and banquet were held at the Hotel Pfister on May 28, when officers were elected and patriotic addresses were delivered by President General R. C. Ballard Thruston, Gen. Charles King, Mr. George E. Fraser, of Chicago, and the President-elect, Rev. Frederick S. Penfold, of Racine. Mr. Thruston earnestly denounced the principles of the School Peace League, "which seem to be to ridicule war and the militia and to discourage enlistment through teachings in the public schools." About 75 members were in attendance. The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas we, the Wisconsin Society, Sons of the American Revolution, in annual meeting assembled, upon the sixty-ninth anniversary of the admission of the State of Wisconsin to the Union, still believing in the principles of human rights, freedom, and justice, which brought this Union and our State into being and have preserved them untarnished for 126 years, now in the face of a crisis which may easily become the most momentous in American history, desiring publicly to renew our allegiance to these national principles and announce our continued and unfaltering faith in free men and free government, in God and our native land: therefore be it

Resolved, That we indorse and commend the President of the United States, the official representative and defender of our national honor, for his temperate, uncompromising, and just note of May 14 inst., addressed to the government of the German Empire; and be it further

Resolved, That we pledge him our fullest support, and we call upon every patriotic American to join with us in publicly upholding his efforts for the preservation of the dignity, honor, and peace of this nation, that it may continue to be the embodiment of the highest ideals of a free, enlightened, and Christian people.

The Wyoming Society, realizing that increased membership was necessary to stimulate and create added interest in the Society, amended its constitution so as to allow the formation of Local Chapters, believing this to be one of the means to that end. The membership dues have also been changed, so as to make those for non-resident less than those for resident members.

The movement started last year for creating an interest in the observance of Flag Day was also followed up. Articles bearing on the subject were written and sent to newspapers throughout the State, requesting the co-operation of town and city officials in a proper observance of the day. As a result there was a more general display of the national emblem than heretofore.

At the annual meeting, held February 22, 1915, the old officers were re-elected for the ensuing year.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, the next order of business is old and unfinished business, and it is nearly 4 o'clock. It will take a few minutes for Mr. Woodworth to make his adjustments so that he can begin his address on the "Washington Pilgrimage Journey" at 4 o'clock, and if there is no objection, therefore, we will now take a short recess until he is ready.

PROPOSAL TO MARK GIANT TREE.

Hon. HARVEY FOOTE REMINGTON, of Rochester: Mr. President General, I have just a small matter I would like to present, if agreeable.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Very well.

Judge REMINGTON: A few days ago I was in the Yosemite National Park, and, as we all know, many fine trees in the Mariposa Grove are designated in honor of the States of the Union and many of them in honor of prominent dignitaries of the country. I noticed that one tree was marked in honor of the Society of the Colonial Dames. But there is no tree there designated in honor of the Sons of the American Revolution, and therefore I beg leave to submit the following resolution bearing upon this subject and ask the Secretary to read it and let it take its course.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Submitted by Compatriot Judge Remington, of Rochester, N. Y.:

Whereas the Superintendent of the Yosemite National Park is permitted, upon proper petition, to designate certain of the trees in the Mariposa Grove in honor of the several States of the Union and certain patriotic societies: now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the President General and Secretary General of this organization be, and they hereby are, requested to petition the Superintendent of the Yosemite National Park, the Hon. George E. Bell, for permission to have one of the large trees in the Mariposa Grove designated in honor of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

This will go to the Committee on Resolutions.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: That will be referred to the Committee on Resolutions. Is there a tree that can be so marked, Judge Remington?

Judge REMINGTON: There is, upon this petition being made. It has to take this form. The petition has to be signed by the President General and Secretary General or the proper executive officers of the Congress.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: My recollection was that practically all of those trees were marked.

Judge REMINGTON: No; there are some very fine ones there.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I have no doubt but what the Committee on Resolutions will bring it back very quickly.

Judge REMINGTON: I might say that the Daughters of the American Revolution have one designated for them now; the sign is not on it yet; and it would be fitting if we should follow close in their wake.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: With the consent of the Congress, we will submit that to the Committee on Resolutions (see p. 194).

MESSAGE FROM COMPATRIOT ROOSEVELT.

Mr. H. W. COE, of Portland: Mr. President General, I have a message to this meeting of Sons of the American Revolution from a compatriot of great note in this country, to whom I carried a message this morning, along with some other business, from your President General, asking him to be here, if possible, at this meeting today. It is no less a person than our Compatriot Theodore Roosevelt. I want to say to you that Colonel Roosevelt expressed himself as highly pleased to receive this invitation to be present with you today. He spoke in the highest terms of this organization. He said that he was on his way to San Francisco and had a speech for tomorrow and could not stop off, although he had been asked to make a stop here in Portland over another day on other invitations. He said, however, that he felt that there was a great work before you and he told me to deliver this message to you; and he said, among other things, that there was reason for this organization because it represented something—the building of this great nation—and also that there would be no Sons of the American Revolution if the sentiment of the men in those early days were peace first, peace at any price; nor if in 1776 the women had gone about singing a song, "I did not raise my boy to be a soldier." (Laughter and applause.)

He sends you, the presiding officer, and you, our visitors, his kindly greetings and well wishes.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I know we appreciate, compatriots, the message from Colonel Roosevelt. He is a great man and there is no question of his loyalty, his patriotism, and his courage.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, I move that we return to Colonel Roosevelt an expression of appreciation of his greeting.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, gentlemen, we will recess, in order that we may witness the lantern slides. I am sorry, but you will have to turn your seats around.

WASHINGTON JOURNEY PILGRIMAGE.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriots, I want to introduce to you Compatriot Punderson, of Springfield, Mass., who was the Chief Marshal of the Washington Pilgrimage Journey, and he will start in by telling you something in regard to it. (Applause.)

Mr. HENRY F. PUNDERSON, of Springfield: Mr. President General, Compatriots, Ladies and Gentlemen, I would like to say before I go into detail at all that I am satisfied there would have been no Washington Pilgrimage had it not been for our President General, who devoted his wisdom, his time, and his wealth to the project for more than a year. I hope that he feels repaid in a knowledge of the estimation in which he is held through the five States through which we journeyed. I think this regard for him is illustrated well by a story which was told me yesterday on the boat trip we had in Spokane. It seems that in going through a village in Connecticut there was a little boy appeared dressed in Colonial uniform, and Mr. Thruston, with his love of the picturesque, unlimbered his camera and took a picture of the little boy. After the plate was finished he sent the boy a print, and he received a letter to this effect: "My Dear Mr. Thruston: I thank you very much for the beautiful picture. I think that when General Washington went through this part of the country he was not loved by the people as much as you are today." (Applause.) That little boy, I think, expressed the feeling of the entire population over a district 800 miles long.

The purpose of the trip, as you probably know, and the principal objects of the celebration were to inspire the community at large with a more fervent reverence for the founders of our nation, to encourage historical research in relation to the American Revolution, and arouse greater interest in the preservation of our national traditions, and to create a more active spirit of patriotism throughout the regions traversed. I think those purposes were well accomplished. To my mind, there was another purpose. General Washington went over the route on horseback, over the poor roads of the day and through the fords, in about eleven days, or an average of about forty miles a day. We traveled the same distance, or the same distance from point to point each day, and arrived on anniversary dates at each of his night stopping places. In that respect we were very much like the General, but I think, in my case, when I arrived in Cambridge, having traversed the distance in a splendid car, the property of the President General, although our fine New England roads and bridges were used, I was so tired if it had been up to me to fight I would certainly have surrendered at once. I think the trip showed the physical man of the time in that way very plainly.

There has been so much printed about the fixed program of the trip, the celebrations that we had in the various places, the addresses by the various college presidents, governors of the States, mayors of the cities, and so on, that I think the most interesting things developed was the minor details that were so unexpected to us as we traveled through the country—the small town celebrations, where the entire population would turn out, where the factories would be shut down, and all the whistles blowing and all the church bells and other bells ringing, the towns completely decorated with flags on all of the buildings and houses many times, and the large numbers of children in Colonial costume, many times reproducing the historical paintings on the lawns in front of the houses.

When we got down to New Haven there was an incident which was very pretty. The tableau erected on the Hotel Taft was unveiled by the grandson of Noah Webster. Noah Webster, at the time Washington went through there, was a boy at Yale, and he was a drummer boy, in a company viewed there by General Washington. At Wallingford I think every one of the inhabitants saw the review and the applause was most enthusiastic. We came next to Berlin, where there is a tavern—the Old Fuller Tavern—and in the ball-room there was an old Masonic emblem, back of the master's chair. It had been covered up by paper for many years, and in preparing the room for renovation they discovered that ancient piece of painting, and it is there today.

There were many interesting details like that. In a piece of road running from Berlin over to the Middleton turnpike through Rocky Hill we came to a small boy dressed in Indian costume on a horse, and as soon as we appeared over the hill he began riding away from us, and it was to announce our coming to a house that was completely decorated, and there were a great many tableaux staged on the lawn; and as we approached we found the road for several hundred yards completely covered with flowers, and at the end of the strewn path there were a number of girls holding a rope of roses. It was such unexpected portions of the trip that most interested me. They caused us to be somewhat late at our various daily destinations.

I am sure you are all waiting to see the pictures that Mr. Woodworth has and I will not ramble on any longer. I will let him turn on his illustrated supplement.

I thank you. (Applause.)

(Mr. Woodworth showed and described a large number of lantern slides illustrating various scenes and events on the journey, and the thanks of those present were extended to him for his interesting talk. Detailed accounts of the Pilgrimage were printed in the Official Bulletin for October, 1914.)

Session of July 20, 1915, 10 a. m.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The Congress will please come to order. I will ask everybody to stand while the Rev. Dr. Boyd asks the invocation.

Dr. BOYD: Almighty God, Thou holy one of Israel, we humble ourselves before Thee this morning, and with grateful hearts we remember Thy great movements in the history of this land. We are here to remember the spirit and the achievement of our fathers and to catch the spirit of imitation, whereby we may make our lives true to that which they represented and loved; and we pray that Thy blessing may rest upon Thy servants this morning, and may their deliberations be in such wisdom that they shall be able to create a universal interest in those things which make for genuine patriotism; and we pray that the hearts of this great people may turn with new devotion toward those things for which we have always stood as a nation, and confidently and resolutely turn to the future, that we may maintain whatever has been committed unto us and develop it to Thy name's honor and glory; and we ask these, in dependence upon Thy grace, in Christ Jesus our Lord, Amen.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I am asked to request all the members of the Washington State Society to come to the rear of the platform.

Advance the colors (at the same time commanding the Congress's attention to the colors by three raps of the gavel).

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Salute the colors.

(The colors were saluted by the audience standing.)

Colonel LAUMAN: Shall they be placed, sir?

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Place the colors.

PRESENTATION OF TRAVELING BANNER.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, we will have the delivery of the Traveling Banner by the State of New Jersey to the State of Washington, it being each year placed in charge of that one of our Societies of over one hundred members which during the previous year has shown the greatest percentage of increase of membership. Mr. Weeks, on the part of New Jersey, will make the delivery to Mr. Virtue, on the part of the State of Washington.

(At this point there was a pause in the proceedings until the photograph was taken.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The ceremony will now proceed.

Mr. JOHN R. WEEKS: In the days of old when king or feudal lord sought to summon his followers to service he sent his banner, with a herald before him, in order that his followers might be called together for the work before them. Some years ago the Colorado Society, catching this idea, donated this banner to that Society which should each year secure the greatest percentage of gain based on their membership, in order that an encouragement might be given to each Society to do its best for our common cause. Two years ago New Jersey, inspired by seeing the banner given to another Society, determined that it would do its best to deserve the banner last year. We did work, and the result was something like 150 gain. We received the banner at your hands a year ago in recognition of that service. We received it reverently for what it represents. We treated it reverently. It went before us at every Chapter meeting, and every time that it was presented it meant, and the idea was conveyed to our members that it meant, a call to service. It did operate that way in New Jersey last year. We did respond again to the call, and we did have this last year 155 gain instead of 150, showing that we were not unworthy recipients of this honor. I only regret, Mr. President General, that some good member of this organization does not provide still another banner that may be given to those larger Societies that make the greatest gain, that his same inspiration for service may continue. It is with regret that New Jersey surrenders the custody of this banner. "It is only a bundle of colors" (laughter), but it is a bundle of colors that we reverence for what it represents; for it represents the ideals of the Congress of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the ideals that I need not speak of, because you are so familiar with them; and it has meant to us in New Jersey what the ark of the covenant meant to the ancient Hebrews. I can only ask, Mr. President of the Washington State Society, in surrendering this banner to your care, that you may treat it in the same way, with the same reverent handling of it, the same display of it, inspiring your men to service, and that at the end of another year you may show that you have been worthy recipients of this great honor. Permit me, in behalf of the New Jersey Society, to tender you the custody of this sacred emblem (placing the same into the custody of Mr. Virtue). (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriots, Mr. Virtue, President of the Washington Society.

Mr. GEORGE A. VIRTUE, of Seattle: Mr. President General, Mr. Secretary of the New Jersey Society, Compatriots, I wish that I had the language to even approximately express my gratitude at receiving this banner for our State Society. In accepting this prize I wish to give due credit to my predecessor in office, Dr. Samuel Judd Holmes, and his faithful associates. What they have done for our Society can be done by other Societies by choosing well your officers. They have lifted this banner on the Atlantic, carrying it over the heads of many States, and planted it on the Pacific.

It gives me great pleasure to take home to our people in the State of Washington this beautiful banner. We will take great pride in exhibiting it on every occasion possible, to stimulate our activities. Heretofore, as I have thought of our relations to this great organization and its large membership of the East, it has brought to my vision a kite with a long tail and our position on the extreme end of that tail. When I was a boy I used to make kites, as no doubt many of you did in your youth. You will remember how we whittled out two pine sticks, one a little longer than the other, and we tied them together in the shape of a cross, and we put a notch in each end of the sticks and strung a string around the frame, making it taut, and pasted paper over the whole thing and tied on a long string for a tail, then hitched onto the string scraps of paper. Up to today we have felt that we were but a hitch on the tail of the National Society's kite, but now we feel that we are a part of the string that binds the kite of this great National organization of the Sons of the American Revolution together, the East with the West; and if you don't watch out next time we may get a rib, and remember we keep what we get. (Applause.) You may compare us to that old miser, of whom it was said, when he dropped a dollar into the bag, the eagle on the dollar screamed out, "Farewell, farewell!" (Laughter.)

We need this banner on the Pacific coast to stimulate us to greater work, for we have great problems confronting us. Up to now we have no slums to wrestle with; our cities are cities of homes; but since the completion of the Panama Canal, and with the possible early closing of the European war, we look forward to a large influx of immigrants. The problem is with us; the work begins; and this banner, compatriots, will be ever a reminder. Alongside this banner on every occasion will go Old Glory, which promises to every man, whoever he is and no matter what land he may come from, a square deal. This Republic stands today at the head of all nations for fair dealing and love of humanity. We should be more careful to whom we grant citizenship. As an illustration, we see many returning to fight for their native country after having sworn their allegiance to the Stars and Stripes. There are others in our midst too cowardly to go to the firing line, but stirring up strife, embarrassing our government. One of our local papers recently said:

The average man of plain, ordinary American origin is getting mighty tired of the internal and infernal activities of the hyphenated agitators. If any of these happen to be not naturalized, then they are at liberty to return to the "old country" with the same freedom with which they came. If they ARE naturalized, then the oath they took made them Americans—that alone.

A short time ago, when the talk of war with Mexico was rampant, some of the best citizens of New Mexico, however, of pure Mexican descent, repudiated the appellation "Spanish-Americans," current in that State, stating that when they became Americans they ceased to be Mexicans.

That was patriotism and horse sense combined and should be an example to the disturbing element, which is making the pathway of absolute neutrality more difficult each day for Uncle Sam to tread.

Thousands come to these shores with honest purposes and noble aims. They come to identify themselves thoroughly with this land and its institutions. They make industrious and upright citizens. They turn many a wilderness into a fertile field and make the desert blossom as the rose. We do not ask them when they come here to blot out the memories of their fatherland or cut the cords of affection, as was so appropriately put by our President General yesterday. We do ask them, however, to begin a new political career. We ask them to study the history of the land of their adoption. We ask them to acquaint themselves with the doctrines and the leaders who have shaped that history. Thus, and thus only, will they find the true meaning of American citizenship. If we choose wisely and start them right, in one short generation they will be simply Americans, with the hyphenated French, German, Irish, or Scandinavian gone forever, and the Stars and Stripes will be the only flag.

President General Thruston and compatriots of the East, we have told you of our problems and we need this banner in our work. We are going to try and keep it, and so we would give you a cordial invitation to come forward and bid it an affectionate farewell and kiss it good-bye, for you may never have it again. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: There is a time in the history of all people when the youth has grown to a point that he becomes the leader and active man who supplants the parents. It looks to me very much as if that were about the situation with reference to this old kite, and I want to assure you that the contest between the East and the West as to which shall be the string by which the kite is flown shall be a friendly one, and I hope that we will all pull together for the good of the whole cause. (Applause.)

REPORT OF CREDENTIALS COMMITTEE.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The Credentials Committee has published this little list of the delegates, the ladies accompanying you, and other guests, which necessarily has some few errors. The Committee on Registration is very anxious that all of those who have not registered may do so, and that all of those who know of any error on this published list, which has already been circulated, will kindly report such error to the Secretary's desk, that it may be corrected on final list.

Mr. WILLIAM J. CLARKE: As chairman of the Registration Committee, I desire to say that if you will kindly report any changes or errors discovered, we want to issue another list, and that will be properly certified by the committee, and the sooner we get that, the sooner we will be able to get our list out. If you will report it in writing to the committee, then there will be no chance for error.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: You have heard the request of the committee. I would thank you to give it attention as soon as you can.

EVOLUTION OF THE FLAG.

MR. WOODWORTH: Mr. President General, I think the Congress would enjoy having you give the little bit of history which you recently ascertained in reference to the history of our flag. I make the request that you give the Congress the benefit of your information.

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: I recognize the request that Compatriot Woodworth has made. This is a bit of the result of some investigations which I have personally carried on in regard to our flag. I have taken a great deal of time and devoted a great deal of study to that subject, and omitted it from my annual address because I thought the address was too long; but, with your permission, I will give it to you at this time.

(The data given by President General Thruston was enlarged upon in his address at the patriotic meeting at the Exposition in San Francisco on July 24 and is printed in full in the present volume.

HON. HARVEY FOOTE REMINGTON: Mr. President General, I know we have all been delighted with what we have heard in reference to this and we regret you have not read all of this paper with reference to the evolution of the flag. It seems to me that this should be preserved. It is very fitting that it should be preserved and should find a place in the libraries of our country. I would therefore move, Mr. President General, that the Secretary General procure the printing of a suitable number of copies of this paper of yours, and that it also be published in our annual publication.

(Said motion was duly seconded.)

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is moved and seconded that these remarks of your President General be published in pamphlet form, a suitable number of them, and that they also be included in the National Year Book. Are there any remarks?

A MEMBER: Mr. President General, does that also include the illustrations? They would be about as valuable.

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: Well, that is a part of the publication, I suppose. Are there any further remarks? If not, all those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it and it will be so ordered.

There is one other announcement. Yesterday I spoke of certain leaflets that were issued by our organization. The first one, "Information for Immigrants"; the second one, "How to Become Citizens: What is Required, Rights and Duties," and the third is the Constitution of the United States of America. Our Secretary General has brought a few of these on with him, and they are attached together so that they are in little groups of three, one of each, and if any of our members would like to have copies of these little leaflets, they can either obtain them here or, if the supply is not sufficient, if they will leave their names and addresses with the Secretary General, he will see that copies are sent to them. These are used in the night schools all over the country.

GIFT OF SYRACUSE BANNER.

Mr. WOODWORTH: Mr. President General, if I may rise to the privilege of the floor for a moment, I would like to state, in response to the suggestion of New Jersey, that the Syracuse Chapter will offer a banner for competition, irrespective of percentages, for the greatest gain in membership by any State. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: That is for enrolling the largest number of members?

Mr. WOODWORTH: Enrolling the largest number of members, irrespective of percentages.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I don't think there is any question, from the applause, that our thanks are unanimously extended to the Syracuse Chapter of the Empire State Society for their generous offer; although, if any one desires to make a motion, I will put the motion as a rising vote.

Mr. WEEKS: Mr. President General, I really think I am entitled to make that motion and it gives me great pleasure to move that a rising vote of thanks be extended to the Syracuse Chapter for their great generosity in making this offer.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Well, I will let those who rise be the seconds. (Everybody stood up.) It is unanimously carried.

PRESENTATION OF REVOLUTIONARY RELICS.

Mr. THAXTER: Mr. President General and Gentlemen, I have the pleasure of presenting Mr. Daniel Marion Conway, who is the grandson of a Revolutionary soldier, and he has a Revolutionary relic which he wishes to present to this Congress.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, I introduce to you Mr. Conway.

Mr. DANIEL MARION CONWAY: I cannot make any speech on this occasion, but just give a word or two of history. This gun I hold in my hand, which you will receive, has some history. It has a history and its name is Bull Douglas. This fuse was carried by my grandfather, Samuel Conway, in the Revolutionary War. After that war was ended he moved from Virginia to Kentucky, and later on he removed from Kentucky to old Missouri, at a very early date, when the Indians were hostile. On one occasion there they made an attack on one Mr. Phelps, who was hewing a log in the woods in the neighborhood to build a log-house, and he was attacked by the Indians, and the neighbors rallied to his assistance and the Indians skedaddled. (Laughter.) And this just shows the early history of Missouri, when my father moved there. In the year 1830 my grandfather died, fourteen years before my birth. At his death the gun fell into the hands of my uncle, Simeon Conway, who was his eldest son. At his death it fell into the hands of my father, Joseph Conway, and he being a machinist and an adept at almost all trades, a gunsmith as well as others, he changed it from a flint lock and hole stock to the present condition of it. It had the flint lock and hole stock while in my Uncle Simeon's possession, and when my Uncle Simeon died it fell into my father's hands, and when my father died it fell into the hands of my brother, and when my brother died it fell into my hands, and the Bull Douglas has been in my hands ever since to the present time. I have been thinking over the matter and when I heard that this convention would meet here I decided it would be better for me to give it to this convention and let them take it rather than for it to go into the hands of some of the junks in Portland; so I present the Bull Douglas to you. (Loud applause.) And I wish to say that the Bull Douglas was never in better condition than now for immediate use. It can be used in a minute. It throws a half-ounce ball. It is a rifle with an increase twist. I have some of the balls here that go with it, and I have got the mold and the flask that holds just precisely a load for it, and it is all ready for action in a few minutes. (Laughter.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The bullet mold goes with it, too?

Mr. CONWAY: The bullet mold and all. The bullet mold was used by my grandfather.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Comrade, I want to thank you most heartily for this gift. It is by such acts as these that we preserve the unwritten history of what our forefathers did in order that we might live to be a free and independent people.

Mr. CONWAY: Well, I hope and pray that the flag will never lose its power; that it will always stay above every other flag.

(Mr. Conway was here escorted through the room amidst loud applause.)

Mr. WALLACE McCAMANT: Mr. President General, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Conway may be received as an honorary member of the Oregon Society, waiving the usual formalities.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Well, we want the record.

Mr. McCAMANT: Well, if you prefer, Mr. Secretary General, I will get the record. I will withdraw the motion.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: The honorary part is all right, but we want the record.

Mr. McCAMANT: We will get it in shape.

Maj. V. M. C. SILVA: I have an announcement to make, if you please.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Before making the announcement I wish to look after the disposal of these Revolutionary relics. They are now, gentlemen, in my hands as President General. I want to ask you what disposition should be made of them. I would suggest that they be placed in the custody of our Oregon Society, in order that they may be by them kept on display as an inspiration to the youths and the people of this great Pacific coast.

Mr. JENKS: Mr. President General, I so move.

Mr. MUNSELL: I second that motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is moved and seconded that the suggestions as made by me be adopted. Are there any other remarks? (The motion was carried.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Mr. McCamant, it gives me great pleasure to turn these over to you as the custodian of them on behalf of our National Society, you to put them in such place as you may deem best.

Maj. V. M. C. SILVA: Mr. President General, the committee in charge of the excursion for this afternoon around the city wish to announce that the automobiles will be at the Portland Hotel at half past one, in order that we may start promptly at 2 o'clock and get through the trip so as to arrive at Waverly Golf Links at 4 o'clock, thus enabling the visitors to return to the hotel in time to prepare for the banquet tonight.

Mr. H. C. CABELL: Mr. President General, I would like to announce that tomorrow morning we will take a trip up the Columbia River, and it is very important that all of our guests, with their families and friends, assemble promptly by 9 o'clock at the Yamhill Street entrance to the Portland Hotel, as we desire to start promptly at 9. Automobiles will be provided for all of them, and they will go up the Columbia Highway to Bonneville, where there is a very large fish hatchery, that they will have a few minutes to inspect, and where the boat Undine will meet them. We will return on that boat to Portland, and we hope to be back by 5 o'clock or earlier. There will be a luncheon provided on the boat for all. The members of the Oregon Society and their families are expected to go up on the 10 o'clock train, leaving the Union Station. There are hardly enough automobiles for all of you. We will go up the Columbia Highway, which is now being constructed to The Dalles. It is expected before long to have that a hard-surfaced road and the work is now being done on it, but it is not in any such condition as we will have in a year or so; but it is passable, and we think that you will see the most beautiful scenery and the most magnificent scenery that there is in the world. (Applause.)

(Mr. McCamant here made announcement as to arrangements for the banquet.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are there any further announcements? The next order of business is the report of the Committee on National Archives Building, which was passed for a time at request of Mr. De Cindry.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ARCHIVES BUILDING.

MR. WILLIAM A. DE CAINDRY: Mr. President General, I have been requested to formally present the report by Col. Frederick C. Bryan, chairman of the Committee on National Archives Building. This report has been submitted to the Executive Committee and some suggestions have been made by that committee, which I have accepted on behalf of Compatriot Bryan and have incorporated them in the report itself. The committee also proposed a substitute resolution for the closing of the report, which I have also accepted, and as our time is getting a little short and this report is simply a report, I will not detain you by reading it, but will ask that it be spread in the records of this meeting, and that the resolution that has been proposed by the Executive Committee be put upon its passage. That resolution is:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be instructed to keep in touch with this matter and to urge upon Congress, whenever in its judgment the time be opportune, the appropriation of a sum sufficient for the purchase of a suitable site for a National Archives Building in the city of Washington and for the early beginning and construction thereof.

MR. BEARDSLEY: I wish to state the Committee on Resolutions have had that before them and that it met with their approval.

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: You second it?

MR. BEARDSLEY: I do.

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL ARCHIVES BUILDING.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8, 1915.

HON. ROGERS CLARK BALLARD THURSTON,

President General National Society, S. A. R., Louisville, Ky.

DEAR SIR: At the Annual Congress held at Syracuse, New York, in May, 1914, a Special Committee on National Archives Building was appointed. The appointment of this committee was an expression of the great interest felt by our Society in securing the erection in Washington of a suitable building for storing the archives of the National government. The need for such a building is most urgent and is generally recognized. Many of the Federal archives possess great historical value; but despite their value they are at present stored in widely scattered buildings, are poorly cared for, to a great extent are unavailable for examination, and their condition generally is miserable. The President General at the last Congress called attention to the fact that as far back as 1878 efforts were made to get our National government to make provision for taking care of those papers and building an archives building.

The Senate in 1881 and again in 1902 passed bills providing for such a building, but neither bill became a law. In 1903 Congress authorized the purchase of a site for such a building and a site was actually purchased, but it has since then been devoted to other public uses.

The 62d Congress in the Public Buildings Act, approved March 4, 1913, directed the Secretary of the Treasury to prepare designs and estimates for a fire-proof National Archives Building, to be erected in the city of Washington, containing not less than three million cubic feet of space, capable of subsequent extension, without impairing its architectural appearance, to a capacity of 8,900,000 cubic feet. The act provided that before said designs and estimates are completed inspection shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury of the best modern national archives buildings in Europe, and consultation shall be had with the best authorities in Europe on the construction and arrangement of archives buildings. The limit of cost was placed at $1,500,000, and $5,000 was authorized (but not appropriated) for preparation of designs and estimates. A suitable site was authorized to be purchased or otherwise acquired.

This act simply committed Congress to the construction of a National Archives Building, but did nothing more.

The Sundry Civil Act, approved August 1, 1914, carried an appropriation of $5,000 for the preparation of designs and estimates for said building, and that sum is now available for the employment of technical services in the office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department. The Senate amended the bill so as to permit this amount to be expended for the services of architects outside of the government service, but this amendment failed to become the law. The office of the Supervising Architect has agreed to prepare such plans as the amount of the appropriation admits of, and that office believes that the sum appropriated is sufficient to prepare a set of plans which can be submitted to Congress as a basis for further action. As the legislation now stands, however, the European inspection would have to be made before the completion of the plans and the submission of them to the commission which has authority to select the site. Such an inspection is impracticable as long as the present war continues, and that clause should be repealed as soon as Congress convenes. The Supervising Architect's office does not promise to have plans ready by that time, for an archives building is a new thing for this country, and to make the proper plans will require much study.

Your committee, therefore, recommends the adoption by our National Congress of the following resolution:

Whereas the records of our National government, though of priceless value to the historian, to the statesman, and to all who take pride in the record of American progress and achievement, are now widely scattered in different buildings and offices in Washington and elsewhere, often kept in rented buildings grossly unsuitable, often ill-arranged, often difficult of access to the investigator, and in many cases exposed to great danger from fire and to injury from damp and dirt;

Whereas ordinary regard for the pecuniary interests of the government, good business administration, and patriotic interest in invaluable historical records alike demand that there should be erected in Washington a National Archives Building, fire-proof, of the most perfect type, and of ample size to contain all papers not needed for current use in the departments, together with allowance for the future; and

Whereas the Public Buildings Act of March 3, 1913, and the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of August 1, 1914, authorized the erection of such a building and provided for the drawing of preliminary plans and estimates, and plans are now in course of preparation in the office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, but no appropriation for site or construction has yet been made by Congress: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be instructed to keep in touch with this matter and to urge upon Congress, whenever in its judgment the time be opportune, the appropriation of a sum sufficient for the purchase of a suitable site for a National Archives Building in the city of Washington and for the early beginning of construction thereon.

Very respectfully submitted,

COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL ARCHIVES BUILDING.
FREDERICK C. BRYAN, Chairman.

RESOLUTION REGARDING COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION.

Judge BEARDSLEY: Mr. President General, in reference to the matter of the utterances of the Commissioner of Education, the Committee on Resolutions, to whom was referred that matter, are ready to report and I wish to request my associate, Mr. Wentworth, to read the resolutions recommended to this Congress for adoption.

Mr. ELMER MARSTON WENTWORTH, of Iowa: Mr. President General, we offer the following resolutions:

Whereas the United States Commissioner of Education, Philander P. Claxton, is reported to have expressed sentiments derogatory to the American flag and criticised its defenders in an address delivered before the American School Peace League at Boston; and

Whereas, although his attention has been repeatedly called to the matter, he appears to regard it of little importance and has never, so far as we can learn, denied the accuracy of the report as the expression of his opinion, nor repudiated its sentiments; and

Whereas the Sons of the American Revolution take particular pride in the work of the builders of the Republic and hold in highest honor the defenders of the flag, that symbolizes the United States of America; and

Whereas no man is worthy of the privileges of American citizenship who insults the flag or defames its defenders: Be it

Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution be instructed to present the matter to the attention of the President of the United States, with the firm belief that his high patriotism and devotion to duty will permit no man holding such sentiments to remain at the head of one of the most important bureaus of our government. (Applause.)

Resolved. That we protest against any further printing or reprinting of the publications of the American School Peace League under the authority of Commissioner Claxton at the expense of the nation.

Mr. President General, in behalf of the committee, it gives me great pleasure to move the adoption of these resolutions. (Applause.)

Mr. THOMAS A. PERKINS, of California: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Any remarks? All of those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. It is unanimously carried. And I want to congratulate you, gentlemen, upon having adopted resolutions that mean something.

Mr. JAMES H. HALL, of Michigan: Mr. President General, is a motion in order?

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Is it under old or unfinished business?

Mr. HALL: Yes.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: All right; it is in order.

(A resolution was introduced by Mr. Hall, of Michigan, regarding an alleged historic desk reported in certain newspapers to have been removed from the Department of State, and the subject was referred to the Committee on Resolutions, upon whose recommendation it was referred to the Executive Committee for investigation. [Subsequent to the Congress it was ascertained that the desk in question was new in 1873 and was not considered of historic importance and had been replaced by another one.—Secretary General.]

RESOLUTION ON PREPAREDNESS.

Mr. NATHAN WARREN, of Massachusetts: Mr. President General, this resolution which I will read has been considered by the Committee on Resolutions and has its unanimous approval. I move its adoption:

Resolved, That the Sons of the American Revolution, in Congress assembled, indorse the sentiment for a system of preparedness on the part of the government and the people, and the guarantee of peace with honor, in accordance with the traditions and policy of our Revolutionary ancestry.

Judge BEARDSLEY: Mr. President General, that has been before our committee and we approve it.

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are you ready for the question? All those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it. Another good resolution we have passed. I want to congratulate you upon it.

STUDY OF AMERICAN HISTORY IN SCHOOLS.

Mr. H. M. BUSHNELL, of Lincoln, Nebr.: Mr. President General, I have a resolution that I want to present, and I want to present it with the idea that it may be the foundation by which we can take home something that will be of interest to the rank and file of our members. I would feel as though we had accomplished little at this Congress unless we in some way inaugurate a method by which we can become closer in touch with the men who are members of this Society at home. And along the line generally discussed of educational work and the work of American history, I want to read this resolution to this Congress as a basis for systematic work along this line, and I think as a whole we can consider this and not have it referred to the Committee on Resolutions, because it is more in the line of new business and I would like to read it to the Congress:

Resolved, That, for the purpose of securing larger instruction in American history in the public schools of this nation, it shall be the duty of the Presidents of the different State Societies to report to a committee to be created at this Annual Congress the existing status or course of study relative to American history that is being followed and has been adopted as requirement on the part of State officials, State boards of education, and boards of education in the larger cities, the purpose of this resolution being to secure information through which the committee may report a uniform plan through which the study of American history in the public schools may be increased and standardized, and that a plan of action may be worked out that will appeal for the support of all patriotic societies and their individual memberships; to present a standardized method of instruction in American history for the schools of the United States that will increase not only in one State, but uniformly in every State, lessons in American history and instruction in the public schools.

In the city in which I live, in the high school, American history is not a part of the high-school work; but they do devote semester after semester to ancient Greek and ancient Roman history. Now, if we get a uniform basis upon which to work, and the State Presidents ought to be interested enough to ascertain from the laws of their State and their State officials just what is provided in those States, then if these data are compiled and there be presented at the next Congress a uniform plan asking for a standardized method of instruction and increased instruction, we lay the foundation at this meeting for some real results at the next meeting and we will have this in addition. When we adopt this we will be able to have a work that we can put in the hands of every individual member. In other words, we can ask every member of this and other patriotic societies to go to their school authorities all through the United States and ask that this plan receive their endorsement. And I move the adoption of the resolution. (Applause.)

(Said motion was thereupon duly seconded.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion.

Mr. JENKS: Mr. President General, no more important matter than this has come before this Congress. It should be carefully and diligently considered; and it seems to me very appropriate, and I therefore move, that it be referred to the Executive Committee for consideration.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: With power to act?

Mr. JENKS: With power to act.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, you have heard the motion. Is that seconded?

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is moved and seconded that this be referred to the Executive Committee with power to act.

Mr. GEORGE N. OSBORNE: Mr. President General, I would like to give in support of this resolution my own experience. Some years ago, while living in Montana, we had a teacher, a Canadian, and when it came to the period of the War of 1812 in our school he laid aside the United States history, said it was not correct, and started to teach the scholars out of a Canadian history which he had, in regard to the campaign around Niagara Falls. I entered a protest to the custom-house in Great Falls and they sent an inspector out there and ordered him removed from the schools, and that shows the necessity of watching this matter carefully.

Mr. H. M. BUSHNELL: Mr. President General, I am sorry the gentleman made the motion to refer this. Why can't this Congress go on record as to its approval or disapproval of a plan to increase and standardize the study of American history in the public schools of the United States? Why can't we go on record? And then, if there is any necessity as to the working out of a plan beyond what the resolution provides, the plan of action can be afterward taken up; but I would like to have an expression from this Congress on a united forward movement for a larger work in the instruction of American history in the public schools of this country.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I will tell you. One of the standing committees is the Committee on Education. That committee is the one properly to study out this whole question. It is hoped that this committee during the coming year may devote their time and attention to this and other historical questions. It is one of the most important questions that we have, and very few people realize how important it is. I attended a meeting of our Connecticut Society on June 19. Every year they or the members of the State Society give to the high schools in each of the fifty-six districts in the State a prize for the best essay on some historical subject. Those essays are received, and then the prize is awarded. The one awarded the first prize of all of the fifty-six receives from the State Society a gold medal and a check, as a rule, for one hundred dollars; I believe this year it was fifty; the one receiving the second prize gets a silver medal and a check for fifty dollars. At this meeting on June 19 both of those essays were read. The first one was by a young lady from one of the normal schools. Her grandparents came to this country from Germany. The second prize was won by a young girl, I think in the seventh or eighth grade. She herself came to this country as an immigrant five years ago from Russia. Those two girls won the first and second prizes in a State like Connecticut, noted for its learning; and I then thought, "What has become of our American-born boys, that they are not winning some of these prizes?" Your suggestions are excellent, and I have every reason to believe that the incoming Executive Committee will be anxious to push them as fully as they can possibly be pushed, and that by referring it to the Executive Committee you really will accomplish more than by putting the motion through in the form in which you have it.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, I believe that we might pass a brief resolution expressing the sentiment of this Society in this matter, it being very important that American history should be studied in a more systematic manner than it is now.

Mr. H. M. BUSHNELL: Let me change my motion, then, that this Congress endorses this resolution and refers it to the Trustees for action.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: To the Executive Committee for action?

Mr. BUSHNELL: To the Executive Committee; that we endorse the resolution, the sentiment, and report it to the Executive Committee for action.

Mr. JENKS: Mr. President General, that motion should not in any way be construed as being hostile to the resolution. On the contrary,

I think the resolution was one of great importance and appeals to every one who has his pulse upon the times today. It involves what is the keynote of this Congress, which was sounded by Dr. Boyd on Sunday night. But so important it is that it seemed to me proper to take the course of going through the consideration and hands of the Executive Committee, and the modification which the mover of the resolution proposed is entirely satisfactory to me, that it go to the Executive Committee with the recommendation of this Congress.

Col. M. W. WOOD: The idea which underlies this resolution is one for which all of our hearts beat in unison. We are, all of us, without any exception, I believe, committed to this idea; but it is only necessary we should do our duty; but we should do it properly. There are a number of questions involved in this, perhaps, that may have to be considered before the formulation of the resolution which is to appear as the action of the Congress. In my own State we give a gold medal, a silver medal, and a bronze medal, made by Tiffany, to the pupils of the schools for their patriotic essays. All of us believe in it. I believe it should be committed to one of the committees, either on Resolutions or the Executive Committee, with power to act, but to act as in their judgment they think proper.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The Executive Committee has power to act. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the motion please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it. It is therefore referred to the Executive Committee, with power to act.

MARKING OF TREE.

Judge BEARDSLEY: Mr. President General, your Committee on Resolutions, to whom was referred the resolution by Compatriot Remington in reference to the large tree at Mariposa Grove, heartily approves it and we recommend its adoption (see p. 174).

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The resolution of Judge Remington in regard to naming one of the trees in the Mariposa Grove for the Sons of the American Revolution is heartily approved and they recommend its adoption. Is that motion seconded?

Mr. OSBORNE: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are you ready for the question? All of those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it. It is so ordered.

PATRIOTS' DAY.

Mr. H. F. PUNDERSON, of Massachusetts: I have a resolution presented by the Chapter of Lowell, Mass., which I would like to read. It has been endorsed by the Massachusetts Society and has the approval of the Committee on Resolutions of this Congress:

LOWELL, MASS., February 22, 1915.

Whereas we, the undersigned members of Old Middlesex Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, believe there should be established a national holiday in honor of our forefathers who first settled in this continent and laid the foundation for these United States of America: Be it

Resolved, That the Massachusetts State Society and, through it, the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, be respectfully requested to have presented in Congress a bill to establish a national holiday to be called "Patriots' Day," and suggesting that April 19 be such a holiday, because, in a sense, April 19, 1775, marked the beginning of the culmination of the struggles of our forefathers, as well as the beginning of our present democratic form of government, and of independence from Great Britain. Further be it

Resolved, That the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, be respectfully requested to urge all Sons of the American Revolution and all members of other patriotic organizations to use their influence upon their Representatives in Congress to the end that they may vote in favor of a national holiday which shall be called "Patriots' Day."

Signed by George W. Putnam, President Old Middlesex Chapter, Lowell, Mass., together with twenty-five of its members.

Mr. PUNDERSON: As I said, this has been approved by the Massachusetts State Society and the Committee on Resolutions of this Congress and I move its adoption.

(Said motion was thereupon duly seconded, was put to a vote, and carried, and it was so ordered.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, are there any further motions? Has the Committee on Resolutions anything further to report? We are under new business.

INVITATION FOR 1920 CONGRESS.

Mr. CHARLES F. READ, of Massachusetts: Mr. President General, I hold in my hand, sir, a letter addressed to the Congress by Mr. Frank E. Woodward, President of the Massachusetts Society, and he has instructed me, as Vice-President of the Society, to present it to the Congress. (Reading:)

To the President General and Delegates of the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution.

COMPATRIOTS: The Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, in anticipation of the celebration by the State of Massachusetts in 1920 of the Tercentenary of the Landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock, extend to the National Society a cordial and urgent invitation to hold their Congress in Boston that year. The Governor of the State has appointed a committee of distinguished citizens to consider and report as to the character of the celebration which will commemorate this event. Although the committee has not reached any decision, there is a general impression that it will differ in many respects from any preceding celebration. Plymouth Rock has become the doorstep of a great nation, and it is most fitting that the lineal descendants of those men by whose services and sacrifices our national consciousness was attained shall have an honorable share in the commemoration of this historical event. We therefore sincerely hope that the National Congress will so plan its intervening meetings as to make Boston the logical locality for 1920.

FRANK E. WOODWARD,
President.

Mr. President General, I have very little to add to that. The letter explains itself. But we want you, if possible, all to come to Massachusetts, for two reasons: We are going to have a celebration there; but more than that, we find that the National Society has a way of coming back to Massachusetts perhaps every ten years. We want you to come to Massachusetts, the home land of Samuel Adams, the father of the Revolution, and John Hancock, who signed his name to the Declaration of Independence in characters so large it was said facetiously that George the Second could see it without spectacles. Not only will we take you to Lexington, but we will take you to Plymouth, and there, as you have paid homage to the bell in your Society, many of you perhaps have pressed your lips to that sacred relic as perhaps, if you have been to Ireland, you have kissed the Blarney Stone; and we want you at Plymouth Rock to kiss the rock on which the forefathers landed in 1620. I hope, sir, that the proposition will take its regular course. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Mr. Read, I will ask you to express to the Massachusetts Society our sincere appreciation of this invitation. We cannot act upon it; it will be acted upon by the Board of Trustees that will be elected at the Congress for the year preceding the celebration, and it will be referred to that Board and be kept in shape so that they can safely see it. We thank you very much indeed for the invitation.

Now, is there any other new business?

We will then pass to the question of invitations for the holding of the Twenty-seventh Annual Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution.

INVITATIONS FOR 1916 CONGRESS.

Mr. WEEKS: Mr. President General.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I have the honor to introduce to you Mr. John R. Weeks, Secretary of the New Jersey Society. You know him, though, better than I do.

Mr. WEEKS: We have just heard of the historical importance of Massachusetts, and no one could pay more deference to those stirring events that stand out so strikingly in the history of our fathers than myself, as representing New Jersey. There is yet another little State in the Union (sometimes said to have been out of the Union) where certain historical events occurred that also were of importance, and I need not remind such an audience as this that if it were not for Springfield, Monmouth, Princeton, and Trenton perhaps events might have been different from what they were, and perhaps we might not be sitting here today celebrating the formation of this great Republic. I would like, in behalf of the State Society of New Jersey, to express to you their earnest desire that you might see fit to visit us on the occasion of your Congress next year. It will be the occasion of the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the founding of Newark. Elaborate preparations are being made for that event. The chairman of the committee in charge of the celebration is your former President General, Hon. Franklin Murphy, and I am sure that if he were here—and he wished me to state that he greatly regretted he could not be here on this occasion—that if he were here, he would say that that committee would be not only a committee for the 250th anniversary, but a committee to see to it that the National Congress, if they come, are made welcome on that occasion. I do not know that we have any special brand of cocktail, "Indian" or other, to offer you, but I will say this: If you decide to come to Newark, the freedom of the town will be yours; everything that lies in our power will be done to make you feel at home. I think we have enough there to see and enough there for you to do. We have not, perhaps, the grandeur of scenery that you have here, but something a little different. You might get tired if you always had these things. You might, perhaps, like to go down to the seaboard and see something a little flat.

I am sure we will be glad to have you. I hope that you may see fit to say you will come; and whether you do or not, we shall appreciate, anyway, the fact that you have considered our invitation, and we shall be very glad indeed if it is accepted.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Compatriot Weeks, the National Society thanks you sincerely for the invitation. The Constitution requires that it should be referred to the Board of Trustees, and that is done without any formality of a motion. It will therefore be placed before the Board of Trustees at their meeting today. Are there any other invitations?

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, the Tennessee Society has telegraphed, renewing its invitation to meet in Nashville, Tenn., in May, 1916. The invitation was extended at the last Congress. (Reading:) "Tennessee's Sons send greetings and cordially invite their compatriots to hold 1916 convention in Nashville, the Athens of the South. Leland Hume, President." (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: That invitation, like the other, will also be referred to the Board of Trustees for their action today.

Mr. FRANK M. MILLS, of South Dakota: Mr. President General, on behalf of the State Society of South Dakota, I invite this Society to hold its next Congress in the city of Sioux Falls, the biggest, busiest, and prettiest city of 25,000 people in the United States; and when you get through with the beauties and hospitality of the city of Sioux Falls, if you want to enjoy scenery, we will go to the Black Hills, and there is nothing equal to that combination in the United States.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Have the Sioux Indians been entirely driven out of the Black Hills?

Mr. MILLS: Certainly.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: They chased me for twenty miles once and I didn't like their looks; but your invitation is for next year?

Mr. MILLS: Next year or any subsequent year. (Laughter.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Thank you. It will also be referred to the Board of Trustees for their consideration at their meeting today.

Mr. McCREADY: Mr. President General, I rise at the greeting of one of the Daughters of Tennessee, and I never refuse the orders of any lady, to second the invitation from our neighboring State. I had hoped very much the Congress would see fit to come to the South. I think we all appreciate the invitation of New Jersey; the invitation from South Dakota is open at any time; but we need you in the South. The only discouraging report that has been made to this Congress, I am sorry to say, was made by a resident of our own State Society in Kentucky, with regard to the discouraging conditions that obtain in our Southern States relative to their interests in the work of the Sons of the American Revolution. I should very much like personally to go to New Jersey, because one of my very dearest friends has recently been made bishop of that State, and it would give me great personal pleasure to go; but I think, gentlemen, that we need you in the South; and therefore I very much hope that the Trustees will very seriously consider not only the pleasure we would have in going to New Jersey, the great pleasure that we would have in going to South Dakota, but that can be deferred and enjoyed at any time; but we need you in the South, and therefore I believe that the Society whose aims are patriotic and the service of the country will consider service first and pleasure afterward. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are there any other seconds to any of these invitations. If not, we will then proceed to the election of officers. Nominations are now in order for the office of President General.

ELECTION OF GENERAL OFFICERS.

Hon. HARVEY FOOTE REMINGTON: Mr. President General—

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Will you come up in front, Judge?

Judge REMINGTON: I don't think it is necessary, Mr. President General, because at this hour I am not going to take very long in presenting the candidate.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: You see, we all want to see you. We see in you the reflection of the candidate.

Judge REMINGTON: Thank you.

(Judge Remington here went to the platform and proceeded with his remarks, as follows:)

Mr. President General, it affords me great pleasure at this time to present the name of a candidate for the office of President General who I believe would add luster and distinction to the office. This Congress and this organization has been highly favored in its officers, and especially in the office of the President General and the Secretary General. You know the names of the honored men who have filled this position, and we all know the honor which has been bestowed upon our organization by the present presiding officer. We have made no mistakes in the choice of our officers, and I think we have made no mistake in our places of meeting. I think there was some doubt two years ago when the invitation was presented from Portland for us to come to the Pacific slope for the holding of this session of our Congress. There was no mistake. We all realize there was no mistake made in accepting that invitation. We have had the most gracious hospitality in this city, and we will at the proper time, I trust, have a proper resolution of thanks offered for the wonderful hospitality of this city. We have grown here together as we have gathered here from day to day, and it has been a veritable pleasure to meet this Western spirit we find everywhere upon the Pacific slope.

Perhaps I am digressing, but I wanted to say this word.

I now want to present the name of a man for this office who has served the Congress in the office of Vice-President, who has served it with the Executive Committee, who has served Syracuse Chapter of the State of New York and is responsible for the existence of that Chapter and for the large membership that it contains, who has served indefatigably in patriotic work, and you have heard him upon the floor of this Congress, and it is unnecessary for me to go into eulogy of him further, because in the person of Newell B. Woodworth, of Syracuse (applause), we have a candidate who will uphold the high order that has been maintained, the high representation maintained in our presiding officers. I therefore, Mr. President General, take great pleasure in presenting the name of Mr. Newell B. Woodworth, the President of the Syracuse Chapter, for the office of President General. (Applause.)

MR. CHANCELLOR L. JENKS, of Illinois: Mr. President General, nearly every member of the Illinois delegation was present at the memorable Congress held at Syracuse last year. Those who for the first time met the President of the Syracuse Chapter found in him a genial friend; those who knew him before were glad indeed to renew their acquaintance. He proved to be a royal and, above all, a loyal compatriot. It is therefore with great pleasure, on behalf of the entire delegation from the Society of the State of Illinois, that I most cordially and heartily second the nomination of Mr. Woodworth.

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are there any others?

Judge OVERTON G. ELLIS: Mr. President General, on behalf of the delegation from the State of Washington, I desire to second the nomination of Mr. Woodworth. (Applause.)

MR. ALBERT M. HENRY, of Michigan: Mr. President General, on behalf of our entire Michigan delegation, I desire to support the nomination of Mr. Woodworth. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are there any other nominations?

COL. M. W. WOOD, of Idaho: Mr. President General, it would seem to me that I's have it. The State from which I come commences with an I. Idaho cordially seconds the nomination of Newell B. Woodworth for President General of this Society.

DR. CHARLES S. GRINDALL, of Maryland: Mr. President General, Maryland seconds the nomination.

GEN. EDWARD E. BRADLEY, of Connecticut: Mr. President General, Connecticut also seconds most heartily the nomination made for President General of Mr. Woodworth.

Judge EDDY ORLAND LEE, of Utah: Mr. President General, inasmuch as there is no opposing candidate, I move you that the Secretary General be instructed to cast the ballot of this convention for Mr. Woodworth.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: There were two others on the floor a moment ago.

Judge LEE: On behalf of the entire Utah delegation, it affords me great pleasure to second the nomination made by Judge Remington of Mr. Woodworth.

Mr. HENRY FULLER PUNDERSON, of Massachusetts: Mr. President General, on behalf of the Massachusetts Society, I wish to second the nomination of Mr. Woodworth.

Mr. JOHN B. HUNDLEY, of Kentucky: Mr. President General, I would feel that my duty had not been discharged if I should not present the name of Kentucky and express our great pleasure at voting for this distinguished brother and compatriot.

Mr. THOMAS A. PERKINS, of California: Mr. President General, on behalf of the California delegation, we most heartily and cordially second the nomination of Newell B. Woodworth for President General.

Mr. GEORGE N. OSBORNE: Mr. President General, speaking for Minnesota, I second the nomination of Compatriot Woodworth for this high office.

Mr. JOHN R. WEEKS, of New Jersey: Mr. President General, we, too, would like to have the chance to say, "We, too."

Mr. C. A. KENYON, of Indiana: Mr. Chairman, Indiana joins in asking to have the nomination made unanimous.

Judge REMINGTON: Mr. President General, I don't know; I may be a little too premature in saying that he was from New York; it seems to me that Mr. Newell B. Woodworth is of the United States of America.

Mr. GERSHOM H. HILL, of Iowa: Mr. President General, speaking for the State of Iowa, I second the nomination.

Maj. V. M. C. SILVA: Mr. President General, I second that nomination.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is now moved and seconded that the nominations be closed and the Secretary General be instructed to cast one ballot for Mr. Newell B. Woodworth for the office of President General of this Society. All in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General, I have the honor to cast the vote of the Twenty-sixth Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution for President General, Newell B. Woodworth.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Mr. Newell B. Woodworth is declared elected. I will name as a committee Mr. McCamant as chairman, Vice-President General Wood, Mr. Remington, and ex-President General Beardsley to conduct Mr. Woodworth to the platform in order that he may have an opportunity of thanking you for his election.

(The committee here escorted President-elect Newell B. Woodworth to the platform, amidst enthusiastic applause.)

Mr. WALLACE McCAMANT: Mr. President General, I take pleasure in presenting to you the President General-elect.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Mr. Woodworth, it gives me great pleasure to announce to you that you have been unanimously elected President General of the Sons of the American Revolution. Compatriots, it is my pleasure to introduce to you your President General-elect. (Applause.)

President General-elect NEWELL B. WOODWORTH: Compatriots, there are times in one's life when words are inadequate to express the feelings which well up in one's heart. This is an instance. I deeply appreciate the honor you have conferred upon me. It is one of the greatest honors that could be bestowed upon an American citizen. Beyond this, too, I feel deeply the loyal friendship that has been displayed; for what, after all, in life is better or of more value than freindship; for friendship of good fellows? And I am glad to be able to accept this great honor here in the Northwest under the flower which is identified with this glorious Northwest (the speaker standing beneath a large bouquet of roses).

It will be my endeavor, to the best of my ability, and I will give the best that is in me, to emulate my predecessors and their honorable careers in active work. I know that the standard is high; but I shall aim to reach that standard, and I trust at the end of the year that I may merit some little of your approbation for my endeavors.

I thank you, gentlemen. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Next in order is the nomination of Vice-Presidents General. There are five Vice-Presidents General to be elected. Any number may be nominated from the floor, and then the balloting will take place, each person balloting for five persons.

ELECTION OF VICE-PRESIDENTS GENERAL.

Mr. CHARLES F. READ, of Massachusetts: Mr. President General, I nominate for the office of Vice-President General of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution a compatriot of my State, Massachusetts. He is a resident of the central part of the State, about 100 miles from Boston, which is the center of our activities, and we know that the interests of the Society will not suffer when placed in his hands. Moreover, you have all become well acquainted with the gentleman, for he was the originator of the now well-known Washington Pilgrimage; and I have had the pleasure of seeing how successful that was, because I was present in Cambridge when you, Mr. President General, and your associates arrived in Cambridge. I have the pleasure and the honor to nominate for the office of Vice-President General, Mr. Henry Fuller Punderson, of Springfield, Mass. (Applause.)

Mr. C. P. OVERFIELD, of Utah: Mr. President General, a certain sentimental affection moves me today in the selection of the President General in going from this Pacific State clear across the continent to the Empire State, the State of my boyhood days, and selecting the candidate that has been chosen as the master and the head of the Sons of the American Revolution for the coming year. I come at the present time from the State of Utah, where my home has been for the last twenty years. We recall as we reached this City of Roses the envelope that was given us as we registered. In that was a booklet describing the sacred emblem of liberty, that relic of the Revolution, the Liberty Bell. The Liberty Bell was brought here through the effort, as I understand it, of the children of the Pacific slope. Requests were made to Philadelphians to allow the bell to be brought to this new and far distant and, to many, unknown land. It met with opposition from the Philadelphians in many cases. The time came when it was necessary to have co-operation of other States throughout the Union in the West. At that time the Mayor of Salt Lake City, with keen foresightedness, took the matter at once in his hands, brought the matter before our governing board, and had a request sent saying, "Send the bell to the West and give it to us in Utah as well." The requests were heeded. It was my privilege to travel with the Liberty Bell throughout the State of Utah. In our own city—a city of 125,000 people, that sets like a gem near the shores of that inland sea, the Great Salt Lake—never have I been privileged at any time or in any section of this great Republic to see the patriotic spirit that was shown and the bell revered in the manner that it was.

About four years ago it was found desirable to change the form of government of our municipality. We decided upon the Commission form of government, as it is familiarly known. A bill was introduced in the Legislature of the State of Utah and passed. We were given five commissioners—a mayor and four others. A committee of seventy-five representative citizens of the city of Salt Lake, irrespective of creed or of party, met and chose as their standard-bearer a successful young business man, who had served in the Senate of our State, and at an early age was the Brigadier General of the Militia of the State, had served with patriotism and ability as a member of the school board of our fair city, and Mayor Samuel C. Park, compatriot, member of the Utah Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, was chosen by this citizens' committee and elected by one of the largest votes that has ever been given to any citizen within our city.

I spoke of the bell. That only shows the wisdom, the clear keensightedness of Mayor Park in asking for the bell and encouraging its being brought to the West. You in Portland know full well the value of it.

One word for our Society. We have a membership of about 125. For a State of 400,000 people, situated, as we are, in the mountains, it is a splendid showing. We have but few delinquencies, if any, which shows our Society is large and active. We have the representative men of the State. We have in our efforts placed recently in our new State Capitol a tablet as a memorial to the heroes of the American Revolution. To our colleges we give yearly medals. At one time, if my recollection serves me, we were among the first to win the ceremonial badge given to the Society proposing and electing in any given year the largest number of sons of members. Our President that year in the State of Utah was a bachelor. We gave the President the badge, with the advice, "Go out and do likewise."

Gentlemen of this convention, I ask you to support and sustain for the office of Vice-President General the Hon. Samuel C. Park, mayor of Salt Lake City and compatriot. (Applause.)

Judge OVERTON GENTRY ELLIS, of Washington: Mr. President General, on behalf of the State of Washington, I desire to present the name of a man for Vice-President General of the National Society who probably among all of the men of the State of Washington has done more for the good of the Society than any other man in the State. We have in the State of Washington nearly 300 live members, and among all of them the man whose name I shall give presently is recognized as an enthusiast for the Sons of the American Revolution. For twenty years he has been a member of the Sons; he was a charter member of the State Society; he was the first Vice-President, and has been President of the State Society. During his Presidency was inaugurated the alien work, of which the State of Washington is very proud. On behalf of the Washington State Society, I desire to present the name of Dr. Samuel Judd Holmes. (Applause.)

Mr. LOUIS A. BOWMAN, of Illinois: Mr. President General, under the necessities of the case I wish to offer a motion at this time which I believe will appeal to every delegate, namely, that nominating speeches be limited to one sentence from now on.

Mr. HENRY M. HOUGHTON: Mr. President General, as the only delegate from my State of Colorado—and it seems that Colorado does not expect any honors from this delegation—therefore I second the nomination of Dr. Holmes, of Washington. (Applause.)

Mr. ELMER MARSTON WENTWORTH, of Iowa: Mr. President General, I desire, sir, to place in nomination for Vice-President General Colonel Wood, our present efficient member of that board. I do this, sir, with the thought in my mind that we from the East have not always been exactly generous, not knowing the spirit of the West until we came here and not completely in touch with it. We have honored California in days gone by and California has honored us. We have honored Oregon and Oregon has honored us. There are three States here presenting three candidates for this position. I desire to nominate Colonel Wood and second the nomination of Mayor Park and Dr. Holmes. (Applause.)

Maj. V. M. C. SILVA, of Oregon: In behalf of the Oregon Society, I was about to take the floor to make the same nomination. The Oregon Society wishes to present the name also of Colonel Wood of the army, retired, because of his efficient service on the Pacific coast. The Oregon Society endorses Colonel Wood.

Mr. THOMAS M. EARL, of San Francisco: Mr. President General, as representing the delegation from the State of California, one of our greatest States and one of the States which has the largest membership in the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, now having 422 active members, and also as a State who was very largely instrumental in bringing the Liberty Bell to this coast, which is now being exhibited at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition; and, further, there was one particular point which I want to bring before the members—the fact of the opening of the Panama Canal will bring to San Francisco a very important immigration problem. We have coming, or expect to have coming, there a very large number of immigrants. There are now coming to San Francisco, notwithstanding the troubles abroad, a largely increased number of immigrants, and we feel that the Society should be represented there by a Vice-President General, particularly on account of the immigration problems which we now have confronting us. The California Society of Sons of the American Revolution have taken a very live interest in educating and assisting the aliens in their naturalization matters and in educating them to the dignity of our American institutions. We have a member at San Francisco who was our President in 1910 and 1911, who is now our Secretary, and has been our Registrar for several years, a man of sterling qualities, a prominent citizen of San Francisco, and I take great pleasure, Mr. President General, in nominating Mr. Thomas A. Perkins as Vice-President General. (Applause.)

Col. GEORGE V. LAUMAN, of Illinois: Mr. President General, Illinois takes pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. Thomas A. Perkins, of California, as Vice-President General.

Col. GEORGE A. ARMES, of the District of Columbia: Mr. President General, I wish to call the attention of this convention to a distinguished gentleman by the name of Mills, Col. Frank M. Mills, of South Dakota, who showed his patriotism to the flag by raising a regiment at his own expense, and since that time who has proved himself a valuable citizen and a business man. Everybody who knows him can vouch for what I say. I nominate him as Vice-President General of this Association.

Mr. FRANKLIN S. HARDING, of Idaho: Mr. President General, I want to prove my loyalty to my own State, Idaho, and my friendship to Colonel Wood by seconding his nomination for Vice-President General.

Mr. JOHN B. HUNDLEY, of Kentucky: Mr. President General, I wish to place in nomination the name of Mr. William K. Boardman, of Nashville, Tenn., a most excellent man, as you all know who have come in contact with him.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, of those names that have been so far presented, seven of them, only four have received seconds. There are no seconds to the nominations of Mr. Punderson, Mr. Mills, or Mr. Boardman.

Dr. CHARLES S. GRINDALL, of Maryland: Mr. President General, I second Mr. Boardman's nomination.

Judge BEARDSLEY: Mr. President General, no one that took part in the Washington Pilgrimage can fail to appreciate the great contribution to the success of that affair by Mr. Punderson, of Springfield, Mass. That Washington Pilgrimage was the greatest undertaking that our Society has ever consummated. It was a great success, and all through the East it gave us more prestige than anything we have ever done. The gentleman that originated the idea is the Grand Marshal, Mr. Punderson, and I think this Congress owes it to itself that we should see that he is honored by electing him as one of the Vice-Presidents General. In addition to that, I wish to say that I think I voice the sentiment of the Eastern delegates that we would like to see the other four Vice-Presidents General go to the West. We have had a splendid Congress here and we are going home with our hearts full of gratitude for the splendid hospitality that we have received, and it is the least we can do; and, voicing the sentiment of the Eastern delegates, I hope every one of them get in, after the election of Mr. Punderson, which is due him, and send the other four places to the Pacific coast.

Mr. WEEKS, of New Jersey: Mr. President General, in behalf of New Jersey, I will be very glad indeed to second the nomination of Mr. Punderson. I think the Congress will honor itself by electing him.

Mr. HENRY, of Michigan: Mr. President General, in behalf of the Michigan delegation, we desire to support the nomination of Dr. Holmes, of Washington; Mr. Boardman, of Tennessee, and Mr. Punderson. (Applause.)

Mr. CROUSE: Mr. President General, I take great pleasure in placing in nomination the Hon. Elmer Marston Wentworth, of Des Moines, Iowa, of the Middle West.

Mr. WENTWORTH: Mr. President General, I desire, sir—I don't know who did it—I desire, sir, to withdraw my name, with the consent of the gentleman who did it. I don't know who it was. I was outside here enjoying myself.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Apparently Mr. Wentworth does not want any more work. Without its being seconded and with your permission, then, Mr. Wentworth will be allowed to withdraw his name. He has served so admirably on the Executive Committee ever since I have been on it, I confess I would hate to see him not have the honors which he has certainly earned.

Maj. V. M. C. SILVA, of Oregon: Mr. President General, I desire to second the nomination of Colonel Mills for Vice-President General.

Mr. H. W. COE, of Oregon: Mr. President General, there is a city that tries to do everything good which Portland tries to do and does. It is situated on this coast. In fact, sometimes they think they do better than the people down here, and you were up there, most of you, and probably know that they do some things better than we do. We admit that as a general thing. But when we see these people from the State of Washington come in here and get this flag today, some of us say they have a candidate for the Vice-Presidency that we ought to support; so I wish to second the nomination of Dr. Samuel Judd Holmes, of Seattle. (Applause.)

Mr. WOODRUFF: Mr. President General and Compatriots, I desire to say that Utah has had a Society in existence for twenty-one years, so I am informed, although I have been a member only about two years; but we have never had representation among the general officers. Our Society has grown very rapidly during the last few years and we feel that we are entitled to have the honor of one of the Vice-Presidents General; therefore I take great pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. Park.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are there any further nominations?

Mr. McCAMANT: Mr. President General, I move the nominations close and we proceed to ballot.

(Said motion was duly seconded, was put to a vote, and carried.)

Gen. EDWARD E. BRADLEY, of Connecticut: Mr. President General, may we have, before we proceed to ballot, the names of those who have been nominated, with their initials? We would like to know who we are voting for.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The Secretary General will read off the list of nominees.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Henry F. Punderson, of Massachusetts; Samuel C. Park, of Utah; Dr. Samuel Judd Holmes, of Washington State; Lieut. Col. M. W. Wood, of Idaho; Thomas A. Perkins, of California; F. M. Mills, of South Dakota, and William K. Boardman, of Tennessee.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: There are seven nominees and there are five to be balloted for. I name as tellers Mr. Clarke, who is chairman of the Committee on Registration and Credentials; Mr. Bowman, of Illinois, and Mr. Wentworth, of Iowa.

Mr. WEEKS: Mr. President General, owing to the confusion relating to the first name, may we not have your ruling that we be permitted to vote for the candidate simply by using the last name?

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I would suggest using the last names simply as the quickest means of doing it. None of them are duplicated. I want to call the attention of those present to the fact that only delegates, officers of National Society, and ex-Presidents General have the right to ballot in this case. I have been told that there are some present who are not delegates and I am merely calling attention to that fact so as to avoid any trouble later.

I will also announce that it is not at all necessary to sign the ballot; in fact, to avoid confusion, you had better not put your name upon it.

(After a pause.)

It has been suggested that while the ballots are being counted we proceed with the election of other officers. If that meets with the approval of the Congress, it will save quite a little time. I therefore ask the Congress if this meets with your approval. Those in favor of it please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

The nominations are therefore in order for the office of Secretary General.

Gen. EDWARD E. BRADLEY, of Connecticut: Mr. President General, I think there is but one name in all minds connected with that office, and that is the one who has served us so many years and so faithfully in that position, Mr. A. Howard Clark, and I am very glad indeed to place his name in nomination. I presume there will be no other nomination, and if not, why I have a motion to make that the President General cast the ballot of the meeting for him.

(There were numerous seconds to the motion and also numerous seconds to the nomination.)

A MEMBER: Mr. President General, I move the nominations be closed.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, it has been seconded by I don't know how many gentlemen. Are there any other nominations?

A MEMBER: I move, Mr. President General, that the nominations be closed, and that he be elected by acclamation.

Another MEMBER: By a rising vote.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It has to be by ballot.

A MEMBER: Then that the President General cast the ballot.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: However, you can signify your desire by rising vote, if you prefer. Those in favor of this motion please stand up. (Everybody stood up.) The ballot is cast. The Secretary General is elected. Mr. A. Howard Clark is elected Secretary General. (Applause.)

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Mr. President General and Compatriots of the Sons of the American Revolution, I thank you.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The next is the office of Treasurer General.

Judge BEARDSLEY, of Connecticut: Mr. President General, I take pleasure in nominating for that office for another year the present efficient Treasurer General, John H. Burroughs, of New York; and if there are no other nominations to be presented I ask consent of the Congress for the suspension of the rules, and that the Secretary General be directed to cast one ballot for him for that office.

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is moved and seconded, first, that our next Treasurer General be Mr. John H. Burroughs, of New York city, the present incumbent, and that in the event of no other nominations the ballot be taken and the Secretary General cast one vote for Mr. Burroughs as Treasurer General. Are there any other nominations? If not, all those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: The ballot is cast for Mr. Burroughs as Treasurer General.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Mr. Burroughs has been elected Treasurer General. Now, the next is Registrar General.

Mr. JENKS, of Illinois: Mr. President General, I nominate for that office the present incumbent, and I move that the nominations be closed.

A MEMBER: I second the nomination.

Another MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It has been moved and seconded that Mr. A. Howard Clark, the present incumbent, be nominated for the position of Registrar General; that the nominations be closed and, I presume, that the President cast one ballot. All those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ballot is cast. You have the office.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: Thanks.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The next office on the list is that of Historian General.

Mr. WALLACE McCAMANT, of Oregon: Mr. President General, I take pleasure in nominating the present Historian General, Mr. David L. Pierson, of East Orange, New Jersey; and, unless I am foreclosing Mr. Warren with another nomination, I move the nominations be closed and the Secretary General be instructed to cast the ballot.

Mr. WARREN, of Massachusetts: Mr. President General, I second the nomination of Mr. Pierson.

Mr. WEEKS, of New Jersey: Mr. President General, from New Jersey I desire to second the nomination also.

(Connecticut, Maryland, and Michigan also seconded the nomination.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It looks to me as if it were unanimous. If not, all of those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it.

(The Secretary General casts one ballot for Mr. Pierson and he is declared elected.)

The next is the office of Chaplain General, now occupied by Dr. Whitaker.

Mr. JOHN B. HUNDLEY, of Kentucky: Mr. President General, I wish to place in nomination the Rev. Richard L. McCready, Chaplain of the Kentucky Society.

A MEMBER: Mr. President General, Michigan desires to support that nomination.

Another MEMBER: Mr. Chairman, we have had an opportunity of gazing at this gentleman and I know there cannot be but one voice in regard to this. New York cordially indorses this nomination.

Mr. McCAMANT, of Oregon: Mr. President General, I move that the nominations be closed and the Secretary General be instructed to cast the ballot of the Congress for Mr. McCready.

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Gentlemen, you have heard the motion. All of those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The Rev. Mr. McCready is elected.

Rev. RICHARD LIGHTBURNE MCCREADY: Gentlemen, I just want to say that I thank the Congress very heartily, as it was an entirely unexpected honor, as the young lady said when she was asked; and I consider it a very great honor. I thank you very heartily. (Applause.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Apparently the tellers are not quite ready yet.

Mr. FRANK M. MILLS, of South Dakota: Mr. President General, I want to move a vote of thanks for the able manner in which our retiring President General has exercised the duties of his office; and I want to say that if the succeeding President General can do any more for this Society than this one has he must go some.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I don't want to be discourteous on that, but you are premature. There are still more elections to take place, and your Past President General is not quite ready to surrender the gavel.

Mr. MILLS: I know; that is all right; but I want to say that one thing this President General has done for the benefit of this Society: he has presented each State Society with a replica of Washington's hatchet, the hatchet which cut down the cherry tree, made out of the very same cherry tree (laughter) that was taken from the birthplace of Washington. The greatest regret I had in surrendering my office as President of the State Society of South Dakota was I had to give up that hatchet. I move that a vote of thanks be tendered the retiring President General.

ELECTION OF TRUSTEES.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: That vote will be considered after the installation of the new President General. Next is the election of the Trustees. The Constitution requires that there shall be one Trustee for each State. The Trustees are nominated by each State Society in its meetings or by its Board of Managers. In the event of a State Society not making such nomination, then the President of that State Society is to be elected by this Congress as the representative of that State on the Board of Trustees. I will ask the Secretary General, therefore, to read before this Congress the list of those nominations which have been made by the several State Societies.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: It is required, in order to have these nominations by State Societies legal, that they be filed with the Secretary General on or before April 17, 1915. These names were filed: Arizona, George D. Christy; Connecticut, George C. F. Williams; District of Columbia, Rear Admiral Colby M. Chester, U. S. N.; Hawaii, John Effinger; Indiana, Theodore P. Stein; Iowa, Elmer Marston Wentworth; Kentucky, Allen R. Carter; Maryland, Hon. Henry Stockbridge; Massachusetts, Moses Greeley Parker, M. D.; New Jersey, C. Symmes Kiggins; New York, Cornelius A. Pugsley; North Carolina, Clarence A. Wyche; Ohio, John McKelvey; Oklahoma, W. F. Kerr; Oregon, B. E. Sanford; Pennsylvania, Col. R. W. Guthrie; Rhode Island, Robert Perkins Brown; South Dakota, F. M. Mills; Utah, Hon. Eddy Orland Lee; Washington, Samuel Judd Holmes, M. D. A motion is in order that these persons who have been nominated be elected Trustees.

Mr. JENKS: I make the motion, and that the Secretary cast one ballot.

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It has been moved and seconded that these persons nominated be elected Trustees and the Secretary cast one ballot for them. Are you ready for the question? All in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. The ayes have it. The ballot is cast. These gentlemen are now elected as Trustees. And now as to the other State Societies.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: As to the other State Societies not noted as having entered nominees for Trustees, a motion is in order that the Presidents of those State Societies be elected Trustees.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: That is a constitutional provision.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: The Constitution reads "chosen," which means elected.

Mr. DE CAINDRY, of the District of Columbia: Mr. President General, I move that the Presidents of the State Societies who have not presented nominees for Trustee be elected Trustees of those Societies.

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It has been moved and seconded that the Presidents of those Societies which failed to make nominations be elected as Trustees for their State Societies, and that the Secretary cast the ballot. All those in favor please signify by saying aye. The ayes have it. The ballot is cast.

VOTE OF THANKS.

Col. GEORGE A. ARMES, of the District of Columbia: Mr. President General, I move that a vote of thanks be extended the noble compatriots and those who have taken such an interest in entertaining this Congress at Portland, Oregon, and that a standing vote be taken by this Association.

A MEMBER: Mr. President General, I move to amend that by including Seattle in that motion.

Colonel WOOD: Is that matter open?

Mr. JENKS, of Illinois: Mr. President General, I desire to offer the following resolution as a substitute.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: There is a motion just now before the house.

Mr. JENKS: This is a substitute, Mr. President General.

Whereas the members of the Twenty-sixth Congress of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution are deeply sensible of the hospitable courtesies which have been extended to them by the Oregon Society and its most efficient group of committees since their arrival in the beautiful City of Roses; and

Whereas Dr. John H. Boyd, Chaplain of the Oregon Society, by his stirring and patriotic address at the First Presbyterian Church, infused this Congress at the outset with an earnest spirit of devotion to our country and respect for its highest ideals; and

Whereas Mrs. H. C. Cabell and her Advisory Committee of Ladies, Mrs. James F. Ewing and her Committee on Flowers, Dr. and Mr. A. E. Rockey, the Masonic Building Association, and the Trustees

First Presbyterian Church have gratefully united in an eminently successful effort to convince the members of this Congress that they are truly welcome, and that our hosts are in cordial sympathy with the purposes of this organization: now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Congress is deeply appreciative of the courtesies and hospitalities which have been so generously showered upon its members, and which have contributed so signally to the comfort and pleasure of the delegates and to the success of this Congress.

Judge BEARDSLEY, of Connecticut: Mr. President General, I second the substitute. Mr. President, I move its adoption.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Is that accepted as a substitute?

Colonel ARMES: It is.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The motion is made and accepted as a substitute for the other motion. Are you ready for the question? Those in favor—and I think that owing to the courtesies that we have received they are entitled to a rising vote—

Mr. WEEKS, of New Jersey (interrupting): Mr. President General, I think the Committee on Decorations, Mr. Sanford, should have been included in that.

Mr. JENKS: I have a motion in reference to that.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Those in favor please signify by rising. (Everybody rose.) It is unanimous.

Mr. JENKS: Mr. President General, in this connection I want to voice what has been in the mind of every delegate who sat in this hall, and that is our admiration for the patriotic decorations which beautify this most attractive auditorium. We are indebted for the patriotic draping of the red, white, and blue to the Committee on Decorations, of which Compatriot B. E. Sanford is chairman, who personally supplied as his gift of love to this Society all the flags and streamers which we see all around us. I move, therefore, that we extend to Compatriot Sanford and his committee a vote of thanks for furnishing us this demonstration of beauty to our flag. (Applause.)

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Are you ready for the question? All of those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. It is unanimously carried.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: I move a vote of thanks to Vice-President General Fernberger for presenting the Washington Guard flag.

A MEMBER: I second the motion.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: It is moved and seconded that Vice-President General Fernberger receive the thanks of this Society for the presentation of the Washington Guard banner. Are you ready for the question? Those in favor please signify by saying aye; contrary minded, no. Will you please transmit to Vice-President General Fernberger the thanks of the Society? Now, are there any other motions? It looks to me as if our tellers are ready.

RESULTS OF ELECTION OF VICE-PRESIDENTS GENERAL.

Mr. WENTWORTH: Mr. President General, your tellers are ready to report the results of election. Total number of votes cast, seventy-two. Mr. Perkins has twenty-eight, Mr. Wood has sixty-six, Mr. Punderson has seventy, Mr. Boardman has sixty, Mr. Holmes has sixty-three, Mr. Park has sixty-four, Mr. Mills has fourteen, and there are three scattered.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Then what is the result?

Mr. WENTWORTH: The result is that Compatriots Wood, Punderson, Boardman, Holmes, and Park have received a majority of the votes cast.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: I therefore declare the following gentlemen elected Vice-Presidents General: Wood, Punderson, Boardman, Holmes, and Park. There are five of them, and therefore it will not be necessary to take another ballot; but I will ask those gentlemen or their representatives to step up to the platform, in order that their order of precedence may be determined. The Constitution requires that it shall be determined by lot, and I will name Mr. De Caidry as the one to hold the hat and see that the drawings are properly made.

Mr. WENTWORTH: The gentlemen that nominated the successful candidates are the ones to make the drawings.

(The drawing was here conducted, resulting in the following order: Mr. Punderson, of Massachusetts, drew first place; Colonel Wood, of Idaho, drew second place; Dr. Holmes, of Washington, drew third place; Mr. Boardman, of Tennessee, drew fourth place; Mr. Park, of Utah, drew fifth place.)

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: The order of their precedence, therefore, will be read out by the Secretary General.

The SECRETARY GENERAL: The order of the Vice-Presidents General is as follows: Henry S. Punderson, of Massachusetts; Lieut. Col. M. W. Wood, of Idaho; Dr. Samuel Judd Holmes, of Washington State; Mr. William K. Boardman, of Nashville, Tenn., and Samuel C. Park, of Utah.

INSTALLATION OF PRESIDENT GENERAL WOODWORTH.

The PRESIDENT GENERAL: Now, gentlemen, we have reached that point in our proceedings when the duty devolves upon me to install my successor with the insignia and the regalia of office, and I want to assure you that I appreciate fully and sincerely the courtesy which you have shown to me during my two years of office, the kindness with which you have listened to my suggestions, to my many addresses, and to congratulate you upon having selected as your President General one who in every way is well fitted to fill that office. I am sure that he will do it way beyond your fondest hopes. Mr. Woodworth, as my successor, it is a great pleasure to me to transfer to you this badge of office, which goes from one President General to another. It is the property of the organization, and in placing it around your neck you then are the President General of this Society, properly installed. (Applause.)

In addition, our By-Laws determine how the badge shall be worn, but they very wisely leave to the discretion of the President General those little niceties in dress which shall determine whether or not he wears it pendant from the breast ribbon or the neck ribbon or from the broad sash which, on certain occasions, is worn only with full dress. It is therefore my great pleasure to hand over to you that broad sash which accompanies only the full-dress suit. I, in addition, turn over to you the gavel, the emblem of office, which has just been presented to the Society by the Oregon Society, with the absolute certainty that your decisions will be as just and as true and as correct as those of any human being that ever lived.

I want to thank you and congratulate you upon your election.

President General WOODWORTH: Thank you, Mr. President. (Applause.) Gentlemen, is there any further business to come before this meeting now?

THANKS TO RETIRING PRESIDENT GENERAL.

A MEMBER: Mr. President General, representing the rank and file of this Society, I wish to propose a vote of thanks to the retiring President General for his unselfish efforts, his patriotism, and his high devotion to high ideals in that office.

Another MEMBER: I second the motion.

President General WOODWORTH: The President General is pleased that the first motion officially that he has to put to this body is one of that character. Are you ready for the question? All in favor of that motion will signify in the usual manner; contrary minded, no. Mr. Thruston, on behalf of the National Society assembled in Congress, I wish to tender you the thanks they, as a body, have officially conveyed to me to extend to you.

Mr. THRUSTON: Thank you very much indeed, and I thank my compatriots for their kindness.

ADJOURNMENT.

President General WOODWORTH: I think a motion would be in order to adjourn for an adjourned patriotic meeting at San Francisco on Saturday, July 24.

Mr. WENTWORTH: Mr. President General, I move you, sir, that this Congress now be declared closed for business, to be reconvened at San Francisco on Saturday, at the place designated by the California Society, for patriotic purposes only.

President General WOODWORTH: Before putting that motion I would ask that the Trustees of the State Societies remain in this room upon adjournment, so that we immediately may have a meeting of that Board to take action on such matters as may come before it. The chair will call the meeting of the Board of Trustees immediately following the adjournment of this meeting. The motion to adjourn is now before the house. It has been seconded. All in favor of that motion will signify in the usual manner. The Congress stands adjourned.

A. HOWARD CLARK,
Secretary General.

MINUTES OF MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, JULY 19, 1915.

[The Executive Committee held an informal conference at the Arlington Club, Portland, Oregon, at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, July 18, 1915, following a luncheon given to the committee by the President General. Those present were Mr. Thruston, Mr. Henry, Mr. Wentworth, and Mr. Woodworth of the committee, Secretary General Clark, Past President General Beardsley, President McCamant of the Oregon Society, Col. George V. Lauman of Illinois; also Secretary Perkins and Mr. Munsell, who conferred with the committee in regard to functions to take place at San Francisco.]

At 9 o'clock Monday morning, July 19, the President General, Mr. Henry, Mr. Wentworth, and Mr. Woodworth, members of the Executive Committee, with the Secretary General, were duly called together at the Hotel Portland. The President General presided. It was voted to formally ratify and adopt the recommendations and resolutions considered by the committee at an informal conference on July 18 as follows:

The minutes of the committee meeting on November 20, 1914, were approved as printed in Official Bulletin of December, 1914.

Amendments proposed to Article III of the By-Laws relating to appointment of committees and to Article XV relating to badges were formulated and approved for presentation to the Board of Trustees at a meeting to be held this day, at 9.30 o'clock a. m., for action by the new Board on July 20. (For text of amendments, see minutes of Board meeting of July 20.)

It was voted to recommend that the Trustees approve the following resolution for adoption by the Annual Congress:

Resolved, That the President General be, and is hereby, instructed to appoint at the opening of the adjourned session of the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress a Committee on Resolutions, to which all resolutions offered in the Congress shall be referred for consideration.

It was voted that an additional appropriation of not to exceed $150 be made for the work of the Committee on Information for Aliens during the past year, and that an additional appropriation of not to exceed $50 be made for printing and distributing the OFFICIAL BULLETIN from June, 1914, to March, 1915.

It was voted to recommend to the Trustees the insertion in the standard application blanks of a request for the names, dates of birth, and residences of the children and grandchildren of applicants for membership, as suggested by the Massachusetts Society.

The action of the committee, taken by correspondence, making appropriations for the maintenance of the Society from the third Monday in May to the third Monday in July, 1915, in the same proportions as for the last year was ratified and approved.

The Executive Committee approved a recommendation of the Michigan Society that the State Societies and the Annual Congress of the National Society adopt the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be petitioned to authorize and direct the publication in permanent form, by counties and minor civil divisions, of the names of the heads of families at the second census of the United States in 1800 in the States of Delaware, New Jersey, Georgia, and other territory where the original lists of the 1790 census have been destroyed.

It was voted to recommend the adoption by the Annual Congress of a resolution presented by the Committee on a National Archives Building, as follows:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution be instructed, at such time as it may deem expedient, to urge upon the Congress of the United States the appropriation of a sum sufficient for the purchase of a suitable site for a National Archives Building in the City of Washington and for the early construction thereof.

It was voted to recommend the adoption by the Congress of a resolution to be offered by the District of Columbia Society delegation, pursuant to a vote of that Society, calling upon the Federal Congress to provide for the publication of a summary digest of the claims of the 78,000 pensioners of the Revolution.

Acting upon a recommendation from the Michigan Society, it was Resolved, That as a means of arousing a greater interest in the work of the Sons of the American Revolution there should be a general campaign for the organization of Local Chapters.

There being no further business, the meeting then adjourned.

A. HOWARD CLARK,

MINUTES OF MEETING OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES, JULY 19, 1915.

A meeting of the Board of Trustees, duly called by direction of the President General, was held at Masonic Hall, Portland, Oregon, at 9.30 o'clock a. m., Monday, July 19, 1915. Those present were President General Thruston, presiding; Vice-President General Wood, Secretary General Clark, Mr. Chancellor L. Jenks of Illinois, Mr. Elmer

M. Wentworth of Iowa, Mr. Albert M. Henry of Michigan, Mr. Wallace McCamant of Oregon, Dr. Samuel Judd Holmes of Washington State, and others.

The minutes of the meeting of the Board at Syracuse, N. Y., on May 19, 1914, were approved.

It was voted to ratify and approve the recommendations of the Executive Committee (a) as to the appointment of a Committee on Resolutions, (b) as to the insertion on blanks of a request for the names of children and grandchildren of applicants, (c) as to the publication of portions of 1800 census, (d) as to petition for appropriation for National Archives Building, and (e) as to publication of digest of pension claims.

Proposed amendments to Articles III and XV of the By-Laws, recommended by the Executive Committee, were duly submitted and referred to the next meeting of the Board for action, as required by Article XVIII of the By-Laws. (For text of the amendments, see Board meeting of July 20.)

There being no further business, the meeting then, at 9.55 o'clock, adjourned.

A. HOWARD CLARK,

MINUTES OF MEETING OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES, JULY 20, 1915.

A meeting of the Board of Trustees elected at the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress, duly called by the President General, was held at Masonic Hall, Portland, Oregon, July 20, 1915, immediately after the adjournment of said Congress. Those present were President General Newell B. Woodworth, presiding; Vice-Presidents General M. W. Wood, U. S. A., of Idaho and Samuel Judd Holmes, M. D., of Washington State; Secretary General A. Howard Clark of Washington City; Chaplain General Rev. Richard L. McCready, D. D., of Kentucky; Trustees Elmer M. Wentworth of Iowa, Eddy Orland Lee of Utah, Chancellor L. Jenks of Illinois, H. M. Bushnell of Nebraska, B. E. Sanford of Oregon, and others.

The Trustees considered invitations from the New Jersey Society, the Tennessee Society, and the South Dakota Society to hold the Twenty-seventh Annual Congress in those States, and the thanks of the Board were extended therefor.

On motion, it was voted that the invitation from the New Jersey Society to hold the Congress of 1916 at Newark be accepted with thanks.

The President General nominated the following members of the Executive Committee and the Trustees approved and confirmed the same: The President General, chairman; R. C. Ballard Thruston, Past President General; Albert M. Henry of Michigan, Elmer M. Wentworth of Iowa, Chancellor L. Jenks of Illinois, Wallace McCamant of Oregon, and John Lenord Merrill of New Jersey.

It was voted that the usual contribution of $500 be authorized to be paid by the Treasurer General toward the expenses of the Twenty-seventh Annual Congress at Newark, N. J., in 1916.

An appropriation of $2,250, or so much thereof as may be necessary, was voted for printing and distributing the OFFICIAL BULLETIN during the present Society year.

An appropriation of $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, was voted for the publication of the National Year Book for 1915, under the usual editorship of the Secretary General.

It was voted that the Executive Committee be empowered to make appropriations for such expenses as may be proper to be incurred in furthering the work of the Society.

Acting upon proposed amendments to the By-Laws, recommended by the Executive Committee and duly presented at a meeting of the Board of Trustees on July 19, the following amendments were adopted:

Amend Article III (President General), section 2, of the By-Laws to read as follows:

SECTION 2. He shall appoint the following committees:

Committee on Resolutions.

Memorial Committee.

Committee on Organization.

Committee on Education.

The duties of the above committees shall be such as usually pertain to committees of like character.

He may also appoint such other committees as in his judgment may be deemed necessary or desirable.

Amend Article XV (Insignia), section 1, second paragraph, to read as follows:

The President General, during his term of office and while acting in that capacity on official and ceremonial occasions, shall wear the distinctive badge of his office. It may be carried at the left breast or suspended from the neck-ribbon. In full dress he shall wear a sash of the Society colors, three and one-half inches in width, extending from the right shoulder to the left hip, with the badge pendant at the crossing of the sash over the hip.

Further amend Article XV of the By-Laws by adding a new section, as follows:

SECTION 3. The badge of the Society may be purchased by members in accordance with the following agreement, to be signed by the purchasing member before delivery of same:

In purchasing the badge of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, I hereby agree that it will be worn or used in accordance with the regulations of the Society; that I will not pledge, part with, or transfer the same except with the written authority of the Society. It is further agreed for myself, heirs, executors, administrators, and any and all persons asserting any claim through me, that upon demand of the Society and tender of the purchase price of said badge, or other regalia, the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution shall be entitled to immediate possession thereof.

It was voted that the Executive Committee be empowered to act on such matters referred to the Board of Trustees by the Congress, or such new business as, in the judgment of the President General, may not require the action of a meeting of the Board.

The Secretary General was directed to add to the standard application blanks a request for the names of the children and grandchildren of applicants, as recommended by the Massachusetts Society.

There being no further business to come before the Board, the meeting then adjourned.

A. HOWARD CLARK,
Secretary General.

MINUTES OF MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
JULY 21, 1915.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, duly called by the President General, was held on the steamer Undine at 2 o'clock p. m. July 21, 1915, when the members of the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress were the guests of the Oregon Society on an automobile ride up the Columbia River highway to Bonneville and a sail down the river to Portland. Those present at the meeting were: President General Newell B. Woodworth, Past President General R. C. Ballard Thruston, Mr. Albert M. Henry of Michigan, Mr. E. M. Wentworth of Iowa, Mr. Wallace McCamant of Oregon, and Mr. Chancellor L. Jenks, members of the committee; also Vice-President General Henry F. Punderson of Massachusetts and Secretary General Clark.

Appropriations for maintenance and for carrying on the patriotic work of the Society were voted, as follows:

For the Committee on Americanization and Aliens (formerly Committee on Information for Aliens), $750.

For miscellaneous expenses of National committees, $150.

For continuance of the preparation of a memorial volume on the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, as authorized by the Executive Committee November 20, 1914, such amount as the President General may deem necessary and advisable.

For salary of Secretary General, $75 per month (increased from $50), and for salary of Registrar General, $50 per month.

For expenses of assistance, or an assistant to the Secretary General and Registrar General, $600.

For necessary traveling expenses of the Secretary General in attendance at the Annual Congress and meetings of the Executive Committee and Trustees, subject to the approval of the President General.

It was voted that appropriations heretofore made for the erection of a tablet at the birthplace of Admiral John Paul Jones in Scotland and for a Sons of the American Revolution tablet in the Washington Monument be rescinded, these projects being found impracticable.

The President General was authorized to transmit to the President of the United States certain resolutions adopted by the Congress in regard to the American School Peace League, etc., with a suitable letter and exhibits.

A resolution, submitted to the Congress by Mr. Bushnell of Nebraska, on the study of history in schools, referred to the Executive Committee by the Congress, was referred to the Committee on Education for consideration and report.

A resolution concerning an alleged historic desk said to have been removed from the Department of State was pending to learn the facts in the case [and it was later ascertained that the desk in question was new in 1873 and considered of no special historic value].

The Secretary General was authorized to have printed the usual edition of 800 copies of the National Year Book for 1915 for the customary official distribution and 200 extra copies; also such additional number of copies as may be subscribed for by State Societies and Chapters, at 25 cents per copy delivered in bulk, provided orders be placed prior to October 1 or before the work be put to press, notice to such effect to be issued by the Secretary General; single copies of the book sent to individuals to be sold at 50 cents per copy.

The committee voted its unanimous thanks to the President, local committees, and members of the Oregon Society for their generous hospitality in entertaining the delegates and guests of the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress.

The President General, Secretary General, and Mr. John Lenord Merrill were appointed a committee to inquire into the feasibility of securing supplies of rosettes in the United States rather than by importation from Europe.

The President General was authorized, at any time when he shall so desire, to submit by mail or telegraph any matter requiring the action of the Executive Committee to the several members thereof, and that any vote so taken by mail or telegraph shall have the same force and effect as if the Executive Committee had been convened in special session and action taken at such specially called meeting.

There being no further business, the committee then, at 3 o'clock, adjourned.

A. HOWARD CLARK,
Secretary General.

BANQUET AT PORTLAND IN HONOR OF THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

Given by the Oregon Society, at the Hotel Portland, on the Evening of July 20, 1915, to the Officers, Delegates, Visitors, and Ladies Accompanying Them.

Mr. Wallace McCamant, President of the Oregon Society, presided.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: I will ask Dr. J. H. Boyd, the Chaplain of the Oregon Society, to open the banquet with grace.

Rev. J. H. BOYD: Almighty God, our heavenly Father, we humble ourselves unto Thy hand, recognizing Thy place in our lives as individuals and as citizens of our great Republic. We rejoice in the fellowship of this hour, and we pray that Thou wouldst bind Thy sons and Thy daughters together in all earnest endeavors to perpetuate within our people the great faith and the noble purposes which have ever marked this Society; and we ask this, together with the forgiveness of our sins; through Thy holy Son, Jesus Christ. Amen.

Toastmaster McCamant called the banquet to attention with three raps of the gavel.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: I propose the immortal memory of George Washington.

(The toast was responded to by the banqueters.)

Toastmaster McCAMANT: I propose the President of the United States.

(Said toast was likewise responded to by the banqueters.)

Toastmaster McCAMANT: Be seated.

After the banquet speeches were made as follows:

Toastmaster McCAMANT: We will now be favored with a song, "The Sword of Bunker Hill," by Mr. Dom Zan, who so well rendered "The Star Spangled Banner" on Sunday evening. (Applause.)

Mr. Dom Zan thereupon rendered said song, which was encored.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS BY TOASTMASTER.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: Mr. President General, Mr. President General-elect, Mrs. Clark, representative of our sister society, the Daughters of the American Revolution, Compatriots, and Honored Guests, I wish I could find words to tell you how much the Oregon Society appreciates your presence in our midst. Your coming here has given us all a season that will be remembered so long as we live, as one of the delightful experiences of our lives; and, furthermore, you have given an inspiration to the Oregon Society and to her sister societies in this part of the Union in their great patriotic work. I am sure that we shall be better Americans, and that we shall render a better service to our country after the month of July, 1915. (Applause.)

Thanks to the suggestion of our retiring President General, we had here on the fifth of July a notable celebration of our National Holiday. I wish you could have been present, all of you, and could have seen that great stadium, a few blocks west of where we are assembled tonight, thronged and crowded with the representatives of all of the civic and patriotic organizations; with many Americans of native birth; but, best of all, that great gathering of men of foreign birth who came there to do honor to the flag that we love and to pledge allegiance to this Constitution which has come down to us from our fathers. Ten days later it was our privilege to welcome into our midst the most precious political relic in all the world, and I have never seen the people of any city show as much enthusiasm in any patriotic enterprise as that displayed by the people of this community when Liberty Bell was in our midst. (Applause.) And now, to cap the climax, it has been our high privilege to receive this Congress of Sons of the American Revolution, and our hearts have all been inspired as we have sat in the Congress from day to day and have seen these men who have honored their country by valiant service in its hour of need bring in its national colors, which we have all received at attention and with salute. The whole season has been one of inspiration to us, and it will long linger in our memories as one of the happiest associations of our lives.

I want to express my appreciation of the devotion to the work of the National Society, which has brought some of you from the other side of the continent. You have borne the burden of a long trip, in a season of business depression and at a time of the year when travel by rail is by no means pleasant. And I also want to thank the members of our sister societies in this part of the Union. From the time when we started to bring the Congress to Portland, two years ago, down to the present time, our sister societies in Washington, Idaho, Montana, and Utah have stood loyally with us, shoulder to shoulder. These societies have been well represented in this Congress. And I thank you all, compatriots, for coming here and making the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress of the Society a success. (Applause.)

I hold in my hand a hatchet made from a wild cherry tree which grew at Wakefield, Va., the birthplace of George Washington. The hatchet is in the form used in the Colonial days; and I am glad to have this opportunity of publicly thanking, on behalf of the Oregon Society, its distinguished donor, Mr. R. C. Ballard Thruston, our retiring President General. (Applause.) He has placed us still further in his debt by giving to each one of us the favorite song sung by the Revolutionary soldiers and by the patriots in Revolutionary times. But I will let him tell you about that himself.

[A facsimile of the Revolutionary song referred to by the Toastmaster was presented in pamphlet form to each banqueter with the compliments of Mr. Thruston. It is reproduced with words and music from the "Singing Master's Assistant." The words, written by William Billings in 1778, are set to the long-meter tune of "Chester." "It was

ADDRESS BY MR. THRUSTON.

MR. R. C. BALLARD THRUSTON: Mr. Toastmaster, Mr. President General, Mrs. Clark, the worthy representative of the charming President of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Compatriots, Ladies, and Invited Guests, when I approved the program for this banquet I noted there were to be the customary addresses from the President General and others. Knowing that my successor would then be installed in office, I assumed that his name would be substituted for mine; that your committee thought I was about talked out anyhow and needed a rest. No one wants to hear from the retiring President General, for his light has been extinguished; they all want to hear from the incoming one. But your committee graciously thought otherwise, and President McCamant has kindly dug up a topic for me as an Indian digs up his hatchet, merely to prove that I have not reached my limit.

Some years ago, in preparing for the Louisville Congress, the thought occurred to me that to have a hatchet in lieu of the ordinary gavel to open the Congress with would be a pleasant reminder of a very pretty piece of fiction about the Father of Our Country, so I wrote to our Secretary General and asked him to bring one with him. All of us have walked down Pennsylvania Avenue and seen them by the thousands. Well, the Secretary General went there to get one for me, and, bless my soul, it just so happened that along that whole avenue there wasn't a single one for sale. I had made no preparation for a gavel, and when he landed in Louisville he told me what he had done. So President General Marble had to use his knuckles until I found a substitute. I made up my mind, however, that I would have a hatchet-gavel. It took me two years to get a log of wild cherry from Wakefield, the birthplace of George Washington (and I am very proud to be able to say that it was one of my ancestors that originally patented the property on which Wakefield stands). Then I obtained from Mr. Clark a drawing giving the size and design of the hatchets used in Washington's boyhood, and this hatchet is made of the same design, the same size, the same style in everything except that it is wild cherry instead of steel and has on its face a little silver plate. One has been given to each of our State Societies, and I don't believe that there is anything that I could have given them that would have cost less and been more appreciated. (Laughter.) I have gotten a tremendous amount of advertising for a very few cents. (Laughter.)

But now for another matter. You all know that I come from Kentucky. The gentlemen here have appreciated certain little products of Kentucky immensely, especially after a long, dusty motor ride. Many of our army officers have found other products of Kentucky extremely useful, especially in warfare; but I think that all of us appreciate the third product of Kentucky far more than we do the others, and from the looks of the assemblage in this room I should say that we ought to be in Kentucky, because you are fully up to the standard of Kentucky's greatest reputation—her fine women. (Applause.)

I thank you. (Applause.)

REMARKS BY THE TOASTMASTER.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: There has been some difference of opinion at the speakers' table, ladies and gentlemen, as to who is President General for the purposes of this banquet. Mr. Thruston has very strenuously insisted all the evening that he was no longer President General; but, very fortunately for us, the question is an academic and not a practical one, because the first speaker on our program is the President General. The first speaker on our toast list is the President General, and Mr. Thruston is not. We had expected to hear from him on the subject, "The Present Problem for Patriots," but now that he is President General he will probably want to say some other things. We will be very glad to hear from him on any subject. I take very great pleasure in introducing Mr. Newell B. Woodworth, of Syracuse. (Applause.)

ADDRESS BY MR. WOODWORTH.

Mr. NEWELL B. WOODWORTH: Mr. Toastmaster, Mr. Past President General, Mrs. Clark, Honorary Vice-President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Distinguished Guests, Ladies, and Compatriots, I made the remark in Seattle that I felt there the force of the old Roman thought—that though one might change skies, yet the heart remains unchanged—and I feel doubly so since I have been in Portland, for though I have changed the skies of the East for those of the West, I feel no change of heart. Your active patriotism, your cordial hospitality and warm welcome, will make any American feel at home in your midst.

Though I have been but a short time in Oregon, I feel already inclined to place considerable reliance on that little couplet,

Where a dollar grows to twenty." (Laughter.)

In fact, should I remain much longer with you I feel as though I should not be so loyal perhaps to my East, and I might add a couplet of my own:

Oregon, a land of roses and of joys,
Where Easterners become Western boys. (Applause.)

I consider that it has been very appropriate that this Congress should have been presided over by one who bears the name of the illustrious patriot in American history, whose name will always be associated with the winning of the West, Gen. George Rogers Clark. (Applause.) And particularly is Oregon, and all of this region, associated with that name, because it was a younger brother that threw open the door of Oregon, representing the duly acquired sovereignty of the United States through the Louisiana Purchase in 1805. So it seemed appropriate indeed that this first Congress west of the Rocky Mountains should have been presided over by our retiring President General.

We are assembled here tonight beneath the Stars and Stripes to pay humble homage to those ancestors of the past whose devotion to principle rendered possible our privileges of today. I cannot address you as fellow-neighbors, but I can as fellow-American citizens and American women, beneath that one flag that represents today more than ever before in the history of the world the spirit of civilization and of humanity for all the world.

There are one or two matters that I would call to your attention as President General and ask that your interest during the year should be directed toward those. The first is the Archives Building in Washington. Those of you who have attended the Congress have heard of the unfortunate condition surrounding our public archives at Washington, and it will require the effort of every one in this room during the coming year, and probably for several years, to secure action on the part of Congress to properly provide a suitable building to house those records and render them available to those seeking information. (Applause.)

Again, today the subject of education was brought up in the Congress. This is another feature that I would invite your attention to. Today there are over two million people who are working at night. They have no opportunity of attending our night schools. It is very essential that there should be provision made for the opening of night schools in the day, if I may state it that way, so that those who are laboring at night may have the advantage of attending these schools during the daytime when they are at liberty. Education lies at the foundation of our Republic. I never can forget the words upon the frieze of the outer walls of the Boston Public Library, that "Education is the safeguard of the Republic."

Then there is Americanization Day, a movement which I believe is destined to become permanent and in which I believe this Society should be among the very foremost advocates, if not the very leader, as it touches the very principles upon which this Republic stands.

I wish to pay a tribute to the ladies who are present with us. Many of them are Daughters of the American Revolution, and why should they not be with us? For where do we find the American spirit shown more keenly, more enduring, than in the women of this country? (Applause.) Never has a crisis arisen from the days of the Revolution down to the present time but what woman has been foremost in her self-sacrifices for the Republic. She has had none of the glory of war, but all the suffering, all the suspense, all without any of the excitement; and I feel as long as American womanhood stands as it has throughout our history that there will be no danger of this Republic coming down to a principle which represents "peace at any price." (Applause.)

Americanization Day I believe is becoming more important in the last decade than ever before. A tidal wave now has been sweeping for years upon our shores, bringing an invading host, such as the world has never seen before—invaders not by force of arms, but by peaceful means, seeking wealth and opportunity not by open warfare, but by means of opportunity. For a decade they have been coming at the rate of a million a year, sufficient in number to repopulate all of New England and all of your great Northwest; people ignorant of our language, ignorant of the institutions that are represented in this country by centuries of Anglo-Saxon struggle and bloodshed. I used the word decade advisedly, because it is in about this period of time that the character of our immigration has changed. Formerly it was Teutonic in blood, Protestant in religion. The English, Scotch, Irish, Germans, Dutch, and Swedes two thousand years ago were one Germanic race along the North Sea. It was among those people that the Protestant Reformation began and taught and prepared them for the doctrines of individual liberty and constitutional government. It is an easy step from the belief that one has direct access to God through conscience, and that the individual has direct contact with the material forms of government that presupposes it rests on the individual and derives hence its life and force. "If the truth shall make ye free, ye shall be free indeed," taught the great Master. The didactic sermons of Martin Luther and John Calvin were as responsible for the Revolution of 1776 as were the fiery orations of James Otis and Patrick Henry, and the Swiss and German peasantry of the fifteenth century in receiving those doctrines of religious freedom as were the colonists of Massachusetts and Virginia three centuries later in receiving the doctrines of political freedom. The cry of the charging Cromwellian army at Dunbar was, "Let God arise and let His enemies be scattered"; and these words sound an echo in those at Lexington a century and a quarter later, in these words: "Stand your ground, men; don't fire unless fired upon; but if they mean to have war, let it begin here." (Applause.)

Such was the ancestry of our immigrants until a few years ago when the evolution began. Draw a line across Europe from the southwest to the northeast and you will separate the Teutonic race from Latin, Slavic, Mongolian, and Semitic. On one side you will find a more or less representative form of government; on the other absolutism governs a subject people. On the one side is liberal education; on the other is illiberal education. On one hand is a manufacturing section; the other is agricultural; one the home of former immigrants, the other the land of immigrants of today. From this latter class of people three-quarters of a million have been coming here annually for the last decade, until interrupted by the war, and probably that is only a temporary cessation, who were absolutely heterogeneous, mentally and physically, to our race; and these are being thrust into the delicate fabric of our self-government, to be of necessity as completely assimilated in spirit as their bodies are physically by the country, if we are to preserve our priceless heritage.

Washington said: "The price of liberty is eternal vigilance." Is there one here who will deny the correctness of that assertion?

The foundations of a democracy are based upon the character of the people composing it. This character rests upon intelligence, self-reliance, and patriotism in the broadest sense. The virile spirit of those who first came to these shores for freedom of worship has been sufficient hitherto to successfully meet this problem of assimilation under physical conditions and racial origin. I say physical conditions, because the physical conditions have changed as much as have the racial characteristics. The wave of immigration that swept across the Alleghanies to the great Mississippi Valley, to the Northwest, and to your Pacific coast has filled its mission of populating the public lands. The march across the continent has ended, and now the undertow of that wave in its tenacious grasp is drawing back those people by the thousands into the maelstrom of the great cities to form racial communities of which Washington sagaciously foresaw the danger when he said: "They retained their own language, habits, good or bad." And even that apostle of democracy, Thomas Jefferson, characterized them as being "a heterogeneous, incoherent, distracted mass" in our body politic.

You all know these racial communities in the great cities that you are familiar with, communities having their own places of business, of worship, of amusement, fraternal and benevolent organizations, and customs of living. The adults have no direct contact with the American by birth. Even the children in many instances are cut off from any direct contact with American children by attending parochial schools instead of public schools. (Applause.) To reach these people is the duty of every patriot and every one having the welfare of this Republic at heart. The individual conscience becomes undistinguishable in masses, even as the individual becomes undistinguishable in a vast mob, and then the opinion of the mass, swayed by clamor or sudden emotion, supersedes the individual judgment as to right or wrong. This is a dangerous bank of fog that looms up ahead. As that far-seeing and friendly critic of ours, James Bryce, states: "That there is ground for anxiety in this vast growing multitude of men, ignorant and apt to be misled, cannot be denied."

These people are reachable, because as a rule they are people of character. It requires character to leave native land and its association of home and relatives to seek a new home in a foreign and strange land. This statement any worker among these people will corroborate. Perhaps the sentiment of some of these people has been expressed vividly in the words of one of them: "The past was only my cradle, and now it won't hold me, because I have outgrown it. No; it is not that I belong to the past, but the present belongs to me. America is the youngest of nations and inherits all that has gone before in history, and I am the youngest of America's children, and into my veins goes all of her priceless heritage, from the last star spied through the telescope to the last great thought of the philosopher. Mine is a shining future." People holding such sentiments are fitting component parts of a democracy and are reachable. They are eager to avail themselves, if chance is but afforded, to become one of us. They are eager to learn, but we have not given them the opportunity. We have not held out to them any welcome. We have not thought to impress upon them the value of the franchise which they have received, nor to impress upon them observance of the controlling law where each is sovereign, yet each is subject to the controlling law.

I am an optimist. I do not believe the future is so dark. The trouble lies rather in our neglect to meet the situation than in our inability to do so; but thinking men are beginning to realize the problem, beginning to take some steps to counteract these evil effects. Our naturalization laws are becoming more stringent. Our judges are exercising greater discretion, and the general public are awakening to the seriousness of the problem. Americanization Day was an example of the awakening of the interests of the public, and I consider I never wore the badge of this Society with greater honor than when I wore it as a presiding officer over such a meeting of four thousand people on the Fourth of July. (Applause.)

The spirit of seventy-six is as vital today as when it gave strength and courage to our forefathers. They solved their problems because they were inspired with the spirit of right, and right is but justice applied to humanity. They were obliged to appeal to the God of Battles; we but to appeal to the brotherhood of man, which is the spirit of America, and the devotion to God, that this country may always remain not only a promise, but a full realization to all humanity of equal opportunities and Christian belief. (Applause.)

Compatriots, I hope we may all do our work as we scatter from this Congress to all parts of this Union; all do our work as American citizens and as members of this organization. Do it during the coming year faithfully, courageously, and then we will feel that at least we are worthy of the badge which we are entitled to wear. I trust we may all do our humble part as patriots of the present,

"For this is the age of toiling brains,
Of victories won and broken chains,
Of men of might and men of right,
Whose heads, not hands, decide the fight." (Applause.)

REMARKS BY TOASTMASTER.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: One of the many good things that the coming of this Congress has accomplished is the bringing into closer union of the Oregon and the Washington Societies, Sons of the American Revolution, and in a spirit of fellowship with our sister Society I take very great pleasure in introducing as the next speaker of the evening the Hon. Will H. Thompson, of Seattle, who will talk to you of "The Shadow of a Flag." (Applause.)

ADDRESS BY MR. THOMPSON.

Mr. WILL H. THOMPSON: Mr. Toastmaster, the last two hours spent in the old blue-grass region of eastern Kentucky has rendered it impossible that I should call the roll of all the notables to whom I should make my bow, so that I will only say at this time, Compatriots and Ladies and Gentlemen:

All of you have heard that old maxim, that all the world loves a lover, and it is equally true that all the world loves a flag. Since men began to gather themselves into tribes and nations they have fashioned symbols to represent the public authority, and the flag has long been the favorite symbol.

For more than 5,000 years it has sheltered homes and guarded the passes of frontier lands. It has been the highest expression of power. "Terrible as an army with banners" comes the Hebrew tribute out of immemorial years. The Egyptian carved his flag in granite, where it yet holds itself affaunt, above the dust of long-forgotten kings, in tunneled tombs where no wind blows.

No other symbol has ever so appealed to men. No other insensate thing has evoked such tumults of acclaim or led such multitudes.

Just why nations, civilized and barbaric, have so loved their flags has not been written. From the time the young banner is unfurled at the birth of a nation to the last hour of national life, it is cheered as the people's gonfalon. Even long after national existence ceased the sight of the lost flag will bring a flush to manly cheeks and wet brace eyes unused to tears.

There are in Poland now, hidden in secret places, flags that waved when Sobieski was king.

I can well remember when a slim, gray-clad boy, but a few weeks over eighteen years of age, sick and wounded, trudging homeward from Appomattox, after weeks of intolerable hunger and blinding headache, and heart that ached more than the head, with three comrades, sat down in the dust and ashes of Sherman's awful path and divided a small square of bunting which one of them had torn from his regimental flag, and, hidden in his bosom, had borne it away from the field of his last despairing battle! "Foolish!" you say? "Foolish tears for a broken toy." It may be so. And yet, you should remember that they had followed it where angels might fear to tread!

How much it meant to them you will never know. The smoke of Shiloh was upon it. It was scorched with flame at the cannon's mouth in Chickamauga's splintered woods. In the Wilderness it was splashed with the best blood of the sons of those Cavaliers "who rode with

The appeal of the flags of lost nations, after no hands are left to uphold them, is powerful yet, and stirs the hearts of even us satisfied and patriotic Americans. I think, and I trust that you, ladies, will agree with me, that it would be worth a long and hard pilgrimage if, at the end thereof, one might find, folded away in some old tomb or temple, the flag that the desert warriors waved when through the Palmyrean gates Zenobia rushed upon the Roman swords and lost to Aurelian her freedom, her kingdom, and her crown.

How a flag will speak, though it has no tongue! How greatly a certain Georgia boy, now grown gray with years, would prize, and cherish, and guard and keep a foeman's flag that moved up through the breast of battle and was planted by strong hands against the flimsy log breastworks at the Bloody Angle! Upton and his heroic men brought it there.

Its folds were riddled and its staff was splintered, but it placidly waved above friend and foe alike, whose bayonets were tangled together above the works. And once the shadow of the foeman's flag fell upon the young Georgian's face, and as he looked up his heart gave a startled leap as he saw that Georgia's star was on the old banner yet! (Applause.)

Does it mean nothing that in the hour of immeasurable strain such a thought should have been born in the shadow of that flag? Was it only the delusion of a disturbed and awe-struck boyish mind? Or was it the past of the nation whispering? Were not the cheers of Ticonderoga and Yorktown, of Monterey and Chapultepec, fluttering its folds as the radiant thing stood in the shriveling mouth of hell and waved and waved?

There was something more than a martial ensign waving there—something more than the mere representation of power. Its web was the prayer of a million mothers, and its woof was precious blood and tears. Because of the memories that cling about it no man may divorce his judgment from his love for his flag.

I forego the attempt to call the roll of the fine elements that enter into the idolatrous worship of men for the flags that are the objects of their devotion, but leave that to later time and to some one equal to a loftier scholium.

A flag bespeaks a nation. If a nation stands for freedom, its flag is the emblem of liberty. If the nation stands for power only, its flag becomes the emblem of tyranny.

We Americans, proudly and, I think, with truth, honor our banner as the emblem of the truest and noblest people that ever sought to organize liberty under forms of law, dwelling apart from crowns and thrones on this "fairest side of the great round earth as it swings in the smile of God."

This spirit of nationality, well symbolized by frenzied loyalty to a nation's flag, is both a lofty and a dangerous thing. The proud pose of republic or empire that says, "Everything for our people, nothing for those beyond the border," is as wrong as it is dangerous.

This excessive spirit of nationalism is today the central fury in Europe's awful delirium. Some of the mad nations are more to blame than others, but all the great powers have been looking with hungry eyes upon lands not yet their own.

Germany has believed that she is destined to dominate the land and divide the seas. To attain that greater nationality—to extend the shadow of her flag—she has been willing to blot out the splendid civilization of Belgium, deluge Europe with blood and tears, and halt the march of civilization for a century.

And old Albion, to whom the world owes more than to any other earthly throne, has not been overmodest in her claims of empire. "Britannia rules the waves!" she cries. "England is mistress of the seas!" "The sun never sets upon her Empire!" and her boast is true, for round and round this whirling world the reveille of her drum-beat follows the flying footsteps of the morning forever.

These are the mightiest voices that come out of the sickening storm that wastes the wealth and drains the veins of Europe; but there are other cries issuing from the hideous vortex. A mighty uplifted voice, husky with polar frost, urges her sluggish sons: "On to the warm seas! On to the Persian Gulf! On to the Mediterranean!" and, like the throbbing of some monstrous heart, the never-ending tramp of Russia comes.

Gallant and martial France, the most heroic power that ever broke a lance upon the shield of nations (applause)—I am glad that you applaud that sentiment—is singing a new Marseillaise, shouting a new "Vive la France," and feeding with blood and flame a new and stronger nationality.

To widen her domains, Italy is crowding over the Alps and the Isonzo; and Turkey, with black and heathen hand, is clutching the skirts of Christian Europe, striving by desperate battle to hold the lands torn from Christian kings with ruthless ravin long ago.

From Mecca to Victoria, from Venice to Archangel, the nations, in the cause of greater nationality, are feeding their sons to the mouth of the Martian Minotaur.

"My country better than yours! My destiny greater than yours! My culture higher than yours! A place in the sun for me, but not for you!"

These are the cries that the rifles are speaking, and the cannon have thundered them until their brutal lungs are hoarse.

They drowned the wail of murdered Belgium as the roar of a storm-tossed ocean would hush the whimper of a dying child. Some day this fever of nationalism must cool. No imaginary line can make one man better than another. The shadow of no flag should be a sanctuary for one and a menace to another. Yet because of this mad spirit of nationality the earth is drinking blood with a hot thirst that no wild reveller, no Omar crying "Wine! Wine! Wine!" could ever match or mock.

This is your land and mine. Its symbol is full of meaning. The blue of heaven is upon it. It is striped with the rose red of lofty passion and the lilled white of peace.

The comrade stars assembled upon it are bound in a mighty bond of indiseverable brotherhood, and no star differs from another star in glory. Under its mighty shadow, here at the world's western gate and at the high tide of time, we stand and watch and wait.

They were few who gave our flag to the winds of freedom, but "we are many, we who hold the grim resolve to guard it well."

It shadows the richest and fairest domain that man has won from the wilderness. No better land, no realm more beautiful, has earth's thrilled bosom lifted to the sun since God began the building of the hills. We hope that the care-worn, patient man to whom we have confided its vast destinies may keep our flag in the clear sky—out of the smoke and flame of a delirious world. But whatever fate wills, we will stand by the land and its honor and under the shadow of its dauntless flag—wave where it may.

A good man hates war. It is hideous. But so long as the nations of the earth bow at the throne of power and know no other God, so long will war keep his desolating course and feed and fatten in ruined lands. The end of this world war will not terminate aggression. Whoever the victor powers may be, they will come out of the great struggle proud and militant. * * * We know that the patriotic man to whom we have intrusted our destiny is striving mightily to keep us from drifting into the Europe maelstrom and at the same time to keep our honor untarnished; but the fighting nations do not intend that he shall do both.

Our wisest and best trained men, those whose duty it is to keep a cool finger upon the fevered pulse of the world, know what is coming. Looking steadily down the vista of the coming years, they see the shadowy face of fate. With trained ears bent to the ground, they hear not only the roar of the shotted guns, but they also hear the moan that under the thunder runs. They would, if they could, save our cities from the torch and our young men from the butchery of modern war, but Congress has left us helpless. The coward cry of "Peace at any price!" paralyzes activity. (Applause.) We recoil at the proposed expenditures of two hundred millions for preparation, while we spend for pleasure automobiles alone a sum sufficient to raise and arm a half million of men and double our battle fleet.

Will the men chosen to guide us never act? Will America sleep until aroused by the roar of irresistible guns? Must the Monroe Doctrine be abandoned while the nations laugh at our helplessness? Must the Panama Canal pass to alien hands?

The past of this nation has given us warning enough and the future is eloquent with immeasurable appeal. Will not this patriotic organization lend its powerful assistance to the thousands of devoted men who are beating at the doors of our Parliament and demanding that our country shall not be the prey of robber kings, but, ringed with steel and living walls of courage, shall unfold an ever-lengthening flag to the grandest cheer that ever under-rolled the arches of immensity and back with power that lofty sentiment of the hero of our younger years—"My country! May she ever be right; but, right or wrong, my country!" (Applause and cheers.)

REMARKS BY TOASTMASTER.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: Let us all rise and give a vote of thanks for this excellent message from Mr. Thompson.

(All present rose to their feet, amidst the continuing applause.)

Toastmaster McCAMANT: When we were at Syracuse a year ago battling for this Congress, we found support from a great many sources, but of all of the Eastern delegations who turned loose to help us the one which was most zealous was the Illinois delegation. They were largely in evidence. Every man of them was a booster for Portland for the 1915 Congress. I therefore have peculiar pleasure in introducing as the next speaker on the program the President of the Illinois Society, Mr. Chancellor L. Jenks, who will speak to the sentiment of "Japhet in Search of a Forefather." (Applause.)

ADDRESS BY MR. JENKS.

MR. CHANCELLOR L. JENKS: Mr. Toastmaster, National Officers, Ladies and Gentlemen, Guests of the Oregon Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, fourscore years ago a doughty English naval officer, Captain Marryat, who wielded a pen bloodier than his sword, wrote sea stories grisly with gore and punctuated with the homicidal profanity of the fore-castle. One he entitled "Japhet in Search of a Father." It recounted in Marryat's forceful manner the hair-raising adventures of a hero under the spell of an unquenchable curiosity as to his parentage. Japhet inherited none of his father's reticence on the subject (laughter), suggestive though it was. Patiently pursuing his investigations through fire, foray, and flood, undaunted by danger or disaster, firm in the face of faithless friends, confident despite the continuous collapse of clues, unflinching in fidelity to his purpose of finding his fugitive father; he remained unaffrighted by losses or alarms, however lurid, however alliterative. In the last chapter he emerged triumphant, with a title in his teeth, an admiral in his arms. (Laughter.)

This signal success should inspire to redoubled endeavors all who aim to be Sons of the American Revolution. The pursuit of ancestors is a bra' sport. It has all the excitement of the chase without any of its uncertainty. (Laughter.) There are no blanks in the lottery. Every stone shied up your ancestral tree will at least bring down a date. (Laughter.) If thrown far enough, it may perchance disturb the slumbers of that alleged ancestor of us all, whom Matthew Arnold described as "arboreal in his habits—provided with a tail." We may not trace the sinuosity of descent as far back as did the Welsh heralds, who found ancestors not only "before Abraham was," but antedating Adam himself. We may fail at first to learn our grandmother's surname. But nil desperandum! A high-priced genealogist is worthy of his hire. (Laughter.) The higher his hire, the more gratifying the results; and if your community boasts no genealogist, an ingenious imagination will prove a satisfactory substitute. Indeed, this is the daily bread of the genealogist.

Ancestral trees are known to bear all kinds of fruit, from peaches to persimmons. Why not a lemon or a squash, or perchance a nut? (Laughter.) The proverbial bad spelling and worse penmanship of by-gone generations are the frail and worm-eaten grape-vines by which many an anthropoid of even later date than those of marked arboreal habits climbs his prehensile way to the topmost boughs of some umbrageous family tree, there to grin and chatter and throw down opprobrious cocoanut shells upon all who seek to repose in its shade. (Laughter.) My own name, written carelessly, looks something like Jones; and the Joneses have whole groves of family trees, some umbrageous and others merely "shady." (Laughter.)

We who have attained membership in an ancestral society are wont to say to each other, with some degree of complaisance, "Blood will tell." So it will. (Laughter.) Its volubility is axiomatic. (Laughter.) But this trait is sometimes a promise and sometimes a threat. Sometimes it blurts out those things we most want kept secret and is silent on the things we most wish proclaimed. From the rearward of every man's experience come rushing illustrations of blood's want of judgment in its tale-bearing. A single instance will suffice. A member of this Society and of the Chicago bar became a candidate for a judicial position. This blood of his that would tell prompted him to issue a card stating his candidacy and giving a brief sketch of his life and antecedents. It closed with this astonishing assertion: "He is of unusually fine Colonial ancestry, being descended from several of the passengers on the Mayflower." (Laughter.)

It requires only a slight mental strain to picture two of those fellow-immigrants meeting on the deck of that gigantic ocean liner and exchanging morning greetings after this fashion: "Good morrow, my lady; and how farest thou?" "First class, my good man; and thou?" "Steerage, may it please your ladyship." And thus early in American history was the fire lighted under the melting-pot.

The elusiveness of Japhet's father did not deter the hero from his search. Difficulties should never overwhelm us in our quest of martial ancestors. What if fate has tried to conceal them by naming them

Smith? Think of the acres and acres of real estate needed to supply the Smiths with the fields of glory they have won! Contemplate with gratitude and awe the mighty store of qualifications for membership in societies such as ours which the industrious forefathers of the Smiths laid up for their descendants. (Laughter.) Smiths and Joneses and Johnsons and Clarks fairly crowd the halls of fame in every age, along with the assorted colors: call them off—Green, Black, White, Gray—every hue but yellow. It sounds like the officers' roll at Valley Forge or Ticonderoga. And what shall I say of the Browns? They surpassed all of their compatriots in prolificness. Yet that was the least of their martial virtues. They supplied the artistic background of Colonial valor against which was displayed the prowess of their times. The Browns were not only valorous themselves, but the cause of valor in others. The Brown blood may not have been as blue as that of the Greens, but there was more of it. Broad and facile is the highway they have made by which their descendants ride triumphantly into our membership. (Laughter.)

As I said before, every one who plays the ancestral game is sure to draw a prize. You can't tell what it will be, but you can't help being interested, for what you draw is you yourself. Its blood courses through your veins. It is that thing which looks out through your eyes. Try to speak in your own voice. You can't do it. Some progenitor of yours sounds in every inflection. Do you pride yourself on a certain air with which you carry your cane? That isn't yours; it belongs to a ragged Colonial sentry who paced back and forth through the long hours of darkness and chill, bearing on his numbed shoulders a battered muzzle-loader. Yonder ancestor with the kindly eye prompted you to contribute to the peregrinating plate last Sunday (laughter), but that other one (he of the speculative orb) limited the amount. (Laughter.) Still another, he with the sanctimonious visage and nasal twang, instanced for your self-approval the story of the widow's mite. You begin to regard yourself as the doubtful resultant of a thousand ancestral forces contributing to make up that thing which is you. You next question your capacity for original action or thought. You see yourself an ingeniously constructed puppet spasmodically worked by invisible wires, each issuing from a grave. The trouble lies in the fact that the system of wires is in a state of permanent disrepair. You are never sure which wires are working. Mark Twain (who told all the good stories that Lincoln forgot) called on the Tsar of Russia and was invited to sit on the edge of the platform upon which the throne was placed. During their informal conversation Mark noticed a constantly increasing line of obsequious servants in uniform standing before the throne. When the line stretched across the room from wall to wall, the Tsar relieved his visitor's curiosity by saying: "It's all right, Mark, you're sitting on the push-button." (Laughter.)

It is well to be humble. We, too, may find that the only wires we can work are those which connect us with the servants' quarters.

The amateur genealogist must needs be on his guard. The path of descent is a fascinating promenade; but the trail is beset with pitfalls for the unwary. One of these is the boast of heraldry. No American has yet found the tailor who can fit him to a coat of arms. He finds it all arms and no coat—it may turn out a strait-jacket. Another lurking danger is the family motto. Nothing lends greater dignity to a family than a motto. In importance it comes next to the marriage license. It should, however, be selected with care. "Cave canem" sounds well. (Laughter.) Its American equivalent is: "You got to quit kicking my hound around." (Laughter.) As indicating royal descent, there is nothing better than "Facile descensus in averno." One of the great tobacco magnates has this singularly appropriate motto emblazoned on the doors of his automobile: "Quid rides." (Laughter.) Its English is obvious. But to the impecunious Latin professor who gave it to him, it reads: "What are you laughing at?" (Laughter.) I heard of a man who, shortly after beginning to study his family history, put the letters S. P. C. after his name on his calling cards. They looked as well as A. B., LL. D., or S. O. S. to him. In answer to inquiries, he explained, loftily, that they represented the Latin motto of his family. Several of his ancestors, he said, bore the cabalistic letters as the reward of distinguished services to the Crown, and he had therefore the right to use them himself. He said they stood for "Suspensus per collem." (Laughter.) Ignorance is bliss. Wisdom became a blister when he learned that the English of his Latin motto was: "Suspended by the neck." However, many a good race is won by a neck. (Laughter.)

I have attempted, Mr. Toastmaster, in that spirit of good-humored "raillery" which prompts vigilance committees to ride offenders out of town, to poke a little fun at the foibles and snobbery of those who fall into the error of basing claim to personal recognition on their ancestors. It's a fine thing to be descended from patriotic forefathers, provided the gradient of the descent is not too abrupt. (Laughter.) We don't want to have it said of us that we are like the potato—the best part of us under the ground. But we as members of the Sons of the American Revolution have serious responsibilities and solemn duties. These do not rest upon our descent. Our descent is merely an incident. "A man's a man for a' that." A fine descent is nothing unless it makes us decent ourselves. (Applause.) Our task is to invest the word "patriotism" with a broader meaning. It is ours to demonstrate that great truth that our forefathers builded better than they knew. It is ours to strengthen, enlarge, and beautify the superstructure which stands upon the foundation our forefathers laid. We must never cease to revere what was fine in the past. But the only fitting way to recognize and repay our debt to the past is to ennoble the living present. (Applause.)

REMARKS BY TOASTMASTER.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: We claim to have demonstrated to our guests from abroad that Portland has fine scenery, fine roses, handsome women, comfortable homes, good water, and excellent cocktails; but we can't hope to establish our right to stand in your esteem as a thoroughly up-to-date, cultured city unless we can demonstrate that we have an eloquent and tactful after-dinner speaker in our midst, and I now proceed to demonstrate that last thing in order that we may stand high in your esteem.

I take pleasure in introducing the last speaker of the evening, the representative of the Oregon Society, Mr. William D. Wheelwright, who will speak on "The Duty of the Society to the Present Generation." (Applause.)

ADDRESS BY MR. WHEELWRIGHT.

MR. WILLIAM D. WHEELWRIGHT: Mr. Toastmaster and Messieurs and Mesdames Dignitaries—a full list of whom you have had from the Toastmaster, so I will not go over them—proceeding with the somewhat somber address that I have prepared for your delectation tonight, I want to express my fatefulness to the tradition of after-dinner speaking, that whoever undertakes the task should make an attempt, at least at the beginning, to be amusing; in other words, that he should try to be funny; and that it also entails an obligation upon the audience, when a serious and honest attempt to be funny is made, to give it some recognition, even if the attempt be thought not entirely successful.

Now, with those thoughts in mind, I was prepared to tell you of my feelings at the meeting of the Oregon Society, which was the inception of this Congress and this banquet. Unfortunately, at the very beginning of this repast I overheard the Rev. Dr. Boyd telling the story to Mr. Jenks, and it was perfectly plain to me that Mr. Jenks was practicing the part of a gentleman in trying to conceal the fact that he had heard it before. So I was somewhat disheartened, but having nothing else to produce I will still mention it and hope that you here are not so familiar with the clergy as to have heard it before. (Laughter.) On that occasion of the meeting of the Oregon Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, when it appeared that there was going to be a banquet, I said to myself, in something like that language that the unlettered humorist put into the mouth of the Prophet Daniel, when he stood in the lion's den and saw the great and hungry beasts approaching for their evening meal: "Well, if there is going to be an after-dinner speech, it is pretty plain that I am not going to make it." (Laughter.) And yet by the courtesy of my friend, Mr. McCamant, here I am in the act.

Now, there is a very warm and sincere friendship that exists between my friend McCamant and myself. I am fond of him because of his splendid character, his great energy, his fine executive ability, his large-heartedness, his energy, and his tact, that have resulted in the bringing here and the carrying out of a Congress in a way that I am sure reflects great credit on the State of Oregon. (Applause.) And he is very fond of me, because he knows that I am always trying to emulate him as an orator and always failing to succeed. (Laughter.) It adds a great deal to his amour propre to be present on many occasions to witness these failures. When I speak of him no language of mine can do justice; I have to go to the great Master of thought and speech, and say:

To catch the music of his honeyed sentences.” (Laughter.)

I cannot escape a feeling of sadness as I look about on this assembled company and reflect that this is practically, if not actually, the last time that we shall ever meet together. The welcome has been spoken; the Congress has been held; the hospitalities have been extended and most felicitously and cordially accepted; all has happened as has occurred before on occasions of this kind and as doubtless will take place again in other cities and in other years. But this time at least such hospitality as we have been privileged to offer has lacked one of the essential elements of that grace of life. True hospitality must be given without hope or thought of compensation, but in this case we have already had an exceeding great reward in happy fellowship with our guests; we have increased the number of our friends; all the rest of our lives will be brighter by reason of our association with those men and women who have been one with us in thought and feeling, in appreciation of a great past that is our common heritage, in mutual congratulations on our joint possession of inestimable privileges, and (let me hope) in our realization of the dignity and the duty that it is incumbent on us to maintain and to perform. May I not believe that our warm and kindly feelings toward these our friends may have touched such chords in their hearts as shall make response in words for which I am indebted to a later immigrant than I am in this blessed land:

“Out where the smile is a little broader,
Out where the hand-clasp is a little stronger,
That’s where the West begins.
Out where the life is a little brighter,
Out where the friendships are a little riper,
Out where the tie that binds is a little brighter,

And to this feeling of sadness is added one of deep seriousness by reason of the tragic circumstances that now occupy and threaten to overwhelm the world—this world in which we live, of which we are an integral part, from which we cannot isolate ourselves, and may not if we could.

It were a pleasant task to speak only of the past; I should like to summarize the story of the Revolution in such fashion (if I were capable of doing so) as to make your hearts burn within you as you look upon that past and claim it for your own. But this I may not do. Rather than indulge in felicitations on the possession of privileges that have come to us as the result of happenings in which we had no part, meritorious or otherwise, I think we should ask ourselves whether we have lived up to the responsibilities which such inheritance entails, whether we shall escape the ignominy that inevitably comes to those who hold and enjoy a precious treasure that has been given them, without realizing the duty of transmitting it to their descendants not only intact from injury, but broadened and developed into a still richer legacy.

It is indeed fitting that I should speak to you of our forefathers of the Revolution, themselves descended from those strong sons of a mighty mother, who without casting off their allegiance to the government of Great Britain, separated themselves as far as possible from immediate contact with rulers who had set at naught the principles of justice, mercy, and truth and succumbed to the evil influences of material success achieved, of power established and extended, and the corruption that follows after both. Needless to point out to you, sons and daughters and students of the Revolution, that the basic qualities of the men of the last half of the eighteenth century were an inheritance from those expatriates of the first quarter of the century before, to deride whose frailties rather than to acclaim their virtues, has long been the fashion in a succeeding and in some respects a decadent age. No stronger testimony to their sterling worth, it seems to me, was ever given than the unconscious tribute which lies concealed in the sneering witticism of the brilliant essayist of the last century, who said: "They (the Puritans) hated bear-baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectator." Clever and learned and cultivated as Macaulay was, he failed to see that the encouragement of the instinct of cruelty in the character of man, which caused him to find enjoyment in witnessing the sufferings of others, was infinitely more to be deplored than the effect of that cruelty upon the lower animals. And the ennobling of human character was the key-note of their enterprise. Their conduct was based on a peculiar intimacy (as they believed) with a Superior Being; to know and to do His will during a period of probation, and so fit themselves for the enjoyment of an eternity in His presence, was the mainspring of their lives; all earthly distinctions were as naught when compared with their heavenly ambitions. This God whom they worshiped was the very personification of justice, wisdom, and truth, so that to serve Him and to justify their hope of an everlasting habitation in the sunlight of His presence they must at all times deal justly and walk righteously. This sincere belief gave a special dignity to their character. Their conception of liberty was a narrow one, as a more enlightened and more tolerant age now regards it; but it was circumscribed only by what they deemed a divine law, and, mistaken as they may have been, it were infinitely better for the human race if virtuous liberty, by reason of its disregard of law (under which alone true freedom may be found), had not to some extent at least degenerated into vicious and destructive license. The conditions existing in the Colonies during the period immediately preceding the Revolutionary War were such as might have been expected after a century and more of existence and growth of a race guided by the teachings and stimulated by the example of such men as these, whose influence extended far beyond the immediate region of their personal occupation. Submission to the law, so long as the law remained an interpreter of justice, obedience to their rulers in all things where obedience was a virtue and not servility, but uncompromising resistance to any encroachment on the rights of man. There was less talk then than there is now of the "consent of the governed;" they recognized as well as we do—better than many of us, who are prone to overuse of that overlauded phrase as a principle of universal application—the true office of government, which is to keep the peace, to protect society, and to exercise authority that will constrain the passions of men to conform to the dictates of reason and justice, and protect all persons in the exercise of their rights.

A race of men having such forefathers and such antecedents, possessed of such understanding of the theory of government, and especially of its limitations, might well be trusted to engage in war only when and so far as war was entirely justifiable. Only the unreasoning pacifist will dissent from the dictum of Achenwall—"a very cautious, positive, and careful writer," as Kant calls him—a German scholar of "high attainments, professor of philosophy, and later of law, in the University of Gottingen in the eighteenth century, as follows: "If the danger which threatens the Commonwealth from longer toleration of the injustice of the sovereign is greater than what may be anticipated from taking up arms, then the people may resist such a sovereign, and in order to maintain their rights they may break their compact of submission and dethrone him as a tyrant." These words are quoted by Kant in his masterly essay on "The Principles of Political Right" with disapproval, in spite of his commendation of their author; but it cannot be denied, I think, that the soundness of the premise on which this greatest of modern philosophers founded his theory of perpetual peace has been disproved. More than a century of continuing experience in one Republic and many years of spasmodic trial of representative government in other nations have demonstrated that neither the formation of a "powerful and enlightened people into a republic—which by its nature must be disposed toward perpetual peace—thus furnishing a center of federative union," nor the certain consequence of having "To fight in their own persons,

To supply the costs of war out of their own property,
To repair the devastation that it leaves behind,
To assume a burden of debt that will embitter peace itself,"

(all as Kant himself puts it) avail to prevent war, or to make the citizens of a self-governing republic less ready than the subjects of oligarchies to engage in it. Which shows that one of the greatest of life's mysteries, the mystery of war, has in it "things that are not dreamed of in our philosophies."

No one can dissent from the general proposition that of two evils, one or the other of which is inescapable, we may choose the lesser. There is a state of peace, blessed as peace is, which is worse than war, accursed as war is. (Applause.) For light on this question we can do no better than consult the Greeks of more than two millenniums ago, for the Greeks went to the very heart of things, and here is what Euripides says in that awful tragedy of the "Trojan Women" that some of us were privileged to see and hear last night:

"Would ye be wise, ye cities, fly from war!
 Yet if war come, there is a crown of death
 For her that striveth well and perisheth
 Unstained; to die in evil is the stain."

Of all the prerogatives of man, one of which is the enjoyment of liberty for himself and the guarantee of liberty to his race, the one to be exercised with the greatest reluctance is that of making war. It must be waged to establish liberty and not destroy it; to perfect all men in the possession and enjoyment of their rights; to use the strength of the mighty for the protection of the weak—"to have the giant's strength," mayhap, but "not to use it like a giant." And, above all, those who enter upon war must do so only in humble obedience to the highest law, as a solemn duty, and after the exorcism from their natures of that quality of passion which in one phase or another is the most prolific cause of strife. Such war is righteous, and a nation that wages war under those conditions and for those purposes has established its right to leadership in the race toward perfection. Born of a noble ancestry, baptized in the blood that was the seed of liberty, consecrated to the everlasting principles of righteousness and equity, our forefathers (engaging in such war) laid the foundations of a new dynasty that was to shame the past, that was to be the exemplar of all possible governmental excellence, even unto perfection.

Such being their plans, their aspirations, and their hopes of the coming generations, it is the duty of every patriot now to ask if those high ideals have been realized, those noble aspirations satisfied by their descendants. And when I use the term patriot I mean the man who loves his country with that large and pure devotion of which the quality of generosity and the capacity for self-effacement are essential elements, bereft of which what we call love is simple selfishness and the pretended patriot only he who wants to see his country great and powerful in order that he himself may profit by that greatness and be a partaker in that power (for of such stuff are many so-called patriots made).

And I ask you to bear with me, to exercise your patience, which I may stretch to its extremist limit, in pointing out to you that the children have not measured up to the fullness of the stature of the fathers and have failed to realize their hopes. Oh! credit me that I do this in sorrow, and visit me not with your anger for that I make endeavor to point out the way of duty and the path to a glorious future by dwelling on the inglorious aspects of the present day! The faults are not entirely those of our generation; the immediate successors of the founders of the Republic inaugurated the course of failure. They found themselves face to face with a problem that their predecessors were compelled to leave unsolved. Needless to say that those who wrote into the Constitution of one of the thirteen colonies the phrase that "all men are born free" consented to the continued existence of human slavery in a nation that was dedicated to the cause of human liberty, for no other reason than their powerlessness to force all existing conditions into line with their professed principles. Let me surmise also that they were conscious of the obligation (to which I have already made reference) that would rest on their successors to take up such degree of freedom as they had inherited and develop it into a larger and perfect liberty. Washington had said to Jefferson that it was "among his first wishes to see some plan adopted by which slavery in this country might be abolished by law." But while the new nation was one with the old in forbidding further traffic in slaves during the same memorable year of 1807, it was the older country, from whose tyranny the other had escaped, that first abolished slavery altogether, in 1838, whereas it existed in the United States and was protected by its laws for a quarter of a century thereafter. Even the Tsar of all the Russias clothed himself with the title of the greatest emancipator in history on the 3d of March, 1861, the day before the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln.

[Mr. Wheelwright here discussed at considerable length some of the causes of the Mexican war and the war with Spain, and reviewed the present European war in its relation to the United States.]

Dear friends, I have only told you one-tenth of what I ought to tell— one-tenth of what you ought to hear. But I must close, and let me do it with this appeal:

O Sons and Daughters of the Revolution, you who recognize the nobility of descent, regard the duty that devolves upon you as the children of such ancestry! What they did for their posterity, of whom you are the chosen few, calls you to high endeavor, not only for your descendants, but for your generation. It is your duty to lift it up out of the slough of selfishness and greed, to show that the honor of a people lies not in wealth and luxury, indulgence in which has always been followed by decay and death, but in the enlargement of our spiritual conceptions, in a broadened comprehension of our duty to humanity, in the development of the idea of the brotherhood of man, in treating all nations and all men with justice and magnanimity, in doing generous deeds, in comforting the wretched, and in drying the tears of sorrow. To him who sees his duty thus and does the best that in him lies to do it may be said the words that were addressed to Toussaint L'Ouverture as he fell on immortality:

"Thou has great allies;
Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
And man's unconquerable mind!" (Applause.)

Mr. ELMER MARSTON WENTWORTH: Mr. Toastmaster, the Committee on Resolutions of the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution desire to be heard.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: You have the floor, Mr. Wentworth.

Mr. WENTWORTH: Compatriots and Mr. Toastmaster, on behalf of the Resolutions Committee of the Twenty-sixth Annual Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution, we ask you to drink the trilogy of toasts: Our Revolutionary sires, may the men of seventy-six never have cause to blush for the lack of preparedness or patriotism in any of their descendants; no North, no South, no East, no West.

A MEMBER: Let us here high resolve that a "government of the people, for the people, by the people, shall not perish from the earth."

REMARKS BY MRS. CLARK.

Toastmaster McCAMANT: I will recognize Mrs. Clark, Honorary Vice-President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution. (Applause.)

Mrs. A. HOWARD CLARK: Mr. Toastmaster, this is the first time in many years that the women accompanying the delegates to the Annual Congress of this Society have been invited to share the annual banquet with you, and in appreciation of that fact, and also in appreciation for the many courtesies which we women have received since we have been here, I would like to move a rising vote of thanks by the women of this delegation to the Oregon Society of the Sons of the American Revolution for the many hospitalities which we have received since we have been here. Ladies, rise please—a rising vote of thanks to the Oregon Society.

(The ladies here all rose to their feet amidst applause.)

Toastmaster McCAMANT: That is very much appreciated. Ladies, we thank you on behalf of the Oregon Society. Now, I think this concludes our exercises for this evening and we will not longer prolong the meeting. I hope you will all be ready to start on the Columbia River excursion not later than 9 o'clock in the morning. This completes our exercises for this evening and I thank you very much for your courtesy in attending.

Mr. J. R. MUNSELL, of California: Mr. Toastmaster, may I speak on behalf of your neighboring State on the south, the State of California? I am sure I express the feelings of the entire delegation when I say that we have had the most splendid time of our lives. (Applause.)

BANQUET AT SAN FRANCISCO.

Banquet Tendered to the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution by the California Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, on the Evening of July 23, 1915.

(The banquet was attended by about fifty of the delegates and visitors from the Portland Congress, with ladies accompanying them, and about one hundred members of the California Society and lady guests.)

Banquet Reception Committee.

Mr. and Mrs. CHARLES H. BLINN.
 Mr. and Mrs. WILLIAM H. CROCKER.
 Mr. and Mrs. WILLIAM J. DUTTON.
 Mr. and Mrs. MARSHALL HALE.
 Mr. and Mrs. ZOETH S. ELDREDGE.
 Mr. and Mrs. WILLIAM H. JORDAN.
 Mr. and Mrs. WILLIAM M. BUNKER.

President Charles H. Blinn presided as toastmaster.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS BY PRESIDENT CHARLES H.
 BLINN, TOASTMASTER.

MY COMPATRIOTS AND MY FELLOW-CITIZENS: Doubtless some one will say, "Why did he not say Ladies and Gentlemen?" The term was omitted only from the fact that out here such salutation has been relegated to the attic of the past, and in the great State of California fellow-citizens means both women and men.

We are here tonight for the purpose of extending a greeting to our visiting compatriots, their wives, their daughters, their sisters, and their cousins and their aunts.

We welcome you to our hearts and our homes. We bid you welcome as worthy descendants of the followers of the immortal Washington. We greet you as living representatives of the 27 per cent of Americans constituting our Nation's population.

It is a great and glorious thing to look upon this audience of Americans. We wish to show you the greatest exposition of history. We desire to show you the new San Francisco, builded from the ashes of nine years ago, and now, temporarily, the center of the world—full of life, full of energy, full of ambition, full of hope—a happy, joyous, open-handed, care-free people, utterly devoid of ceremony, loving our neighbor as ourselves—all one. You are welcomed to all we have—our beautiful bay; our fruits and flowers; our marvelous park, with its carpet of green and its borders of blooms; our homelike hotels, and a vision of our women, the unchallenged beauties of the world, and our armies of children, matchless beyond compare.

We wish you to look out upon the boundless Pacific, teeming with the traffic of the Occident and the Orient and surpassing in its glitter the Tower of Jewels, with its never-ceasing waves gently kissing the sandy shore and lulling the sun to his cradle in the mighty deep.

Possibly it may appear to you that we are a trifle boastful, but the belief is extant that we have a right to be. Situated on the extreme western limit of civilization, with no West to assist us, with a loyalty that knows no bounds, unafraid and undaunted—pioneers forever—we and all of us bid you welcome. May we bid you come and bide with us neath perennial spring and summer. Come ye all and feel that California not only invites, but welcomes, the world to its fruits, its flowers, its unoccupied domain, and its world-famed hospitality. The gaze of the world is at present centered here upon this buoyant city set down among the hills in this great free nation, the only great nation not at this moment engaged in deadly strife.

My friends, I sometimes think we do not love the flag enough, nor realize what a glorious thing it is to sit, as we do tonight, sheltered by its folds, to count our jewels, while we render thanks to the God of Nations that we are Americans.

ADDRESS BY MR. WOODWORTH.

President Charles H. Blinn then introduced Compatriot Newell B. Woodworth, of Syracuse, N. Y., President General of the National Society, who spoke as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT, PAST PRESIDENT GENERAL, HONORARY VICE-PRESIDENT GENERAL OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, FELLOW-AMERICAN CITIZENS, AND COMPATRIOTS: I assure you it is a pleasure for me to be here with you, and I know I voice the sentiment of all those from the East in stating to you that we have enjoyed the hospitality you have extended. You have greeted us in a way that has made us feel at home; you have extended the hand of friendship with that cordial, heartfelt graciousness that has made us feel that you were really glad to see us, and we are certainly glad to see you.

I think it is very fortunate that this Congress met west of the Rocky Mountains; it has brought us all closer together, and I believe with a closer association our Society will be capable of greater work. Tonight it is particularly gratifying to have with us the founder of this organization, Dr. James Lafayette Cogswell. (Three cheers for Dr. Cogswell!) I consider it a high privilege to be able to extend to him my personal congratulations on his inspiration that led to the foundation of this Society, as well as very great personal pleasure at his presence with us this evening. Indeed, those sons of Revolutionary sires sowed a greater harvest of patriotism than they could have possibly foreseen. As President General of 1915, I pay my respects to the President of 1875.

At the present time, with the many perplexing questions confronting our country, not alone the war abroad, but the many theories that are being propounded in our own country as to what we should do as a nation, there seems to be greater need than ever of a patriotic organization having purposes such as the Sons of the American Revolution. There are advocates that would have us absolutely unprepared to defend that flag of ours yonder and what is represented in the folds of that flag. All the philosophy and learning of ancient Greece and Rome, all that was best of the civilization of the Middle Ages, all the blood of our ancestors, and all their sacrifices and their self-devotion to duty—not alone men, but the women, who gave perhaps more than the men, because it was for the women to wait, wait, while the men had the excitement and glory of action—all these are within those folds, as well as all the provisions of our Constitution and all our statutory laws and court decisions, with all that this means to the world. And what does that not mean today to the world of civilization? The blood of those who have died to save those folds in all completeness are contained therein, and today what flag in all Christendom or in all the world stands more for the rights of humanity and of justice than your flag? (Applause.)

James Lafayette Cogswell

One of the Founders of the National Society of Sons of Revolutionary

Is it not, then, for us, as the greatest duty that could devolve upon Americans by heritage and by blood, to see that all that flag contains and represents within its folds shall always stand aloft as an example to all the world of equality, justice, civilization, and humanity? And there is work for societies of this kind to do. Your President has called attention to the fact that only about 27 per cent of our fellow-citizens are American born. This alien majority is a problem of which some organization must take cognizance and must assume the leadership, and why not our own Society, in seeing that those composing it are taught what American spirit is and what it means. Particularly is this important at this time, since now all the West and your own Pacific coast is populated, and these aliens are flowing back into the great cities to form racial communities, which are difficult to reach unless there is a distinct effort made by some organization to go directly to the heart of these racial communities and teach these aliens what they should know of our institutions and of the controlling law. I believe in this movement, that is probably destined to become permanent as we recognize more clearly our inter-racial obligations. The Sons of the American Revolution have an opportunity for great practical work, and I believe that we should be judged as active members of this organization, not by the pride that we may have for what our ancestors did in their time, but rather what we are today doing with our own lives, in our time, to maintain what they courageously secured. The principles of '76 are as vital today as when our ancestors risked and gave life. It was to perpetuate these principles and their memory that this Society was primarily organized. Our forefathers were compelled to appeal to the God of Battles—perhaps we may—to defend our flag and all its folds contained, but pray God that may not be so; but if we are, let us be fully prepared, spiritually and mentally, to defend it, even as they fought to create it. On the principles of '76 all Americans can rally; like the flag, they are alike to us all—whether we are of the North, the South, the East, or the West—and it is for us to maintain these principles and to watch that the flag remains as the one of justice, of equality, and of the brotherhood of man to all the world.

“One generation passeth away and another generation cometh, but the earth abideth forever.” May we not, then, in the present hope to do our part as patriotic American men and American women, do our humble part that our flag and our Republic may endure forever?

REMARKS BY MR. CAPWELL.

The Toastmaster then introduced Compatriot H. C. Capwell, of Oakland, former President of California Society.

MR. PRESIDENT AND PRESIDENT GENERAL.—I am going to say LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: The President stows the ladies away in the attic, and then he introduces me to speak to you on the subject of the ladies. I suppose it is my duty to start in at the front door and gradually work my way to the attic and the ladies, because when Mr. Blinn asked me to speak, I said: “I prefer not to; I want to be a member of the Lower House and look up to the Senate.” But he said: “No, we want you over.”

He introduced me as a “merchant prince.” Now, princes are getting a pretty short run for their time and money in the place where the fighting is the thickest and the hottest; therefore I am willing to eliminate the “prince.” Then the next thing he comes to the merchant. You all know that a merchant in America has been held in the past few years in about the same esteem as the common prince is in Europe. He is getting about the same treatment; but, thank God, there are a few of us left. I am one that is left, but will probably be shot before I am through. Please do not infer from this that I am now “half shot.” I wish to say to those of you who have been kind enough and good enough to yourselves, if you please, to come way out here to the Pacific coast that you have done something worth while, because if you will stop to think of it, the West is the one best bet in the world today, and California is the very brightest jewel of the West, and that naturally means of the universe.

You have dreamed of California, you have read of California, you have had people visit California and come back and tell you something about it, and you have come to feel that there were just two things that you should always keep in mind—one is that in your lifetime and while you are privileged to be on earth you should try to see California, and the other one that when you should be no more you should try to see and possibly inhabit heaven. Well, now, I think those are perfectly legitimate desires, and since you have come to California you can stop wishing very much for heaven, because you have the two in one here, and so I want to congratulate you upon having done something really fine for yourself, and of course it affords us pleasure to have you with us.

There is always in a plate of fish, no matter how fine, a bone, and so we in San Francisco have that one bone to contend with, and that is this: that you did not in your wisdom—I would not say in your lack of it—first visit San Francisco instead of Portland. We have no fault to find, but you did rob us of a real, genuine pleasure that would have been ours, to have given you a splendid welcome in California. Now, this dinner is sort of "pot luck"; you dropped in on us. Had we known all the time that you were coming to California, we would have been delighted to give you a real banquet and a royal welcome. This is simply a slight taste of what we might do if we had the opportunity, and of course we will never be satisfied until the time comes when we have you here as all ours.

Our President put you in the attic, ladies, and if I am a long time getting there, remember it is not that I am "half shot."

Do you ever stop to think of California the way it was in the good old days—the days of old, the days of gold, the days of '49? That is an old song that the pioneers used to sing, and California in that time was a pretty rough place. There were few ladies in California to speak of, so of course about the only thing men could do was to dig and dig and dig for the yellow stuff. This they would send back East on the other side of the Rockies to comfort those at home, mainly, of course, for the ladies. Then in the course of time the days of '49 gave way and the grain days came, and the whole of California was turned over to the raising of grain, which was a fine, splendid thing; and then the fruit, cultivation of our soil in every way, and the making of homes, and around each and every home were the beautiful flowers; but they were not in evidence until the ladies came, and we felt that we needed civilization in California, and until that day came the sunshine of California seemed nowhere near as bright, nor the flowers as beautiful. In California woman has been declared the full equal of man, and just as capable of voting as one who came from the other side of the Atlantic and has been here for a few years only, and because we recognize that fact I will not permit the Toastmaster to relegate them to the attic; I want them down on the ground floor. We want their influence for good and right; but just why the Toastmaster should ask a merchant who does not dare say anything to the ladies to respond to a toast to them, I am at a loss to understand, when he has such men as Mr. John R. Weeks, of Newark, N. J., who brought a party of fourteen across the country, most of whom were ladies. I am told, by reason of the fact he chose wisely his companions, he was able to land the next Congress for New Jersey. Why did he not ask Mayor Park, of Salt Lake City? What do they not know about ladies in Utah? He could have called upon Mr. President General Woodworth, the gentleman whom you have just heard, or, if you please, the Past President General, Mr. Thruston, of Louisville, Ky. I know why he did not ask them; they are both bachelors, but do not say anything about it. He did not ask them, but he asked me, and it is only because I am a descendant of the brave "men of '76" that I did not shirk. I know what it means to talk of the ladies. I might talk about them, but in this case I am talking to them. At any rate, I want to say that Mr. Thruston had the good judgment to bring with him a lady, Mrs. Blackburn, one of the southern belles; so that we not only have the bell of '76, but we have the one of a more recent date, both in San Francisco at the same time. We also have the hundreds and thousands of native belles that ring joy-music to all California.

I realize that I have my limitations in responding to a toast to the ladies, because I know I cannot do full justice to a subject requiring a genius of the loftiest order. I am a plain, every-day, possibly ought-to-be-shot "merchant prince." The day has plainly gone when we speak about the giant-oak man and tender-plant woman and all that sort of thing in California. They now both walk erect, side by side, and they can look each other in the face and feel that they can discuss the matters of the day with a full understanding. There was a time when woman was a slave to all the different social functions; she had no time for anything else. I hold there is nothing in the nature of things why a woman may not attend to her social and domestic duties and at the same time enter into a discussion and a reading and understanding of the different questions that come before the men. Woman, who gave to us that splendid flag—the Stars and Stripes—ought to be good enough to consider with the men any question, no matter what it may be, for the good of this great country of ours, and I feel that we of the West and you of the East, in the few places in which you have recognized women, have a right to feel very proud and happy that the day has come when you take into full counsel the women that go to make up the 27 per cent of our population spoken of, and I sincerely hope the time will never come when any liberty that is enjoyed by woman today, not only in this country, but any other part of the world, will ever be restricted, and I am satisfied it will not be.

And so, gentlemen, without trying to become sentimental, I want to say to you as a Californian by adoption, and I am satisfied that most of you will ultimately be the same, because it is impossible, once you get a taste of it, not to be—I am satisfied that you are going to come some time to California, or else your children will come here, for you cannot help but tell them of the joy in living, for even a short time, under the glorious sunny skies of this State, where men and women are equal.

I ask you to join me in drinking a toast to the only enemy the Sons of the American Revolution will ever surrender to—our best friends and most beloved—the ladies, God's best gift to man.

ADDRESS BY MR. JORDAN.

THEIR OPPORTUNITY AND OURS.

The Toastmaster then introduced Compatriot William H. Jordan, of San Francisco, who spoke as follows.

MR. TOASTMASTER, MR. PRESIDENT GENERAL OF THE NATIONAL SOCIETY, DAUGHTERS AND SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, AND GUESTS: No man in whose veins courses the blood of a Revolutionary sire has a right to refuse to obey an order from his superior officers directing him to contribute his quota of effort upon an occasion such as this.

Entertaining this sentiment, I gave my consent a few days ago to respond tonight to the toast just announced. A native modesty and an inborn timidity—characteristic of all Californians—compels me to admit that I feel much embarrassed in this presence, and can only promise in the discharge of this duty to do the best I can, trusting entirely to your patient forbearance and hope for a safe escape when I shall have concluded.

My predicament reminds me strongly of that of a certain pianist spoken of by a celebrated Englishman, who, upon returning from a trip to America, was asked what he had seen over here that caused him the greatest surprise, and replied that it was a sign which he had seen on the wall of a dance house in a cow town out West. Happening to arrive at the village on an afternoon just as the cowboys were gathering from the plains and making it rather lively by shooting things up generally, he strolled into the dance hall, where music and the shuffling of feet, interspersed with an occasional pistol shot, attracted him. As he entered he noticed on the wall over the piano this sign: "Please don't shoot the pianist, for he is doing the best he can."

Let me hope that you will catch the full significance of this little story and permit me to conclude my task without serious mishap or the necessity of sending for an ambulance.

In looking over this splendid company, it is a pleasure to see present so many ladies. It reminds me of the fact that such a scene was not possible a hundred years ago. Wise as may have been "ye men of ye olden time," yet it is evident that they did not know it all, or they certainly never would have closed the doors of their banquet halls upon our good mothers. Since such was their custom, it is surely no wonder that it should have so often happened upon such occasions when, unprotected by the restraining and elevating influence of their wives, that those dear, weak old worthies of the powdered wig and buckled shoe, who never saw a temperance pledge in their lives, should have imbibed too deeply of the flowing bowl and, inhaling the odors of the boozy drug in their tangled brains, have been found in the morning, like kings of the blood, comfortably tucked away under the tables.

Our Revolutionary prototype was indeed a man of sterling parts. That he was brave, patriotic, self-denying, no one can gainsay. If intolerant and uncompromising in politics and religion, he was yet prayerfully conscientious in all matters of family discipline, having a pious regard for the corrective qualities of the rod that was truly wonderful.

Unfortunately, the State of California was not a part of the earth a hundred years ago; hence we have here none of those great landmarks to which you of the East make frequent pilgrimages. We have here no Lexingtons, no Bunker Hills, no Monmouths, no Yorktowns to which we may take you; nor have we any ancient dwellings, with their quaintly gabled roofs and towering chimneys, where once lived and died the heroes of those early days. But, though denied the inspiration which such scenes afford, yet we may meet at times, as tonight, and, taking down the scrolls of history, contemplate the splendors of the past.

Though there are here no battlefields or historic dwellings of the days of '76, still, happily, the love of liberty is not circumscribed by territorial lines or confined in stately buildings; but it abides, and abides forever, in the hearts of all those who hate tyranny, love justice, and believe in the equal rights and equal responsibilities of all mankind.

And so here in California, where the sun kisses the continent with his last departing beams at the close of day, it is fitting that tonight we, who are sons and daughters of an illustrious ancestry—sons and daughters of freedom—should pay tribute to the memory of those brave men, who more than a hundred years ago, availing themselves of an opportunity the equal of which never before had come to mortal man, made that freedom possible.

Theirs was the opportunity to found upon this continent a government "of the people and by the people and for the people," which by its uplifting power should modify and recast every civilized government throughout the world. To such a pass had the world then come that to them was given the opportunity to call into being a new principle of government, which was destined within a single century to take the scepter of arbitrary power from the hand of every king and ruler in christendom.

This was their opportunity; and now let us consider, if you will, the striking parallels that appear when we read the history of those eventful days and consider the days in which we now are living.

First, however, let me say that I wish it to be understood, in speaking of the days of our Revolutionary sires, I do not refer solely to that period of seven years embraced by the war of Independence, but rather to the span of their average active lives, say from 1776 to 1815, a period of thirty-nine years, during which time they were necessary factors in the formation and management of the government of our country—a period that embraced not only the war of the Revolution, but the French Revolution and the Napoleonic wars as well.

During those eventful years in the lives of our fathers all the nations of Europe that are now at war were grappling with each other in the most gigantic struggle that up to that time the world had ever known. It was a struggle for existence with them all. England and France, Prussia—now Germany—Austria, Russia, Belgium, Italy, and Turkey battled with each other as they are now battling, the only difference being in their alignment, the size of their armies, the character of their weapons, and the scientific refinement in their methods of slaughter. Then, as now, the allied nations were arraigned against a vast military power that had entered the struggle fully prepared and which was skilfully maneuvered. Then, as now, the allies fought against the supremacy of a great war lord, who believed in his star of destiny. Then, as now, the right of one nation to rule the seas was questioned. Then, as now, a determined effort was made to destroy the trade of England, and in retaliation England blockaded the ports of her enemies. Then, as now, the rights of neutrals to trade with belligerent nations became involved. Then, as now, the United States protested against wrongs committed to American ships and American citizens, and in vigorous terms demanded that they cease. Then, as now, "the world was out of joint."

Marvelous indeed, when we stop to think, are these parallels. How like the days of our fathers are the days in which we live! But God grant that the parallels may stop where they are, for then, in the year 1812, our repeated protests against the violation of the rights of our shipping and the rights of our seamen being disregarded, we, too, became involved in the maelstrom of war. Think of such a thing happening now, in our pitiable state of unpreparedness!

Our fathers, believing firmly that all men should be equal before the law, founded this nation in righteousness. Upon that foundation they framed our Constitution—the greatest chart of human liberty ever conceived by the mind of man. While Europe was burning and monarchies were crumbling they made good their opportunity to build, and when wars ceased the people of Europe found this nation leading the world back to the fields of industry, and art, and trade, and to the pleasant paths of peace.

Thus far I have directed your attention to the conditions that prevailed a hundred years ago and the opportunities that fell in the pathway of our fathers. Today, under conditions that are in many phases most striking in their similarity, we are confronted with problems to be solved, with opportunities to be availed of.

It may be said, however, that to discuss in public the grave problems that the present war in Europe has created and which seriously affect our national life is not in good taste; that there is danger in so doing of wounding the feelings and sensibilities of some of our foreign-born citizens, whose love for the land of their birth is such that they cannot permit anything to be said which might reflect upon the conduct of their former countrymen. With this sentiment I am not in accord. While I would not needlessly wound the feelings of any one, yet I am an American and unhesitatingly reserve the right to speak plainly and without undue reserve, in public as well as in private, upon all questions in which the rights of my country and its citizens are involved. We who enjoy the rights of citizenship, whether native or foreign born, are Americans, and the less we use the hyphen in designating our nationality the better; the less we talk about German-Americans, or Italian-Americans, or Irish-Americans the better it will be for us all. For one I know of no such people. I recognize no citizenship in this country which is half American and half foreign. Every man who has taken the oath of allegiance has sworn to defend the Stars and Stripes against the world, and when he did so, and not till then, he became an American citizen and not a hyphenated sympathizer with the enemies of America. He may cherish the traditions of his fathers and love the land of his birth—that is but natural—but he must support and defend the Constitution of the United States and be ready, if need be, to lay down his life to maintain the integrity and inviolability of this nation from whatever source it may be assailed. I see no reason, therefore, why we may not speak freely to one another when discussing international, as well as local, affairs without fear of wounding the sensibilities of any one. Certainly in this presence there is no need of restraint.

Reverting, now, to the problems which this hour in our national life presents, though similar in many respects to those that confronted our forefathers, yet they must be approached from a far different angle. Then we were a small nation, scattered along the Atlantic seaboard, having no interest elsewhere. Now we are an acknowledged world power, stretching from seaboard to seaboard, with insular possessions that extend almost around the globe. Then we were interested only in being let alone. Now there is no phase of international law, no trade regulation, no treaty among nations, in which we are not interested, by which we may not be affected.

As our interests have broadened and our population increased, so have our responsibilities grown. With increasing responsibility has come increasing obligations, both to our own people and to the world at large; and these obligations must be discharged with a due regard for our national honor and the eternal principles of justice and moral rectitude. In the present conflict we are a neutral nation; but let it be remembered that neutrality does not mean the abject surrender of inalienable rights; it does not mean that we are to sit calmly by and permit either of the belligerents to wantonly destroy the property of American citizens or mercilessly and without warning slaughter our people when traveling the seas upon their lawful business. A nation that would permit such a course of conduct would be scorned by all and not worthy of the respect of any. It certainly would not be worthy of an ancestry such as that of which we, the Sons of the American Revolution, boast.

Nor do I think that there is reason to believe that our neutrality will be so construed. Neither does it necessarily follow that to maintain these rights, which have always been ours and which cannot in honor be relinquished, we shall be drawn into that great cataclysm of blood and misery that is now raging across the sea. Certainly no such dreadful event will happen if it can with honor be prevented by the calm wisdom, the firmness, and the patriotic devotion of that bravely patient man, President Woodrow Wilson, into whose hands a blessed Providence has at this time placed the destinies of the nation. Under his directing genius, supported by a united people, and it is the duty of every loyal American to give such support, we may have confidence that these weighty problems will find a happy solution; that the rights of our people will be preserved and national honor maintained, and that when peace shall come at last it will find America leading the world back to sanity and repentance. Then will come a clear vision of the great opportunity that the present crisis is sure to bring us, the arrival of which is already at our gates.

For one I believe in peace, yet I am not of that class of people who would have "peace at any price." There is a price which no nation more than an individual can afford to pay for peace. Peace without honor is degradation, and degradation with a nation is death. Our fathers were a peace-loving people, but they more than once were compelled to conquer that peace with the rifle and the sword. So, if need be, must we if we wish to preserve our birthright and maintain the respect of the nations of the world.

Now as never before is the future big for us, both in material and in moral gains. Consider for a moment the material prospect. Every country in Europe is so increasing its debt and destroying the affluence of its people that bankruptcy already begins to stare them in the face; money in vast sums must be had and had soon. The United States is recognized as the richest country in the world, while New York, with its 5,000,000 of people and vast commercial interest, looms largely upon the horizon as a rival to London as the financial center of the world. If the present financial exhaustion abroad continues, New York will be certain to outstrip her great rival, and in the future the arteries of finance will start from America and not from England. If we can control the finances of the world, what can prevent us in the future from tightening the purse-strings and declaring that wars shall cease? Surely, if capital and labor shall combine in a great humanitarian effort for peace they can, with the aid of the women of the world, put a stop to all war. Then in truth shall the roar of howitzers, the whirl of torpedoes, and the bursting of bombs be stilled, and that day come that was spoken of by the prophet of old, when "swords shall be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks."

But not only is the opportunity at hand for America to control the finances of the world, but its commerce as well. Consider the great markets of South America, of the Orient, and the islands of the sea, as well as of Europe, that are now open to us as never before—markets, many of them, that the warring nations of Europe have hitherto monopolized to our utter exclusion. These markets are ours today if we will but take them. No other nation can supply them. The opportunity is ours now to possess ourselves of a trade, almost without competition, that will keep every mill and every workshop in the land busy for years to come and fill with a flood of gold the coffers of the people of the nation.

Nor is this inviting commerce all that we may have. The seas lie before us. The ships of Germany and Austria have been driven from them, while those of the allied nations are greatly reduced in number and unable to handle but a small fraction of the traffic that crowds the wharves and warehouses of neutral nations, while rates of freight have reached a mark never before dreamed of. This carrying trade is ours if we will but build the ships to handle it. Once America was second in this trade among the maritime people of the world, but the Civil War swept us from the ocean, and from that blow we have never recovered. Today the opportunity is ours to regain that which was lost and to be again a great maritime power, with ships bearing American registers and flying the Stars and Stripes sailing the waters of every sea on the globe.

Compatriots, behold the opportunities that are now ours! Never since the nation was born was there such a future presented as now lies spread out before us. It beckons us onward in the way that leads to prosperity and to national honor. Let us go forward, and as our fathers a hundred years ago availed themselves of the opportunities that were theirs and gave this nation its great place among the nations of the world, so let us do our duty now; and then in the days that are to come, when our children's children shall assemble upon occasions such as this, they will recount with pride what we did in this eventful period to make the United States of America the greatest among the nations of the earth in all those things that make for prosperity, for honor, for justice, and for unflinching righteousness.

REMARKS BY MR. THRUSTON.

The Toastmaster then introduced Compatriot R. C. Ballard Thruston, of Louisville, Ky.

MR. PRESIDENT, PRESIDENT GENERAL, AND LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: My whole life has been one series of lost opportunities, and the worst one comes tonight, because I never was good at blowing the fog-horn. I came from Kentucky, but I did not bring this with me. I got it somewhere between Oregon and California, and I understand that is an imaginary line with an unfortunate sign on the house right across the State line; so I do not know where I am. I cannot talk to you; I wish I could; but God bless the ladies; they all know I love them; the best I can do is to talk to them individually. My voice will not carry any further and I will have to ask you to excuse me from saying anything further tonight. I hope to say more tomorrow. Thank you so much.

REMARKS BY MR. CLARK.

The Toastmaster then introduced Compatriot A. Howard Clark, for many years Secretary General of the National Society.

MR. PRESIDENT GENERAL, MR. CHAIRMAN, COMPATRIOTS, AND LADIES: I am not a speech-maker, as some of you know, but I am inspired on this occasion. I have come from the home of George Washington, on the banks of the Potomac, from the National Capital. I am here on the shores of the Pacific, the western side of this great nation, and I am enthused with patriotism. I have brought with me my wife, who was one of the organizers of the Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, a society of over 100,000 members. I have brought with me my son, a boy of ten years, the first representative of the Washington Guard on the western shore of the United States. The Washington Guard was founded in New Jersey two years ago, and at the recent Congress in Portland it was made a National organization. It is auxiliary to the Sons of the American Revolution. We are going to enroll thousands of children, of American boys, who will be trained in patriotism, trained to respect the folds of that flag—boys who will say, "I will be a soldier if the necessity arises." I wish that I myself could be.

I feel proud to come to the Pacific coast, where the Sons of the American Revolution was organized. I have longed to be here during the last quarter of a century, all during my term as Secretary and Registrar General. I do not know what to say. I am full of patriotism, but I am reminded that I must say no more. I recall the story of a boy who came home from school one day with a note from his teacher: "My dear Mrs. Jones, your boy talks too much in school." The boy's mother was not at home; the father, however, was there. The father read the note and wrote in reply: "My dear Miss Smith, I am very sorry that my boy should talk too much; he deserves to be scolded; but, Great Caesar, you ought to hear his mother!"

PATRIOTIC MEETING AT SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 24, 1915.

On Saturday afternoon, at 1.30 o'clock, the California Society of Sons of the American Revolution, with delegates and visitors from the Portland Congress, and ladies accompanying them, assembled at the Scott Street entrance to the Exposition grounds and, escorted by commissioners of the Exposition, with the University of Wisconsin band, marched to the Court of Abundance, where patriotic exercises were held. The day had been officially designated as "Sons of American Revolution Day" at the Fair, and several hundred persons had assembled at the Court of Abundance to participate in the meeting.

President General Woodworth presided.

INTRODUCTORY ADDRESS BY MR. WOODWORTH.

Here in this wonderful and beautiful Exposition has been assembled the arts and industries of the world. It is a typical illustration of the composition of our country where, beneath the security of our flag, has voluntarily gathered many millions of peoples, representing all races of the world. These peoples, to a great extent, have here in the great melting pot of our institutions been assimilated in our body politic as completely as this great Exposition has been so harmoniously arranged through the energy and virile spirit of the West. But there are some of those who have not given this country of theirs through adoption the full allegiance that determines American citizenship. When they enter our open doors they do not fully accept the precept, "Choose thee this day whom ye will serve," for one cannot be an American citizen with a divided allegiance. We require a greater acceptance of the spirit of our forefathers that knew no divided allegiance and were willing to accept war rather than to surrender their principles. It is this spirit that impels the nation to prepare for national defense that it may protect its principles and beliefs. A preparedness that is equal to offensive measures if its rights or honor is assailed. Such a preparedness is not militarism. It is an insurance in favor of a permanent peace, as it lessens the danger of inviting invasion through weakness, insult, or violation of national rights and assures the perpetuity of institutions.

May we not hope, then, that this spirit of our forefathers may be regenerated with such increasing force as to eliminate all hyphens in nationalities and create that unity of spirit from which will spring a national preparedness sufficient to command from all nations a just recognition of our rights and the protection afforded by our flag. If we can aid in the furtherance of this we will be more worthy of the spirit of our ancestors and of our American citizenship.

It has been the unity of thought and action among all Americans that has permitted the great development of this nation in the past, and it must be unity of thought and action that will guide and advance the future of our democracy toward its highest ideals. There is within our limits an opportunity only for those who are willing to consecrate themselves to the principles of our government. All must be fused into one harmonious whole if we carry forward our destiny.

One word—American—should include all, without the addition of prefixes or hyphens, irrespective of nationality. Thus unity and democracy will march forward with ever greater achievements for the rights of humanity.

Director Frank L. Brown, on behalf of the Exposition authorities, presented to the Society a bronze medal to commemorate the meeting. President General Woodworth accepted the medal with expressions of thanks for the honor thus conferred on the Sons of the American Revolution.

Mr. R. C. Ballard Thruston delivered an address on the "Origin and Evolution of the United States Flag."

ADDRESS BY R. C. BALLARD THRUSTON ON THE ORIGIN AND EVOLUTION OF THE UNITED STATES FLAG.

Before we can thoroughly understand the origin and development of our flag, it is necessary to go back many years and study the origin and development of that flag from which ours has been evolved.

CROSS OF ST. ANDREW.

It was in 1095, at the beginning of the first crusade, that Pope Urban II thought the troops of each Christian nation in that crusade should carry or wear crosses emblematic of Christ and of the character of the holy war in which they were then about to engage. He accordingly assigned crosses to the several national divisions of his army varying in design and color scheme, so as to minimize the chances of confusion as much as possible. To the Spanish he gave a red, to the French a white, to the Italians a blue, and to the English a yellow cross, while to the Scotch he assigned the white saltier of St. Andrew on a blue field (fig. 1), an emblem which they are said to have previously used for several centuries. After this crusade was over, the Scotch retained their cross, but the others do not seem to have done so. In later crusades similar assignments of crosses were probably made, but, as before, they were not often retained by the several countries as national emblems.

CROSS OF ST. GEORGE.

About the middle of the last half of the thirteenth century, Prince Edward, afterward Edward I of England, while on one of the crusades, became interested in the story of St. George and the dragon, and before returning home went to the Monastery of Cappadocia at Beirut, where his interest increased to such a point that, soon after his return to his native land, he adopted the red cross of St. George on a white field as the flag of England (fig. 2). It will be seen, therefore, that the flag of Scotland antedated that of England by two or more centuries.

FLAG OF GREAT BRITAIN, OR UNION JACK.

After James VI of Scotland ascended the throne of England, in 1603, he was constantly annoyed by the eternal wrangling between the masters of the English and Scotch ships when they met at sea as to which one should first dip its colors to the other. He was extremely anxious to unite the two kingdoms into one country, as well as to stop this annoyance. Therefore, in 1606, as one step toward the accomplishment of his desire, he united the two crosses into a new flag, which subsequently became known as the Union Jack (fig. 3). This he required all vessels of both countries to carry at their mainmast, at the same time carrying from their foremast their old flag, showing to which of the two countries the vessel belonged. However, it was a century later before the two countries agreed upon their union under the name of Great Britain, and by act of their Parliament in 1707 the union of the crosses was required to be used in all their flags, banners, standards, and ensigns, both at sea and on land. The army used one flag, the navy another, the merchant marine a third, and so on, but each of them consisted either wholly or in part of the Union Jack. Such was the state of the case at the beginning of the American Revolution in 1775, and indeed is the case today. That uprising was really a revolt against the monarchial despotism of the time, and the idea of separation from the mother country was then but little thought of or considered; in fact, the common sentiment that bound the colonies together was not a very strong tie and required diplomatic handling to avoid breaking.

When General Washington, after his election as General and Commander-in-Chief, reached Cambridge, on July 3, 1775, to take command, he found the so-called army practically without either colors or uniforms. In fact, General Putnam, who commanded the Connecticut troops, is said to have worn the blue jeans, supported by only one suspender, which he had on when, hearing of the battles of Lexington and Concord, he left his plow and started for Cambridge. So General Washington assigned to the various officers, as a distinction of rank, ribbons varying in color and number, and these were worn by them until something more elaborate and formal was designed. There were practically neither flags nor colors, though some of the individual companies are supposed to have brought with them those which they had previously used.

COLONIAL FLAGS.

Washington had the entire army to organize in all its minute details, and the question of colors, being of less importance than many others, was not given serious consideration at the start, but a little later he urged the various colonels to provide for their regiments colors of such design or designs as might appeal to them. This was frequently done, and in many instances some design of thirteen units was used to represent the revolting colonies.

Some of the colonies went so far as to adopt flags of their own. For instance, Massachusetts adopted the pine tree, with the motto, "An Appeal to Heaven" (fig. 4); Rhode Island, one having an anchor and the word "Hope," within the canton a union of thirteen white stars on a blue field (fig. 5), said to be the first flag on which the thirteen colonies were represented by thirteen stars; New York, a black beaver on a white field (fig. 6); Pennsylvania does not seem to have adopted any, but the First Troop of Light Horse, organized in Philadelphia in 1774, in anticipation of the coming trouble, adopted a very beautiful one that was given to them by their commander, Captain Markoe. In the center of this flag (fig. 7) was a knot tied with thirteen cords, and in the canton thirteen horizontal stripes, alternating blue and silver. This company acted as General Washington's escort from Philadelphia through Pennsylvania and across the States of New Jersey and New York to the Connecticut line, just after his election as Commander-in-Chief of the army, and it is claimed that their flag was the first one on which the colonies were represented by thirteen horizontal stripes. Virginia is said to have adopted the rattlesnake (fig. 8) which Colonel Gadsden urged Congress to adopt, but I have searched for the act without success. The South Carolina flag has an interesting history. In September, 1775, the Committee of Safety of Charleston instructed Col. William Moultrie to take possession of Fort Johnson, on James Island, which he did. The uniform of their troops was blue, with a silver crescent in the cap. Soon realizing that a flag was needed, he improvised one having a blue field, with a white crescent in the canton. This was the flag which Sergeant Jasper so gallantly rescued on June 28, 1776, when the fort of palmetto logs on Sullivan's Island was attacked by the British fleet under Adm. Sir Peter Parker, and it was under this flag that the Declaration of Independence was read to the people of Charleston on August 8, 1776. When that State came to officially adopt a flag, it took the one which Colonel Moultrie had designed and, in recognition of the good services of the palmetto logs, placed upon it the palmetto tree (fig. 9).

CAMBRIDGE, GREAT UNION, OR STRIPED UNION FLAG.

But it would not do to accept any of these flags as emblematic of the thirteen colonies because of their sectional prejudices, and, singular as it may seem, the flag which apparently first received some official recognition by General Washington as representative of the thirteen colonies sprang into being without any known official orders or direction. The statement is made that it was the result of a committee appointed by Congress for that purpose, but the committee referred to was appointed to confer with General Washington and others for the purpose of devising means for organizing and maintaining an army, and neither does their official report nor correspondence show that they even considered the question of a flag. It was not long after their return to Philadelphia when, on January 1 or 2, 1776, there was hoisted over General Washington's headquarters at Cambridge a flag having thirteen horizontal red and white stripes and in the canton was the Union Jack (fig. 10), complying with the act of 1707, requiring that it be on all flags, banners, standards, and ensigns, whether used on land or at sea. It was merely the British marine flag of that day, with the solid red field divided by white ribbons so as to make thirteen red and white stripes, representing the thirteen revolting colonies.

At that time the idea of independence was not generally seriously considered, so that the Union Jack in this flag showed the allegiance of the colonies to their mother country. The flag itself was immediately appropriated by the navy, and although our army used it over fortifications and barracks, they did not carry it in battle. With the growth of the idea of independence, the colonists apparently conceived a dislike for the Union Jack in the flag, for before the end of the calendar year 1776 its use by our Revolutionary patriots seems to have ceased entirely. After the abandonment of this flag, and before the adoption of our starry emblem, I have not been able to obtain reliable information as to just what our navy did carry, but it probably consisted of thirteen horizontal stripes, in each case composed of two of the four colors—red, white, blue, and yellow.

OUR FIRST FLAG ACT.

It was on June 14, 1777, that our Continental Congress passed the following act establishing the Stars and Stripes as the flag of our country:

Resolved, That the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation.

You will notice that this act does not define how many points the stars were to have nor how they were to be arranged.

Our navy immediately appropriated the new flag; but as the British army and navy had used different flags for many years, we thought we should do likewise, and the official correspondence between General Washington and the Board of War shows that it was over two years before they agreed upon a design for the army to carry "as variant from the marine flag," and over three years more before the Board of War succeeded in obtaining the necessary materials and having national colors made for our army. The details of the design are only imperfectly described in this correspondence, neither flag nor design having been preserved, so far as we have been able to learn, but it contained the union, and in the center was a serpent, with the number of the regiment and name of the State where the regiment was organized. This correspondence also shows that the national colors prepared by the Board of War for the army were ready for distribution in the fall of 1782, and that they had not been distributed as late as March 11, 1783, being then in the hands of the keeper of military stores. The war was then practically over, and there is nothing to show that our Revolutionary army had ever carried any flags furnished by the American Congress. Those that were carried were purely personal, each made by or for some officer, company, or regiment, and represented the sentiments of the makers.

So far, I have succeeded in locating only one Stars and Stripes that I feel sure was carried by the American army during our Revolutionary War. It was carried by the North Carolina Militia at the Battle of Guilford Court-house, March 15, 1781; but the stripes are blue and red and the union has a white field with thirteen eight-pointed stars (fig. 11). There is also another flag hanging in the State House at Annapolis that it is claimed, and probably correctly, was carried by the Third Maryland Regiment at the Battle of Cowpens, January 17, 1781. It has thirteen red and white stripes, and the union is a blue field with thirteen five-pointed stars—one in the center and twelve arranged in the form of a circle around it (fig. 13). In both cases these flags were purely personal, not official. The Stars and Stripes preserved in the State House at Boston (fig. 14) is claimed to have flown over Fort Independence during the American Revolution, but it was not carried by the army and probably was not furnished by the Board of War.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.

The army was disbanded in November, 1783, by act of Congress, but even before the adoption of the Federal Constitution, Congress appears to have recognized the necessity of having something of an army, and on October 3, 1787, passed an act creating one, consisting of one regiment, having eight companies of infantry and one battalion of artillery. After the adoption of our Federal Constitution and the organization of our government, Congress passed the act of September 29, 1789, taking over this little force as the army of the United States, but it did not carry the Stars and Stripes.

EARLY NATIONAL COLORS.

The first flag carried by our army as national colors is still in existence. It was recently mounted between two layers of Brussels net, at the expense of our Society, for the purpose of preservation, and is today hanging in the chapel on Governor's Island (fig. 15). Under the act of March 3, 1791, the size of our army was increased from one regiment to two, and then it became necessary to have two flags, one for each regiment. The one carried by the first regiment has been preserved and is today at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point (fig. 17). The design is the same as that previously carried, but with the addition of a designation in the canton, which included the number of the regiment, though not the branch of the service, that being unnecessary, for there were then only the two regiments. You will notice that on both of these flags the stars were eight-pointed. In 1792 our army was again increased and divided into four sublegions, but the national colors then carried either have not been preserved or if preserved have not been identified.

OUR SECOND FLAG ACT.

Vermont was admitted to the Union in 1791 and Kentucky in 1792, and their members in Congress claimed that these States also should be represented on the flag. Accordingly Congress passed the following act, approved by President Washington January 13, 1794:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the first day of May, anno Domini one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, the flag of the United States be fifteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be fifteen stars, white in a blue field.

But still the army did not carry the Stars and Stripes.

NATIONAL COLORS OF THE WAR OF 1812.

By act of May 30, 1796, the sublegion feature in our army was abandoned, and, although I have no absolute proof to substantiate this view, I am strongly of the opinion that there was then adopted as national colors the general design carried by our army during the War of 1812, having a blue field with a simulation of the arms of the United States thereon. At the outbreak of this war quite a number of these flags were evidently made. Our seventeenth State was admitted in 1802. As a rule, the shield on the eagle's breast had seventeen white and red stripes and on the chief of the shield were the letters U. S.; above or around the eagle were seventeen stars, sometimes five-pointed, but more frequently six, and below the eagle was a scroll, pale blue if the stars were five-pointed, but red if they were six-pointed, carrying the number and name of the regiment (figs. 16, 18).

Singular as it may seem, the printed regulations of our War Department do not show what the army carried as national colors at this period; but fortunately a number of the flags that were so used have been preserved and are at present at the United States Quartermaster's Depot at Philadelphia, hanging in the chapel at the army post on Governor's Island, and at the United States Military Academy at West Point. Those which were captured by the British are at Chelsea Hospital, in London, and as trophies of war were carefully labeled. They constitute the mute evidence upon which what I have just said is largely based.

OUR THIRD FLAG ACT.

In 1816 the Hon. Peter H. Wendover, Congressman from New York, advocated a further modification in our flag to give representation to the States which had been admitted since the last flag act was adopted. Objection was made that there was no telling to what extent our nation would grow, and if an additional star and stripe were added for each new State the flag might become very awkward in shape and design. After two years of discussion, the suggestion of Capt. Samuel Chester Reid was adopted, that we return to the original thirteen stripes, with one star for each State in the Union. Accordingly Congress passed the following act, approved by President Monroe April 4, 1818:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the fourth day of July next the flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be twenty stars, white in a blue field.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted, That on the admission of every new State into the Union one star be added to the union of the flag, and that such addition shall take effect on the fourth day of July next succeeding such admission.

A portion of Captain Reid's suggestion was not adopted, namely, that the stars be arranged in horizontal rows for the navy, and to form one great star for the merchant marine. His failure to make a suggestion for an arrangement of the stars for the army is silent testimony in support of the statement that the army did not then carry the Stars and Stripes.

USE OF STARS AND STRIPES AS NATIONAL COLORS.

In fact, no branch of the army was given the right to carry the Stars and Stripes, according to published regulations of the War Department, until 1834, when for the first time the artillery was given that privilege. The infantry carried as national colors and the cavalry as national standard a blue flag having a simulation of the arms of the United States, varying somewhat from that carried during the War of 1812, in that a second scroll bearing the national motto, "E. pluribus unum," was placed in the beak of the eagle, both scrolls always having red fields. Above the eagle was one star for each State in the Union. These stars were generally, if not universally, six-pointed.

It was not until 1841 that the infantry was given the right to carry the Stars and Stripes as national colors, and what had previously been their national colors then became their regimental colors.

But the strangest of all is that not until 1887, twenty-two years after the close of our Civil War, was the cavalry given the right to carry the Stars and Stripes as the national standard, although in 1863 each battery of artillery and each company of cavalry was allowed to carry a small guidon consisting of the Stars and Stripes (fig. 12).

You will notice that in no one of the three acts adopting our national flag is there mention as to how these stars should be arranged or as to how many points they should have. Apparently all matters of detail were left to the rulings of the departments or the whims of the makers. In our first flag the stars were sometimes arranged in the quincunx order, in a circle, or with one star in the center and the remaining twelve either in the form of a circle or hollow square, or three horizontal rows of four, five, and four respectively, or indeed in the semé or irregular order. In New Orleans recently I saw two thirteen-star flags, each having one star in the center, one in each of the four corners of the union, and the remaining eight in the form of a circle.

In our second flag they were also arranged in several different orders, three horizontal rows of five each, or three vertical rows of five each, sometimes in the quincunx order, as was the flag that floated over Fort McHenry when Key was inspired to write "The Star Spangled Banner" (fig. 19); some of them had one star in the center and fourteen stars arranged in the form of a circle and occasionally arranged so as to form one great star.

The Third Kentucky Mounted Riflemen, under Col. Richard M. Johnson, at the battle of the Thames, on October 5, 1813, carried a guidon having four stars in the corners and the remaining nine stars in the form of a circle, with what appears to be the letter "I" in the center. This flag had only thirteen stars and thirteen stripes, but there is nothing to show whether or not it antedated the act of 1794. Probably they did then what we do today, continue the use of a flag, even though it may not have the full complement of stars. The original Johnson flag is in the rooms of the Kentucky State Historical Society at Frankfort.

The Navy Department has always made its own flags, and as early as 1818 the naval regulations as to design and proportions were explicit, and with the admission of each new State minute instructions were issued as to the design of our naval flags. The custom in our army, however, has been to let out the making of its flags by contract, and consequently there was always a lack of uniformity.

There were so many different designs in use in 1837 that the government of Holland asked its representative in this country to report just what our flag was. Similar requests were made by other countries, and in 1851 the commanding general of our army asked one of his aids, afterward Gen. Schuyler Hamilton, to investigate the matter and write a history of our flag. This was done, the work being published in 1852, and, so far as I know, it is the first careful study of the subject.

FLAGS WITH AN EAGLE IN THE UNION.

Apparently about 1841, when our infantry was first given the right to carry the Stars and Stripes, there was a desire on the part of some to preserve their old national colors in the union of the new flag.

One of these, planted by Gen. John C. Fremont in 1841-1842 on the Rocky Mountains, has the eagle, with a bunch of arrows in one claw and the Indian pipe of peace in the other, with thirteen stars above and a like number below. This is preserved in the Southwest Museum at Los Angeles, Cal.

During our Mexican War the Fourth Indiana Volunteers carried a flag having in the union an eagle standing on a segment of the globe, with a bundle of arrows in one claw, as though intending to conquer the earth. This has been preserved and is now in the historical section of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington.

Another flag that has just come to light, though in a badly dilapidated condition, is preserved by the Kentucky State Historical Society at Frankfort, Ky. It was carried by the Second Kentucky Volunteer Infantry during the Mexican War. The fragments show that this flag also had an eagle in the canton and that the stars were eight-pointed.

Another flag of somewhat similar design and supposed to have been carried by one of the regiments during our Civil War is preserved at the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.

It is probable that each of these flags with an eagle in the union was purely personal and not furnished by the War Department.

ODD ARRANGEMENT OF STARS.

On July 4, 1857, a resident of Jersey City was interested in observing the variations in design of the American flags then on display. He noted that though the stripes were generally red and white sometimes they were white and red, and that the stars on different flags were arranged in nine different methods. Quite a number of such flags that

EXECUTIVE ORDER OF OCTOBER 29, 1912.

In fact it was not until quite recently that the different departments of our National government appointed representatives to confer and see if they could not bring order out of chaos. As a result of their deliberations, on October 29, 1912, President Taft issued an Executive order defining minutely the proportions and other details of our flag, at the same time approving a custom which has existed in the navy, probably ever since it was instituted, of placing on their small boat flags only thirteen stars, instead of the full complement, in order to preserve their identity.

Some of the above startling facts were first published by Mr. Gherardi Davis in his excellent work entitled "The Colors of the United States Army, 1789-1912," but intended for private circulation only. These were confirmed by investigations which I have since made, and in doing that work other startling facts were brought to light. The thought then occurred to me that if in March, 1783, the flags which had been made as national colors for our Revolutionary army were in the hands of the keeper of military stores ready for distribution, but never distributed, they should be still in existence somewhere and probably in a bundle by themselves. I therefore took up the question with Compatriot Henry Breckinridge, Assistant Secretary of War, and asked him if he would not have a search made for them. On May 27, 1915, I received a letter from him, in which he says: "It appears from a report just received from the Acting Quartermaster General of the Army that there is no record in his office with respect to such flags," and inclosed me a copy of the report of Brig. Gen. Henry G. Sharp, Acting Quartermaster General. I am not satisfied with the result. Although I fear the flags are not now in existence, nevertheless I desire to continue that search, though with but faint hopes of ever succeeding in finding them, for unfortunately the archives of our National government are so widely scattered, badly housed, and inaccessible that they are of little service in an investigation of this character.

ADDRESS BY BRIG. GEN. CHARLES ALBERT WOODRUFF.

COMPATRIOTS: One hundred and seventy-five years ago a philosopher said: "Westward the course of empire takes its way."

Today, in this beautiful court, we say: "At our Golden Gate may it forever stay."

And this will be its western boundary, provided our people are animated by the liberty-loving principles that cheered our sires in their heroic struggle to establish and maintain a government based upon manhood, justice, and equality.

The founders of our government pledged their fortunes, their lives, and their sacred honor in its defense, and then relied upon their flintlocks, their bayonets, and the valor of good red blood, flowing from strongly, manly hearts, to win their independence.

They recognized the fact that they had thrown from off their shoulders the galling yoke of a government that never dealt tenderly with those who rebelled against its tyranny. In front of them was a thousand miles and more of seacoast ravaged by a relentless foe, behind them an unbroken wilderness infested by red men who knew no mercy for sex or age, and were urged on in their bloody work by equally savage white men, and they knew they must be victorious or surrender all that men hold dear, and, from Boston to Savannah, become food for buzzards themselves.

For seven long, trying years—years filled with disappointments, destitution, suffering, and hardships, endured with equal fortitude by the mothers, wives, and children—the Continental Army, encouraged and upheld by Washington's unyielding resolution, battled on until they won the final victory and this government of the people, by the people, and for the people was an accomplished fact.

While we are justly proud of our Revolutionary sires and their deeds, let us also rejoice that the millions who have found a refuge here from obnoxious conditions in the land of their birth found a country more in accord with their ideals; and, having become thoroughly Americanized in feeling, thought, and spirit, without any hyphenated attachment, unite with us in honoring the memory of those who created this government and gave them an equal part in its benefits, its glories, its advantages, and its duties.

They, with the Sons of the American Revolution and all other good citizens, honor those who preserved that which our forefathers founded; but unless we and they are impelled by a patriotic self-sacrificing spirit similar to that which animated and sustained the founders and preservers of our own United States, to meet to honor them is to proclaim our own dishonor.

If freedom, manhood, civil rights, justice, and honor were right and worth the fight to establish and maintain them in '76 and '61, they are equally right and worth fighting for now.

We all thank God reverently that we are at peace, while so many nations are engaged in war, yet we are all apprehensive that we may become involved in or as a result of this mighty contest.

We earnestly desire the amity of other nations and to live in harmony with them all, but we should never sacrifice our just rights, our honor, or our self-respect to avoid war.

Admitting this—and I can hardly imagine any manly American will deny it—then it follows, as day follows night, that we must be prepared to defend these; must keep alive in the minds of all the same spirit of American patriotism that sustained our forbears in their battles to give us the legacy they have—that spirit which makes good honest citizens in peace and loyal, heroic soldiers in war.

National desires, ambitions, trade and commerce have no souls nor consciences, and international policies, as every one has seen, makes strange bed-fellows, and national salvation demands that we be prepared, if necessary, to defend our rights against any combination that may be made to secure unjust advantages at our expense.

Our nation has tremendous potential strength for war, but without preparation that strength is useless.

A uniform does not make a soldier; it takes time to build battle-ships and submarines; armies cannot be created in a day, and the nation that neglects her preparation until actual hostilities are upon her will pay dearly in humiliation, treasure, and blood for such neglect.

I am not advocating militarism, as that term is generally used—far from it—but I am pleading for peace, honorable peace, and adequate preparation for defense is not militarism, but is national insurance against war, humiliation, insult, plunder, and, perhaps, extinction.

Our sires bequeathed this Republic to us; we are now responsible for its maintenance; to us future generations have a right to look for its perpetuation.

It is our solemn duty to pass it on unsullied. To do this it is necessary to do our duty, our full duty, even though the road be hard, and to teach our children to uphold our laws, our government, and national honor; and in sunshine and storm, in peace and in war, to “Stand by our flag, on land and ocean billow;

By it your fathers stood unmoved and true.
Living defended, dying, from their pillow,
With their last blessing, passed it on to you.

“Stand by the flag, all doubt and treason scorning;
Believe, with courage firm and faith sublime,
That it will float until the eternal morning
Pales in its glories all the lights of time.”

REMARKS BY CHANCELLOR L. JENKS, ON THE LARGER PATRIOTISM.

When the committee invited me to speak on this occasion they gave me the doubtful assurance that it didn't make any difference what I talked about. Well, they had a right to their opinion. They requested a subject, they said, for the use of the printer only. They said I might address myself to any subject I wished, regardless of the program.

However, they did say that brevity was the soul of wit, which struck me as original in conception and apt in phraseology, but wanting in relevancy. They further added “Tempus fugit,” you know; but as I don't know French, that got by me. Then the committee remarked: “Of course, Mr. Thruston and Mr. Woodworth will be the main speakers.” Whereupon I accepted the invitation with enthusiasm, content to be even the mandolin orchestra behind the evergreens at any function graced by their presence.

Still I wished the committee had given me some hint, however slight.

But now I understand them. They were Californians and knew what they were about. They had had experience. They knew from that experience that after the Californian Society had acted as our hosts for two days I would have no difficulty in finding my theme. All other topics would drop out of consideration to make respectful room for the all-engrossing one of wonder at and appreciation of Californian hospitality. It takes precedence of the Fair itself, or rather the Fair is the expression of California's hospitality and is her main exhibit.

I have found my subject all right.

On behalf of the delegates present, I take this opportunity to give utterance to a thought which is uppermost in our minds: Whatever joys may be ahead of us—and we all dream of increasing felicity with the flight of the golden years—we cannot hope to see Fortune smile upon us more lovingly than at the present moment, when we are the guests of the California Society in the Court of Abundance.

Speaking further on the subject assigned to me, the Larger Patriotism, I would that there could fall upon the troubled heart of mankind the benediction of Tennyson's immortal stanzas of inspired optimism. Standing on the mount of vision, his lips were touched by the spirit of prophecy.

"I doubt not thro' the ages,
One eternal purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are widened
With the process of the suns.

"Till the war-drums throb no longer,
And the battle flags are furled
In the parliament of man,
The Federation of the world."

At this dark hour of the world's history mankind is taking a mighty stride toward the dawn. Born of the clash of nations, there rises in the bewildered human consciousness a conception of a larger patriotism than the exclusive love of one's own country—a patriotism which knows no frontiers, but rests upon the interdependence of nations. Let no miasma of fear or pessimism cloud our vision of the truth. The dawn, so long foretold, has already begun to streak the eastern sky with bands of light. When that dawn brightens into day, the earth will enter into its inheritance of peace, based on the universal brotherhood of man and the all-embracing fatherhood of God.

SOCIAL FUNCTIONS CONNECTED WITH THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

ENTERTAINMENT AT SEATTLE.

About 40 delegates and ladies, including the President General, the Secretary General, Mr. Woodworth, President Hundley, Mr. Henry, Dr. Grindall, and others, arrived at Seattle on Friday evening, July 16. They were met by a committee of the Washington State Society, and after a brief automobile ride took up their quarters at the Hotel Washington. On Saturday morning the committee took the party on an auto ride through the parks and other suburbs of the city. At 1 o'clock luncheon was served at the Commercial Club, attended by more than a hundred members of the "Sons" and "Daughters," when welcoming addresses and responses were in order. The party was then given a sail about Puget Sound on a special steamboat.

ENTERTAINMENT AT PORTLAND.

On Sunday evening, July 18, special services were held in the First Presbyterian Church, delegates and others marching from the Portland Hotel under escort of the Spanish War Veterans, the Loyal Legion, and the Grand Army of the Republic. Rev. John H. Boyd, D. D., Chaplain of the Oregon Society, preached a patriotic sermon.

Individual entertainment was provided for lady guests at the noon hour on Monday. Monday evening there was a reception and garden party at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Rockey, on the banks of the Willamette, near Portland.

On Tuesday afternoon, following the adjournment of Congress, the delegates and ladies accompanying them were taken on an automobile ride about the city, stopping at the Waverly County Club about 4 o'clock for tea. At 7 o'clock Tuesday evening the delegates and visitors and ladies accompanying them were the guests of the Oregon Society at a banquet at the Hotel Portland, as related on previous pages.

Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock, the delegates, visitors, and ladies were accompanied on an automobile ride of about 40 miles over the wonderful Columbia River Boulevard to Bonneville, where the special steamer Undine was boarded and collation served thereon during the trip down the river to Portland, which was reached about 5 o'clock.

ENTERTAINMENT AT SAN FRANCISCO.

Upon the conclusion of the business session of the Annual Congress at Portland adjournment was taken to assemble in San Francisco for a banquet and patriotic meeting. About 60 delegates and visitors and many of the lady guests arrived in San Francisco Friday morning, July 23, and were the guests of the California Society until Monday evening. At 10 o'clock Friday morning the party was taken on an automobile ride through the city, including the Golden Gate Park and the Presidio, and from 12 to 2 o'clock luncheon was given at the Tea Room of the California Building. During the afternoon the party was divided into groups and escorted by members of the Guest Committee through the Exposition. In the evening an elaborate banquet, with a large attendance of members and guests, was given at the Palace Hotel (see addresses on preceding pages).

Saturday, July 24, was "Sons of American Revolution Day" at the Exposition, when a patriotic meeting was held in the Court of Abundance, as already noted. Following the meeting, the Daughters of the American Revolution entertained the party at a reception at their headquarters in the Grand Canyon Building, when Mrs. A. Howard Clark delivered a patriotic address, making special mention of what the Sons of the American Revolution have done for the "Daughters." On Monday, July 26, the Congressional party was given an automobile ride in the vicinity of Oakland and Berkeley.

On the following Thursday those of the party remaining in San Francisco were invited by Compatriot Col. Stephen M. Foote, U. S. A., of the Louisiana Society, to visit the Presidio and witness target practice at the Golden Gate fortifications with the great 14-inch guns.

ADDRESS BY MRS. A. HOWARD CLARK AT RECEPTION ON JULY 24.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have many, many reasons to be grateful for services rendered them by various members of the "Sons," especially in the early formative days of our Society before we were able to walk alone. In fact, we would not have been the large, powerful organization that we have become today had it not been for their excellent advice and assistance.

During two or three weeks previous to the final organization of the "Daughters," on October 11, 1890, Miss Mary Desha and Miss Eugenia Washington, two of the founders, frequently consulted Dr. G. Brown Goode and Mr. A. Howard Clark, Secretary and Registrar of the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, who assisted them materially in the planning and drafting of their constitution. It was Mr. Clark who arranged the plan for local chapters with national headquarters at Washington, a plan which has been, no doubt, the secret of our rapid growth and large membership. Previous to that time, as you know, the "Sons" admitted women to membership, but at a meeting held in Kentucky in 1800 their Congress decided that it would be a society of "Sons" of the American Revolution in the strict sense of the word. I am sure that if late President General Mr. Ballard Thruston had been there then there would have been one dissenting voice to this ungallant, though businesslike, arrangement, and I have always been surprised that it was in the State of Kentucky where this ruling was made.

At the first formal meeting in Washington, when eighteen of us met to complete our organization, one of their officers, Mr. W. O.

McDowell, presided, assisted by Dr. Goode, with Mr. Wilson L. Gill as Secretary. Mr. Gill generously assisted our organizing Vice-President as Secretary for several weeks after that date.

For some years after that we had an Advisory Board, chosen from members of the "Sons," who attended our board meetings, served on special committees, and were always ready to give us practical advice whenever called upon. It was Dr. G. Brown Goode who designed our badge, beautiful in its simplicity, having it patented and otherwise relieving us of all care in the matter.

In a few years, when our Society had a membership of several thousand, our Treasurer General found it extremely difficult to keep up individual accounts. She therefore consulted Mr. Clark, who arranged with the Treasurer General of your organization, Mr. Charles Waldo Haskins, of New York, who was then in Washington, as an expert accountant, revising the financial methods of the United States Government. Our Treasurer General, Mrs. Tulloch, met him at a conference at my house, when Mr. Haskins in a few hours simplified the system of book-keeping, putting it upon a Chapter basis and otherwise simplifying our methods to such an extent that our accounts are kept to this day under that method and all moneys are accounted for without the slightest complication.

Hon. Geo. H. Shields, an Assistant Attorney General of the United States, consented to be our Legal Adviser, attending our board meetings and carrying us through many a serious difficulty, for never did a society have more troublesome questions to contend with than did we.

 When life flows by like a song,
 But the man worth while is the man that can smile
 When everything goes dead wrong;
 For the test of the heart is trouble,
 And it always comes with the years."

So we struggled on, and, though I cannot say that we always smiled, we did, with their help, overcome many a serious difficulty. We have sometimes been called the "fighting Daughters," and, although we dislike that term, we would not have reached the prominence that we have attained today had we not inherited some of that spirit from our ancestors. It will be that same spirit that if the crisis comes to our beloved country the Daughters of the American Revolution will be the first among women to step to the front and offer their services in whatever capacity we women can best serve it. Some of us might not be able to do active service in such a case, but we can and will give up our loved ones to uphold its great principles and keep up its high standing among other nations. We will put the gun and the sword in their hands, and under the shadow of our beautiful Stars and Stripes we will bid them God-speed and return home and wait and suffer.

While attending the Congress at Portland a few days ago I was called to the telephone by a woman who called herself the Secretary of the American Peace League, who wished me, among other things, to attend an illustrated lecture of a play called "The Trojan Woman." This photoplay is presented, I understand, by this so-called Peace Society with the idea of depicting all the horrors of war from a woman's point of view in order to discourage the women of this country from doing their duty. It seems to me that this alone, only a small part of what the Peace League is doing, is a very serious condition. Should a crisis occur in the affairs of our nation, the women of our land, be they native or foreign born, would need all possible encouragement and sympathy. For it is her part of the burden to suffer in that way—to watch and wait—even as our cousins across the water are watching and waiting and suffering for their loved ones at the front. Let us hope that it will not come to us, but if it should I am sure that the 88,000 and more Daughters of the American Revolution—the direct descendants of those who founded this great free nation—will rise superior to the occasion in every way and do their duty by it. And let me say right here that the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution need to get to work right away to counteract this so-called Peace League Society. Are we to allow them with their insinuating voice to remain in control of our public schools and by their teaching make anæmic degenerates of the boys and girls of our country? Let us wake up. They are in our midst, working hard, while we, to whom the people of this land should look by right of our inheritance for protection, are doing nothing in that line!

But I am wandering in my enthusiasm from my subject. As our Society stands today, an immense amount of patriotic and charitable work has been accomplished all over the country. Our Continental Hall—that beautiful monument erected to commemorate the services of the men of the Revolution, costing more than $600,000—is the finest building in the world erected entirely by women. And right here must we again thank the advisory committee on architecture from your Society who were of so much assistance to us (Mr. Bernard R. Green, who built the beautiful Congressional Library; Gen. John M. Wilson, and others). The opening sessions of our Congress are now honored by the presence of the President of the United States, who speaks to us; by ambassadors and ministers from foreign republics, and others of the highest prominence, including your own President General. And I hope that the Daughters of the American Revolution will never forget that we owe much of our high standing to the ever-ready and kindly assistance, and I might say devotion, of our generous-hearted brothers—the Sons of the American Revolution.
